Find Carole Lombard Plane; 22 Dead

SHIP WRECKED ON MOUNTAIN; BODIES BURNED

15 Soldiers Among the Victims.

(Pictures on pages 2 and 3.)

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 17 (AP).—Bodies of 22 persons, including Film Actress Carole Lombard, were found scattered for hundreds of yards today on the snowy slopes of Table mountain, 35 miles southwest of here where a TWA passenger plane crashed last night, killing all aboard.

Searchers on horseback found the burned bodies and the wreckage of the Los Angeles-bound plane. It had plunged against the 8,500 foot mountain soon after taking off from here at 7:07 last night under clear skies.

Among the dead were Miss Lombard's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peters, and 15 officers and men of the air corps' Long Beach, Cal., ferrying command.

Clark Gable in Search.

Film Star Clark Gable, husband of Miss Lombard, flew here today from Hollywood. The distraught actor paced a hotel room for hours awaiting word from searchers and finally set off soon after noon with Sheriff M. E. Ward for the almost inaccessible crash scene.

Word that the bodies had been found, however, met Gable on his trip and he returned, heartbroken to his hotel.

Tells of Discovery.

G. C. Blaine, foreman at Boulder Dam and former cowboy, gave this account of his trip to the wreckage:

"I got within one-half mile of the wreckage with my horse. The snow was up to the animal's belly and she could go no farther. So I tied her to a tree and started climbing the red rock. It was straight up about 50 feet.

"It appeared that the plane had needed either 250 or 275 feet more altitude to clear the mountain. The nose had hit the precipice and had skidded around in a narrow ravine until the tail had also hit the cliff. The occupants were thrown out on the left side of the plane and were scattered for 150 feet.

Molten Aluminum on Rocks.

"Recognizable were the bodies of a lieutenant, a sergeant, an enlisted man, a TWA employé, and a woman. The plane had burned and molten aluminum had dropped over the rocks for 25 or 30 feet.

"Luggage and other equipment was strewn for 500 to 600 feet. The snow is about three feet deep on the north side of the mountain where the plane is located.

"It will be necessary to carry the bodies 1½ or 2 miles on sleds, or for the possemen to carry them until they can reach the point were they can leave horses. From there it will be about two miles to the place where the cars can be left.

Must Make a Path.

"The location of the wreckage is in the saddle of an almost precipitous mountain. Rescuers must zig-zag to make a path so that officials can walk up to the scene. It probably will take from daylight until noon tomorrow to beat a path and reach the bodies."

The 32 year old Miss Lombard formerly Carol Jane Peters of Fort Wayne, Ind., was returning to Holly-

A Washington Story About Eleven Billions

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP). — President Roosevelt is sending to congress a request for an $11,000,000,000 supplemental appropriation for the navy, the budget bureau disclosed today in an announcement calling attention to a lot of lucky sevens and elevens connected with the estimate.

The bureau issued this announcement:

"The navy is in for a tremendous run of good luck, according to the bureau of the budget, which reports that its naval and maritime section of the estimates division, sees 7's and 11's written all over the navy's future work.

A Recurrence of Figures.

"The section, which has seven on its staff, on Jan. 7 received supplemental naval estimates for 1942 and additions to 1943 estimates, in 11 letters. In only 11 working days, including the week-end, it was cleared by the President, for 7 billion dollars increase in the 1943 budget and a total estimate submission of 11 billion dollars.

"Yes, a checkback showed that the seven on the staff had averaged exactly 11 hours a day on the work, which was completed at 7 o'clock on Friday, the 11th day. It reached congress at 11 o'clock Saturday, the seventh day of the week, in the form of the President's estimates No. 11.

"Luck for the navy, the budget bureau section insists. It's a natural . . ."

Details of the appropriation request were not available.

Meanwhile Chairman Carl Vinson [D. Ga.] of the house naval committee said he would introduce legislation Monday to authorize construction of 1,799 small naval craft. He said that most of them would be auxiliary vessels, and declared that he had no estimate of the total cost.

CHURCHILL TELLS BERMUDA: ALL MUST DO DUTY

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 17. — Prime Minister Winston Churchill, during his visit to this British colony Thursday and Friday, appeared before the assembly to give point to his previous message to Bermudians that the British bases leased to the United States are "important pillars of a bridge connecting the two great English speaking democracies."

"Everybody has to do his duty to the cause—first to the British empire, but above that to the world cause," Churchill said. "I thought it right to ask you to make such alterations in your long established life as would facilitate the connection and unity of spirit, and the practical measures for common security between the British empire and the United States."

"It is not a question whether it is more profitable," he went on. "This is a question of duty, of world duty, and these islands have unfailingly and unfalteringly answered the call."

Members of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America disclosed yesterday that they pined for Sweet Adeline in a purely abstract manner.

Her name made a lovely refrain. But as for Adeline herself, they pined for her about as romantically as they would for an old fashioned hand painted shaving mug.

To be blunt, they wouldn't have permitted her to walk into a barber shop. And if Nellie of "Wait 'til the Sun Shines Nellie" came around tomorrow to join their society, they'd just tell her they were sorry, but there was such a long waiting list.

Real Feelings Revealed.

The true feelings of the gentlemen [bah!] who used to moon about blue eyed village queens loitering, as they put it, around old mill streams, came out at a meeting in the Morrison hotel. Twenty barber shop quartets were singing for the society's 24 national officers and directors when Steve Cady indicated that he had something to say.

Steve's a director for Los Angeles. He held up his hand, and cleared his throat, but the singers went right on, with "Just Because She Made Them Goo-Goo Eyes."

They ran out of breath, tho, after "My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon," and Steve got the floor.

While the members glowered, he told them about a movie actress whom he recently heard sing "Wait 'til the Sun Shines Nellie" in a picture

Sings Like Barber Shoppers.

"She sang it like a true barber shopper," he said reverently, "as no woman ever sang it before." And then, lyrically:

"Let's make her a member."

It took two hours to silence the protests.

Then President Carroll P. Adams called for order. He traced the society's history from its origin with half a dozen quartets to its present membership of 20,000, including seven governors. He spoke of the barber shop itself.

"It's more than a place to get a haircut and shave," he said.

"It's a club. A club for men, not women, drat 'em. Do we want her for a member?"

His answer came in song from a chorus of 20 quartets:

"No, No. A Thousand Times No."

LEWIS APPEALS FOR CIO-AFL PEACE PARLEY

Green Agrees; Rival Union Silent.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—World war tonight appeared to be bringing peace in America's bitterly fought four year war between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress for Industrial Organizations. John L. Lewis, the man who split the ranks of American labor by founding the CIO appealed for resumption of peace negotiations between the rival groups.

In identical letters to Philip Murray, his successor as CIO president, and William Green, AFL president, Lewis pleaded for ending the feud because this would be of public advantage in time of war.

Green promptly expressed his willingness to resume peace negotiations, recalling that in a statement of policy after the outbreak of the war AFL leaders had declared labor harmony would be a defense asset.

Await Murray's Action.

At CIO headquarters it was said that Murray will undoubtedly show an equal disposition to resume negotiations. However, no statement was immediately available from the CIO leader because he was reported out of the city.

In April, 1939, Lewis walked out of peace negotiations with the statement that he expected to be tied up for some time in the negotiation of a soft coal contract as head of the United Mine Workers of America. He told the AFL officials he would let them know when he could resume negotiations. The rival group thus waited nearly three years for the overture which came from Lewis tonight.

The 1939 negotiations were initiated by President Roosevelt. At his suggestion three CIO members and three AFL representatives met in Washington and New York over a period of months to find a basis for settling their differences.

Other Negotiators Listed.

The CIO representatives in addition to Lewis, were Murray and Sidney Hillman, head of the Garment Workers union, since named associate director of the Office of Production Management. AFL representatives were Harry C. Bates, head of the Bricklayers union; Daniel J. Tobin, head of the Teamsters union, and Matthew Woll, vice president of the federation.

AFL headquarters indicated the federation is prepared to proceed with the same negotiators. The CIO, it is believed, will name new representatives because Hillman and Lewis are not speaking and a negotiating committee would have to be appointed to settle the differences between these leaders before they could be seated on the same side of a conference table.

Of Equal Strength: Lewis.

"The numerical strength of organized labor in our country is divided substantially into two great houses," Lewis wrote. "The CIO and the AFL

CLERGYMEN ALLOWED TO BUY NEW TIRES FOR MAKING THEIR ROUNDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—The Office of Price Administration said today that tire rationing restrictions would be relaxed to permit ministers of all denominations to buy new tires and tubes.

"Clergymen in many communities, particularly where the population is scattered, are compelled to depend upon their cars to reach the bedside of the sick or dying, or to conduct services that are essential to the spiritual welfare of the public," Price Administrator Leon Henderson explained.

Trailers to Lose Wheels.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 17 (AP).—P. C. Beck, regional director of the Farm Security administration, said today rubber tires, wheels, and hub caps would be removed within the next two weeks from 900 government owned trailers housing defense workers on camp sites at Burlington, Ia.; Knox, Ind.; Wentzville, Mo., and Newton, Falls, O. The wheels will be returned to manufacturers and trailers blocked up.

A QUICK VIEW OF DAY'S NEWS FROM ALL WAR FRONTS

Another United States naval victory, right at the front door of Tokio this time, yesterday raised the total of war and merchant ships sunk by the United States navy and marines to 27. An American submarine raided Japanese waters off Tokio bay and sent three merchant ships to the bottom, the navy announced.

In the land fighting on Bataan peninsula Gen. MacArthur reported that the Japs had launched a heavy attack, supported by aircraft and artillery, on his right flank. Altho the assailants greatly outnumbered the American-Filipino forces, the American commander said his troops were stubbornly contesting the new advance. Tokio reported that MacArthur is in retreat toward the coast.

Japs Bombed in Malaya.

On the Malayan front a Japanese attempt to strengthen the foothold south of the Muar river, 90 miles from Singapore, was harried by RAF flyers who bombed and machine gunned barges, small ships, and troop concentrations. Pilots said they attacked a motor transport column two miles long on the road from Gemas to Tampin and left many fires among the 1,000 or more trucks. Australian air reënforcements are arriving at Singapore. Jap bombers killed or wounded 150 civilians in a raid on the city. Tokio claimed that its troops would be "knocking at the door of Singapore Island some time tomorrow." (Sunday.)

Threat of new complications for the allies came from Madrid, where a semiofficial Spanish report accused the "Free French" navy of seizing three Spanish merchant vessels in a raid on the island of Fernando Po, off the west coast of Africa. A demand for reparations was threatened and it was said a new attack on Spanish neutrality will be met with arms. In London "Free French" headquarters issued a categorical denial of the story.

Reds Drop Parachutists.

In Russia the Red army was reported dropping thousands of parachute troops behind the German lines at Mozhaisk while other Russian troops were smashing forward in an effort to cut off the 100,000 Nazis still holding the town, 57 miles west of Moscow. The strategy appeared to aim at wiping out the Germans completely by an attack from the rear instead of permitting them to retreat still further. The Moscow communique said the Reds had destroyed seven battalions of German infantry and brought down 36 planes in the last two days.

On the African front, 5,500 axis defenders of Halfaya Pass surrendered to the British, Poles, and "Free French" who have been battering them for several days, freeing large numbers of troops for operations on the front around El Agheila to the west.

The island of Malta again was raided by axis bombers. The British bombed German troops, trains, and ships on the island of Guernsey off the coast of France.

Only Four Colors Listed for Women's Spring Hose

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Only four colors were listed today for women's hosiery in the spring plan of the Textile Color Card association, compared with nine last year. Use of the colors is not mandatory, the association said. They were blushblond, a skin tone; sunnitan, a golden hue; amberspice, a burnt shade, and townmist, a neutral beige.

U.S. SUBMARINE CARRIES WAR TO JAPAN'S COAST

Yanks Fight Attack on Right Flank.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—The sinking of three more Japanese ships—this time close to Nipponese shore—was reported by the navy today, but from the big land battle in the Philippines came word that the enemy was smashing at the right flank of the American army.

A navy communique said a United States submarine sank three enemy merchant ships off Tokio Bay, on which is located the Nipponese capital and the great seaport city of Yokohama. The announcement of the three new sinkings ran the total score of Japanese vessels, combat and others, accounted for by the navy and marines since the start of the war to 27. In addition, army planes have accounted for eight others, including the battleship Haruna.

Today's was the third successive communique reporting navy successes. Yesterday the navy announced its submarines had sunk three Japanese transports and two cargo vessels and on Thursday it reported the sinking of a 17,000 ton liner.

Hart Takes Command.

"FAR EAST—A United States submarine has sunk three enemy merchant ships off Tokio bay.

"Adm. Thomas C. Hart has assumed control of all allied naval forces in far eastern waters.

"ATLANTIC AREA—Enemy submarine activities off the northeast coast of the United States continue. There are no further developments to report from other areas."

Only yesterday the navy reported a bag of three Japanese transports and two cargo vessels in the western Pacific area and the day before that told of sinking a fast, modern 17,000 ton liner.

Fight Jap Flank Attack.

The war department announced that a heavy Japanese attack was in progress against the right flank of American and Philippine troops in the Bataan peninsula in the Philippines.

Aircraft and artillery are supporting the assault, believed to be aimed at turning the flank of the outnumbered American-Filipino troops and preventing retreat to Corregidor fortress.

The communique said: "Heavy Japanese attack against the right flank of American and Philippine troops in the Bataan peninsula is now in progress. This attack is well supported by aircraft and artillery. The assailants greatly outnumber the defending troops. However, our soldiers are stubbornly contesting the attempted advance."

MacArthur Retreats, Says Tokio.

WITH JAPANESE FORCES ON BATAAN PENINSULA, Jan. 17.—[Official Japanese Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press].—Gen. MacArthur's forces, stubbornly holding out on Bataan peninsula, were in general retreat today toward the coast of Manila bay, presumably in hopes of finding shelter on Corregidor Island.

Since the Japanese began hurling additional landing reënforcements at them Jan. 15, the United States forces have been unable to stand the pressure.

Observation planes, the Japanese broadcast said, reported artillerymen abandoning battery positions and large columns joining a general retreat toward Manila bay and the west coast of Bataan peninsula.

POSTAL INCOME, EXPENSES SET ALL TIME PEAKS

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP).—Both postal revenues and expenditures reached all-time highs in the last fiscal year, which resulted in a deficit of $24,117,812, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker reported to congress today.

Revenues totaled $812,827,736 for the year ended last June 30, compared with the previous high of $766,948,626 in the preceding year. Expenditures amounted to $836,945,548, Walker said.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1942, Walker estimated revenues at $860,000,000 and expenditures at $878,000,000.

In the last fiscal year, Walker said, government agencies mailed free 1,123,563,721 pieces of mail on which the postage would have amounted to $49,020,190.

wood from Indianapolis where on Thursday she sponsored sales of defense bonds totaling $2,017,513. The trip was an assignment by Gable, chairman of an actors' committee handling personal appearances to boost bond sales.

Hollywood friends heard the return trip by plane resulted from the toss of a coin with Winkler, who wanted to come back by train and she by air. Their eastward journey was by train.

Maj. H. W. Anderson, executive officer at the air corps gunnery school here, said inquiry into the crash would be left to regular authorities and that there would be no army investigation.

Silent on Cause of Crash.

Mrs. Lois Hamilton, one of those killed, was en route to join her husband, Lieut. Linton D. Hamilton, aviator stationed on the west coast.

The air corps ferry pilots were en route back to their western base after delivery flights of new planes to eastern points.

The list of dead, besides Miss Lombard, her mother, and Mrs. Hamilton, included:

Affrime, Corp. Milton B., Philadelphia, Pa.

Belejchak, Sergt. Albert M., Braddock, Pa.

Tilghman, Staff Sergt. David, Snow Hill, Md.

Varsamine, Private Nicholas, Bronx, N. Y.

Williams, Capt. Wayne, 41, pilot, Los Angeles.

Winkler, Otto, Hollywood, MGM publicity representative.

Pilot Williams, according to TWA, had flown the same route for years.

First news of the tragedy came from Blue Diamond mine, where Supt. W. T. McMillan and various workers reported hearing the explosion and seeing a red glow.

Fire Seen on Mountain.

One miner said he drove stakes in the ground to point out the direction, to guide the searching parties.

Almost simultaneously, Western Air Lines Pilot Art Cheney radioed that he saw a fire on the mountain, which is about 40 miles southwest of here.

"It's a TWA plane and I can't find any signs of life," he reported.

It was several hours before TWA confirmed the fact that the liner was overdue.

FRIEND IS GONE; A HUSH FALLS ON HOLLYWOOD

Actors, Workers, Fans Express Grief.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 17 [Special].—News of Carole Lombard's death left Hollywood and her thousands of fans stunned today. She was the first motion picture notable to die in an air crash since Will Rogers and Wiley Post were killed in Alaska, Aug. 15, 1935.

Sorrow hushed the sound stages as her friends—studio magnates, actors, and laborers—joined the public in expressing genuine grief.

Morgenthau Mourns.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau sent this message to Will H. Hays, president, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America:

"We at the treasury feel we have lost a real friend and helper in Carole Lombard. She was on active service selling defense bonds. She was always glad to respond to any call the government made upon her and her spirit of service was an example and an inspiration to many others. Her loss must be an irreplacable one to your colleagues and to the profession which she honored."

William Powell, her former husband, with whom she appeared in pictures, said at his Palm Springs home: "I am so unbelievably shocked that I don't know what to say. My wife and I have been up all night waiting for reports. Our deepest sympathy to Clark Gable and Carole's two brothers."

Secretary Prostrated.

Her secretary, Madeleine Fields, known to Miss Lombard as "Fieldsie" for years, was reported prostrated with shock.

"The hand of every actor in Hollywood is extended in this moment to Clark Gable," said Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors' guild. "It is doubly tragic, as Miss Lombard was returning from an important patriotic duty." Arnold referred to the nation-wide campaign in which Miss Lombard had sold $2,107,513 worth of defense bonds.

Howard D. Mills, state administrator of the defense savings staff of the treasury department, said: "Miss Lombard, her mother and Mr. Winkler gave their lives for the safety of the United States as truly as the soldiers with whom they were traveling in the plane.

Other expressions:

GINGER ROGERS: "The world has lost a wonderful girl."

MARLENE DIETRICH: "What can one say in such a cruel moment? My feeling is one of the deepest and most terrible shock."

HAROLD LLOYD: "Like other great personalities in pictures who have passed on, she can never be replaced."

Will Never Forget Her.

LUPE VELEZ: "I can't believe it. I can only add my deep sorrow to all those who will never forget her."

GENE RAYMOND: "I cannot express how shocked I feel."

ANN SHERIDAN: "One of the greatest troupers, one of the finest souls I ever worked with."

ERROL FLYNN: "Carole Lombard's tragic death means that something of gaiety and of beauty have been taken from the world at a time they are needed most."

WALTER PIDGEON: "I am too shocked to express anything but the deepest grief."

CAROLE—A GIRL WHO WOULDN'T CEASE TRYING

BY MAE TINEE.

It doesn't seem possible . . . !

Two days ago Carole Lombard, on her way to Indianapolis to sell defense bonds, stopped at Tribune Tower to have her color photograph made. Marcia Winn and the rest of us were laughing later over the hilarious interlude in a busy day during which Carole was at her wildest and wittiest best . . . scarcely a moment passing without some fond, droll reference to "my old man" Clark Gable. [God be with him and comfort him . . .]

As she left Indianapolis after selling over $2,000,000 in defense bonds, she said: "When I'm thru here I'll be rerouted to who-knows-where."

Today—she is a memory. And mine the unexpected and terribly sad task of reviewing Carole Lombard's life—in flashback.

She Had "Something."

The "something" which put Carole Lombard in the front rank of screen players, didn't develop suddenly. Born Jane Alice Peters, she had a checkered and, often, discouraging career. But, you see, she HAD that "something." She couldn't say "can't" and she wouldn't quit, and so the day came when studios acknowledged that she possessed what it took, and the portals of popularity opened wide.

While very young she appeared in some plays in Los Angeles. She made her picture debut in Mack Sennett comedies in 1927. Her first featured part was in "Me, Ganster," a Fox picture. Because of her work in this movie, Pathe put her under contract and you saw her in "Power," "Ned McCobb's Daughter," etc.

Star of "Nothing Sacred."

She was in "Twentieth Century" with John Barrymore. And how you did laugh at and with her in "Nothing Sacred" with Frederic March, and love her in "Vigil in the Night" Her last picture was "They Knew What They Wanted"—with Charles Laughton and her last, not yet released—"To Be or Not to Be"—with Jack Benny, directed by Ernest Lubitsch, produced by Alexander Korda and presented by United Artists.

This film was completed just before Carole left Hollywood, and she and Clark Gable—"The Moose"—she called him, too—had planned to appear at its opening at the Music hall, in New York on Feb. 12.

Romance has not always been kind to Carole. Russ Columbo, to whom she was engaged, died. And her marriage to William Powell crashed on the rocks of incompatibility. But, from the start the Gables have had a grand time.

Loved the Outdoors.

Carole and Clark liked the same sort of thing which was minus nightclubbing and plus out of door living. They adored roughing it on their ranch. When "My Old Man" or "Pappy" or "The Moose" went fishing or hunting, "Ma" went right along. And how "Pa" did appreciate that.

Didn't want her out of his sight for long—but did give his permission for her to make the trip to Indianapolis. As he couldn't get away himself he sent with her Otto Winkler, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicity man and an old friend "to take care of her in my place." Otto did his best. Well—

It's not only on the battle fields that death is faced gayly and defiantly. I'm sure that Carole faced the Great Adventure just that way.

LOMBARD'S SMILE WORTH 2 MILLION TO INDIANAPOLIS

She Put City Over Top in Defense Bond Sale.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 17 [Special].—Approximately 3,000 persons who crowded into the statehouse here Thursday to buy defense bonds from Carole Lombard have autographed photographs of the film star as mementoes of her last full day of life, a day active as any in her activity packed career.

With her own hands Miss Lombard sold $2,000,000 worth of bonds, raking in bundles of currency with one hand and passing out photographs with the other during a tumultous two hour session behind a table in the lobby of the capitol.

Feel a Personal Loss.

Even without the tragedy which took place on her homeward flight, Indianapolis would not have forgotten Miss Lombard's visit for many a year. But when news of the film star's death reached the city, revealing that her visit here had been at the price of her life, the entire city was stunned with a sense of personal loss.

After other speeches by Will Hays, who was Indiana's liberty loan chairman in the first World war, and Gov. Henry F. Schricker, Miss Lombard took her place in the capitol lobby. Witnesses of the wild bond buying scene which followed were describing it today as one of the most inspiring and unusual events they had ever seen.

Men, women, and children struggled to reach the table and receive bonds from Miss Lombard's hands. They carried money in both hands, many of them holding it high in the air and waving it. The largest single purchase was $25,000, and many purchases of $15,000 and $10,000 were made.

Smile for All Comers.

Purchasers included individuals of all ages as well as civic organizations, labor unions, and social groups. High state functionaries helped Miss Lombard dispose of the money, trotting back and forth from her table to the state treasurer's vaults with baskets and boxes of it. To all comers Miss Lombard gave a smile, a cheery word of appreciation, and her picture.

Miss Lombard got no rest after the sale, it was recalled. She was whisked to the executive mansion, where 118 women, all defense bond workers, had tea with her, and in the evening she talked before a throng of 12,000 at the Cadle tabernacle.

Attachés at the Claypool hotel revealed that Clark Gable had wired there to have Miss Lombard's room filled with roses, and that Miss Lombard, upon seeing the roses, had commented that she and her husband always followed their custom of sending roses to the other when one was away from home.

Women recalled that Miss Lombard was dressed in black during the entire day. She wore a black broadtail coat and muff, and a sheer black woolen frock, black suede cutout sandals and a pill box hat with a black veil.

After a few hours sleep following her talk at the tabernacle, Miss Lombard and her party went to the municipal airport and boarded a TWA plane at 4:23 a. m. Friday.

British Claim 5,000,000 Tons of Axis Ships Sunk

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The British radio said tonight that more than 5,000,000 tons of German and Italian shipping have been sunk by the British navy and RAF off the west coast of Europe and in the Mediterranean since the war began.

BOY, 17, SLAIN AS HE AND PALS EXAMINE RIFLE

Edwin Charles Haluch, 17 years old, 715 North Paulina street, was fatally shot yesterday when a gun he and three companions had found was discharged accidentally. North avenue police said Joseph Marzec, 18, of 1752 Superior street, pulled the trigger.

The shooting occurred in the basement at 1234 North Bell avenue. Haluch, William Dobosz, 18, who lives at the Bell address, Marzec, and Stanley, 16, Marzec's brother, were examining the gun, a .22 rifle, when it was discharged. The bullet struck Haluch in the left shoulder and penetrated the lung.

The boys carried him to St. Mary's hospital, 1120 North Leavitt street, two blocks away, where he was pronounced dead. The boys told police they didn't know the gun was loaded. They found it in a scrap heap, they said.

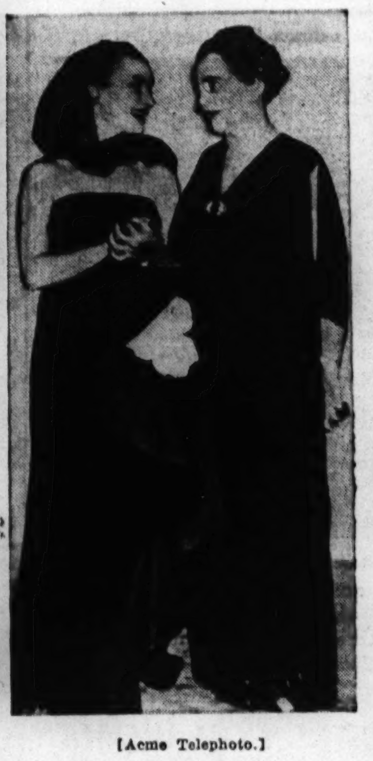
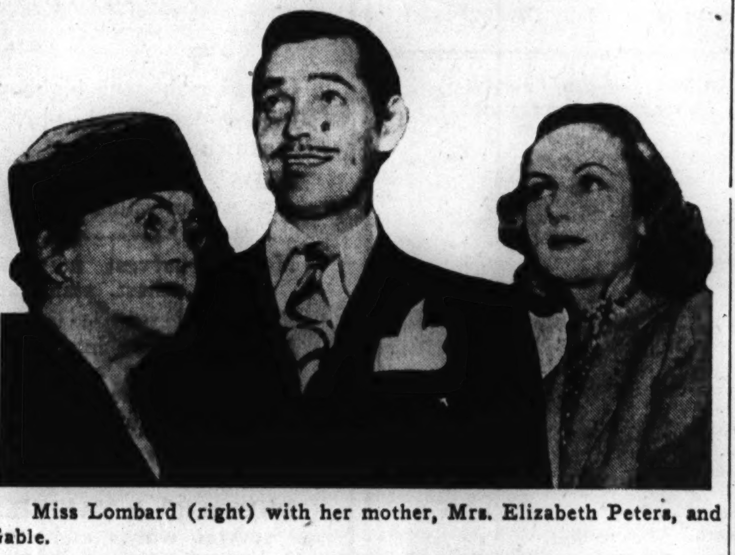
[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Carole Lombard, actress wife of Clark Gable. She and her mother were among the 22 persons who died in the crash of an air liner against Table mountain, near Las Vegas, Nev., Friday night.



[Acme Telephoto.]

Miss Lombard and her mother as they appeared Thursday in Indianapolis, Ind., where the actress was assisting defense bond sales. This is believed to be the last photograph made of Miss Lombard.



Miss Lombard (right) with her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Peters, and Gable.

A WHIRLWIND! IT WAS CAROLE ON CHICAGO VISIT

A Volcano of Activities Marked Brief Stay.

BY MARCIA WINN.

Carole Lombard was in Chicago only a few hours Wednesday, but every minute was a whirlwind of activity.

It began when she hopped off the City of Los Angeles with her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Peters; Otto Winkler, Gable's personal press agent, a plump, smiling little man; 14 pieces of luggage, and a broad, gaminish smile.

O, she was terrifically busy, she said between waves to the crowd, gay "hello's" and vivid comments on everything she saw. Defense bonds. You know, Hollywood's Victory board drive. Her husband, Clark Gable, whom she referred to variously as "my old man" or "the moose," was chairman.

Picture? Interview? Surely!

But Eddie Johnson, chief of the color studio of THE TRIBUNE, wished to take a picture of her. Could she come up? Of course she could wedge in the time. Speak over W-G-N? Of course. Interviews? Of course. Autographs? Of course.

Just come over to the hotel with her while she got out of her gray wool traveling dress and gray turban. How would this plain black wool do? And this tiny hat with a flourish of scarlet flowers at its prow?

"I have another I'll show you," she said, "but it makes me look like an Ubangi."

It did.

Tiny diamond clips at her ears, a long mink cape around her shoulders, and she was off again.

Comments Colorful As Her Hat.

"You ought to know," she retorted casually. "That's your business."

A Three Foot Scrawl.

In between comments she puffed dreamily on cigarets tipped with red at both ends, jumped to her feet to write her name, a three foot scrawl, "Carole Lombard Gable," high above the other names in the studio's celebrity dressing room.

"Those girls," she said, referring to the other names, "aren't going to have top billing on me."

Now she was at W-G-N, her words still frothing, her audience always in gales of laughter. "Well, well, look who's here!" It was Jess Kirkpatrick, W-G-N announcer, whom she hadn't seen since 1932 when he was drummer and vocalist with Earl Burtnett's orchestra in Los Angeles. "Never forgets a face," some one said. "How's Stuart?" [Stuart Peters, her brothers, who aspired to be a drummer.] "O, that guy's in the coast guard now. Isn't it terrific?"

Everything was terrific. Pacing back and forth, with the stalk of a proud leopard, waiting for her time on the air, she chatted about everything, particularly of defense and Hollywood's Victory board:

"Years ago I used to be afraid to make speeches, but when you've got bonds to sell, and the country the way it is, you go right ahead. Least you can do. . . . Well, it's terrific. This is the first unity Hollywood ever had. We're to have from 10 to 25 shows on the road at one time, all the money to go for bombers and things Morgenthau wanted. From now on it's sell a bond, sell a bond, sell a bond. You finish a picture and before you get off the lot, it's," waving a commanding finger, "'Pittsburgh by 4 o'clock!' and off you go again. It's terrific!"

"Hello, sweetie," to red-headed Donald Budge, passing thru the lobby. "O, Bobby, dear," to Bobby Riggs who trailed him. "The Mickey Rooney of the tennis court," in an aside. "A terrific lamb . . ." and to them, "I'll see you in Hollywood on a platform making speeches.

Off to War Rally.

"Yes, I'm going to Indianapolis for a war rally. I don't expect to take Indiana like Willkie did, but I'm a native, too. Fort Wayne. Left there when I was 6.

"Went straight to Hollywood then. When I was 15, they tried to make a heavy dramatic lead out of me. Was I terrific? From that I went to wild west pictures. . . .

"If they sing 'The Star-Spangled Banner' at Indianapolis, I'm lost. I'll have to let the crowd carry it. Once I took lessons in voice for six months. I was going to be Carmen, Aida, Mignon, everything. I'd go home and mi-mi-mi-mi every night. It was terrific! Well, then I sang, and they played it back. It was terrific! I said, 'Are you kidding me? Is that me? Get a double.' The rest of my singing lessons I gave away . . ."

That was Lombard!

New York, Jan. 17.—Joseph Szigeti, concert violinist, escaped death in the airliner crash near Las Vegas, Nev., because he left the plane at Albuquerque, N. M., to accommodate army officers. Herbert Barrett, his agent, said today. Szigeti had given a concert at Winfield, Kas., and was returning to his home at Palos Verdes, Cal.

Dead Hostess a Graduate of St. Luke's in Chicago

Mineral, Ill., Jan. 17 [Special].—Alice Getz, the hostess aboard the air liner in which Carole Lombard and 21 other persons were killed, lived here before she entered nurses' training in St. Luke's hospital, Chicago. She was graduated from the hospital in 1938 and entered TWA service in 1939.

8 SOLDIERS DIE AS ARMY BOMBER CRASHES IN WEST

Fort George Wright, Wash., Jan. 17 (AP).—Eight men, including three second lieutenants, were killed today in the crash of an army air force bombing plane 2½ miles north of the Pendleton, Ore., air base.

The 2d air force reported the dead were Second Lieut. A. J. Francisco, pilot; Second Lieut. R. C. Schows, co-pilot; Second Lieut. L. E. Grindle, navigator; Staff Sergt. A. D. Spiers, Sergt. D. Clark, Corp. V. A. Learman, Private G. T. Vrable, and Private L. Fagan. Home addresses of the men were not available.

Rescue crews from the Pendleton air base were at the scene. The announcement gave the time of the crash as 1:30 p. m. Chicago time.

3,500 TELEPHONE THE TRIBUNE FOR AIR CRASH NEWS

Thirty-five hundred persons called THE TRIBUNE'S telephone bulletin service yesterday for the latest news on the airplane crash in which Carole Lombard and 21 others lost their lives in the mountains of Nevada.

Miss Anne Garrow, manager of the newspaper's telephone department, reported that many of the calls came from the suburbs and more distant points. By calling the bulletin service number, Superior 0200, those interested in the news of the tragedy were able to keep in touch with the search for the plane.

The bulletin service is so extensive that one operator can supply information to callers on 30 trunk lines every 10 seconds.

WRITES NOTE, TAKES LIFE.

Ervin F. Novacek, 68 west Superior street, wrote a note to Ilene Wall yesterday, telling her he loved her very much, then placed his head on a gas stove, covered it with an overcoat and opened the valves. He was dead when found.

RAID ON SPANISH ISLAND BY 'FREE FRENCH' CHARGED

Three Axis Ships Seized, Says Madrid.

MADRID, Jan. 17 (AP).—A semiofficial Spanish report bitterly accused the "Free French" today of violating Spanish territory by seizing three axis merchantmen in a destroyer's stealthy raid on the little Spanish colonial Island of Fernando Po, off the west coast of Africa.

The accusation was made by Arriba, newspaper mouthpiece of the Falange, Spain's only political party, which acidly called the reported raid the act of a "freebooter," hinted that it already has provoked a diplomatic storm, and declared Spanish guns will reply to any repetition.

The newspaper did not tell when the raid occurred, what were the ships supposedly spirited out of the Fernando Po harbor of Santa Isabel, nor to what nation they belonged.

Towed Out of Port.

Arriba said a "Free French" destroyer slipped into the Santa Isabel harbor while the three vessels' officers were ashore, dropped depth bombs to shatter their anchor chains, "seized them and towed them out of port."

It assailed the reported raid as a "cowardly outrage," declared all crew members apparently were slain, and that "each and every one of Spain's inflexible rights will be demanded in this case."

Use of Arms Threatened.

Arriba heatedly argued that merchantmen of warring nations are privileged to use the ports of nonbelligerents, and that nonbelligerents are entitled to use all means to protect refugee ships.

"If such an attack cannot be avoided," the newspaper added, "then the nonbelligerent state has the right to demand reparations from the aggressor. A new attack on Spanish nonbelligerency will be met with the fire of Spanish arms in defense of Spain's undeniable obligations."

Spain, it said, now puts an end to "courteous tolerance of meddling" and "pledges herself solemnly before the world to prevent a repetition of similar aggressions without punishment."

The Spanish government may already have protested in London, Arriba asserting that an attempt had been made to justify the attack on grounds that it was made by a De Gaullist warship. It declared the excuse was unacceptable because "every state is responsible for the action of its mercenary troops."

"Free French" Make Denial.

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—"Free French" headquarters declared tonight that news from German sources of a coup by a "Free French" destroyer in Santa Isabel is without foundation.

"'Free French' naval authorities are in a position to make a categorical denial."

BRITISH DID IT—BERLIN.

A German broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said the 7,872 ton Italian steamer Duchessa d'Aosta and two German freighters owned in Hamburg were seized by a British, not "Free French," destroyer at midnight Wednesday.

Altho drawn from the Arriba report, the German broadcast called the raid a British violation of Spanish neutrality, contending "there is no excuse in the fact that the attacking British destroyer was manned with De Gaullists."

There was no confirmation of these German-Spanish reports from other quarters. In Berne there was an intimation that an "Anglo-Saxon invasion" of Fernando Po, mentioned as a rumor in Berlin dispatches, might become a political issue.

Islands Are Strategic.

Fernando Po is one of a chain of strategic Spanish possessions below the hump of west Africa which are interposed across the allied line of air communications and supply. These include Rio Muni, a little square of territory set into the coast of Free France's equatorial Africa, the offshore islands of Annobon, Little Elobey, Great Elobey, and Corisco and the island of Fernando Po.

Fernando Po, itself only 45 miles long and 5 to 15 miles wide, is thrust sharply into the angle formed by the east-west gold coast and the north-south coast of De Gaullist French equatorial Africa. It is only about 60 miles from Douala, one of the principal ports of French equatorial Africa, and it is only about 30 miles from the southern coast of the former German colony of the Cameroons, now divided between French and British administration.

Its port, Santa Isabel, of about 8,000 population is the administrative capital. The island is mountainous, one peak rising to more than 9,000 feet in the limited area. Deep timber, cocoa, cotton, coffee, and yams afford a livelihood for its 20,000 population, mostly Negroes, know as Bubis.

Spaniards Protest Ship Seizures

GERMAN SHIPS AT GUERNSEY ISLAND BOMBED BY RAF

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—The RAF, striking off the beaten path of its raids on German-held territory, today bombed German ships in harbor at St. Peter, on the channel island of Guernsey, and machine gunned German troops, gun emplacements and a freight train. Guernsey, British territory, was occupied by the Germans in the conquest of France. It lies about 30 miles off the coast of Normandy.

The ministry of home security issued this communique tonight:

Shortly before dark today an enemy aircraft dropped bombs near the coast in East Anglia, causing neither casualties nor damage. Yesterday afternoon an enemy bomber was shot down into the sea off the northern coast of England by anti-aircraft gunfire.

Minesweeper Hit, Says Berlin.

NAVY FIREMAN FROM CHICAGO DIES IN ACTION

Aloysius W. Prymula, 19 years old, a fireman aboard a warship in the Pacific, has been killed in action, the navy department notified his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Prymula, of 4551 North Melvina avenue, yesterday. No details as to how Prymula met his death were given. Prymula enlisted in the navy in October, 1940. His most recent letter, posted in Honolulu, Dec. 31, was received last week.

CALL FOR WOMEN SCIENTISTS MADE BY NAVY YARD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—A call was issued today for women scientists, engineers, and mechanics to work in the Washington navy yard.

"The supply of men available for such positions is rapidly becoming exhausted," the navy said in issuing the call.

The number of women who might be employed has not been determined, a navy spokesman said, but added "some will be put to work immediately while others are to be placed on a list for call."

COL. M'CORMICK TELLS CHANGES IN MILITARY ART

Waging War from Fortified Depots One of Them.

The present strategy of waging war from a number of fortified depots indicates that the military art has completed another circle, Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, said last night in his weekly address during the Chicago Theater of the Air program over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

This development, he asserted, has made obsolete the former practice of attempting to maintain a solid front.

From these fortified depots, the best of which he asserted were large cities constructed of masonry, Col. McCormick said that the mechanized forces emerge to cut up and surround the enemy forces.

Russian Cities Hold Out.

Leningrad and Sevastopol, he pointed out, were admirable examples of the fortified depot. The Germans have been unable to capture either of these large Russian cities.

Col. McCormick also emphasized the urgency of remembering the lessons taught by past wars. Failure to do this after the first World war cost the Allies dearly in this one, he said.

TEXT OF ADDRESS

The text of his address follows:

"Napoleon was right when he said:

"'Read and reread the campaigns of Alexander, Hannibal, Gustavus, and Frederick; model yourself upon them; this is the only way to become a great captain and to discover the secrets of the art of war.'

"This was true when he said it, because the speed of armies had been fixed at the speed of men and horses from the beginning of warfare, and even battle tactics had not been greatly changed by the introduction of black gunpowder.

"The axiom remained largely true thru the Japanese-Russian war of 1905. After that, however, the internal combustion engine made possible a number of machines which were to revolutionize the entire art of war, altho army officers of the entire world were entirely oblivious to this fact.

Sensational Invention.

"They could not avoid some knowledge of the most sensational invention in history—the airplane—and, having accepted it, could not prevent its operators from trying to develop it.

"On the day before the declaration of war in 1914, both France and Germany dropped bombs on each other. Airmen soon adopted machine guns to fight each other and attack ground troops. They landed and picked up spies in enemy territory; in fact, the airmen developed about all the military uses of airplanes in the first year of the war, against the bitter opposition of the ground soldiers, who, of course, held all the important posts in all armies.

"In September, 1914, Gen. Gallienni invented blitzkrieg by sending the garrison of Paris in taxicabs and buses 40 miles to attack Von Kluck's flank at the Ourcq river.

"Gen. Von Kluck was completely surprised. He knew, of course, about the garrison in Paris, but did not perceive that this garrison could be moved 40 miles in two hours instead of two days. When this happened, he was compelled to rupture his front to confront the attack. Allied troops entered the gap in the line, causing the German defeat at the Marne.

"Gallienni's stroke of genius was hailed by all war correspondents, but was resented and derided by the professional soldiers, who refused to give it credit or adopt its principle.

"In February of 1916 the German army cut the railroads into Verdun, leaving it, according to all military textbooks, without a line of supplies, and doomed to evacuation or surrender.

Improvises Supply Line.

"Aroused by this second emergency, a French officer, Capt. Doumenc, improvised a motor truck supply line along a highroad, free from enemy fire, and saved Verdun. But this innovation was not accepted; trucks were returned to their former use of supplementing the railroads and the horse drawn vehicles.

"As far back as 1900 Benjamin Holt invented the Caterpillar tread. Holt tractors found service over much of the world, and came to the attention of all armies, but none paid any attention to them until, after the stabilization of the front in France, men in minor positions succeeded in having a few tanks manufactured.

"I happened to be at the British headquarters on the day of the battle of Cambrai, when they [tanks] were first used in numbers. Their success was so immediate—the surprise of the enemy so complete—that, if they had been supported, they would have brought off a tremendous—perhaps a decisive—victory. But Gen. Haig did not understand them, did not support them, and lost the battle.

New Principles Repudiated.

"By the end of the war all modern equipment—automatic guns, airplanes, tanks, and all forms of motor transportation had been introduced and their properties demonstrated. But after the war ended, the staffs of all the successful armies repudiated all of these principles and went back to the outmoded ideas of 1914. A few years ago, here in Chicago, one of our own high ranking officers said that the field service regulations of 1917 were still applicable!

"Only the defeated generals, living for the next war and revenge, studied the new weapons and developed the new tactics.

"The principle of bombing enemy airplanes on the ground and in the hangars was remembered by them but forgotten by the victors. To secure this advantage they made such attacks without declaration of war, and they were everywhere successful, as in Poland, Holland, Belgium, France, and two years later, in Hawaii and the Philippines. So little do men learn from the catastrophes of others.

Defense Against Surprise.

"There is a defense against surprise attack, but it was not adopted by the air forces that were destroyed. This defense is the old, well known principle of dispersion. We learned in France, while on the defensive, that guns emplaced according to the regulations were destroyed, so we distributed them so widely and irregularly that the enemy could not fire on them effectively.

"When airplanes are carelessly left in hangars or close together on a landing field, they are set up for destruction, but if the airplanes are sufficiently spread out, a bomb missing one airplane cannot hurt another, and the expenditure of expensive airplanes and bombs, even in surprise attacks, will not bring commensurate results.

"If the planes are not so dispersed when on the ground, they will be surprised at some stage of the war, even if not at the outset. Airplanes are so fast and radio communication is so simple that airplanes dispersed on the ground can readily be assembled in the air.

Ground Troops Will Attack.

"If not won by surprise, control of the air must be fought for, and unless an impassable obstacle intervenes, it will be fought for on the ground as well as in the air.

"Ground troops will attack to obtain possession of enemy air fields and production facilities. Bombers will attack them. Fighters will attack bombers, and fighters will fight fighters.

"Ground troops will be advanced in airplanes in the form of parachute troops, and air infantry landed either in gliders, which may be crashed and not used again until repaired, or by transport planes on landing fields which have been captured by parachute troops.

"In the former war, it was almost impossible to break thru the opposing line, but today a sufficient concentration of artillery with dive bombers, tanks, and mechanized infantry can always break thru. Therefore, instead of trying to maintain a solid front, war is made from a number of fortified depots and supported by airplanes coming from their own dispersed bases far to the rear or from underground hangars. From the bases the mechanized forces sally forth to break up the enemy formations and surround them.

Cities Built of Masonry.

"As I pointed out nearly 30 years ago, the best bases are cities built of masonry. Obviously the larger the cities, the more defensible. The Germans have been unable to take Leningrad and Sevastopol. They took Kiev and Odessa by surprise and, I imagine, will not give them up without a bitter struggle.

"As such bases may expect to be savagely attacked, an additional premium is furnished to attack before the declaration of war, so that enemy—not friendly towns—become the battlefields.

"The art of war has completed another circle and the taking and holding of cities has again become a vital element of warfare."

Versatile Theater of Air Does Grand Job with Grand Opera

W-G-N's Chicago Theater of the Air, which Saturday after Saturday has been piping the exhilarating tunes and the gay quips of light opera into thousands of homes thruout North America, last night made one of its rare excursions into the field of grand opera and presented a 50 minute condensation of one of the three or four most popular works of its kind, Gounod's old, but always youthful, "Faust."

The opera had been tightened up and most of its more leisurely sequences stricken out. Its engaging melodies, however, had been retained, and they served to take the curse off the gruesome story of infernal pacts, unholy love, gross betrayal, and death.

Intelligible to Every One.

It was done in English, of course, and a large studio audience and the infinitely larger audience reached by W-G-N and the Mutual network had the pleasure of hearing such famous things as the "Jewel Song" and "All Hail Thou Dwelling" in a language intelligible to every one.

The production was fast, surefooted, and absorbing. It was under the general direction of Joseph T. Ainley, with Henry Weber conducting. Marion Claire sang Marguerite; Frederick Jagel, Faust; Bruce Foote, Valentine, and Win Stracke, Mephistopheles.

Dramatic Artists.

Following an old Chicago Theater of the Air custom, a speaking cast supplemented the singing cast. Altho seemingly a complicated business, the net result of this was an increased smoothness and vividness. Among the dramatic artists Betty Lou Gerson played Marguerite, Bret Morrison, Faust, Carl Weber, Valentine, and Marvin Mueller, Mephistopheles.

Old-Time Printers Mark Franklin's 236th Birthday

Faithful practitioners of the printer's art last night dined and danced in honor of the patron saint of American printing, Benjamin Franklin, whose 236th birthday it was. The Old Time Printers' association thus signalized the event for the 57th year. More than 300 guests took part in the celebration, held in the Grand ballroom of the LaSalle hotel. Among the speakers was Douglas McMurtrie, typographer. Thomas S. Quin was toastmaster.

BY FOSTER HAILEY.

[Copyright: 1942: By the New York Times.]

AT SEA WITH PACIFIC FLEET, Jan. 16 [Delayed].—That Tokio report of the sinking of one of our aircraft carriers is what the navy calls "bum dope." The writer out to know. He is aboard her today.

The night she was supposed to have been sunk officers and correspondents were sitting in the wardroom doing night coffee patrol when a marine orderly handed the executive officer a message. "Listen to this," he said. Then he read the message describing the Japanese claim. There were amused chuckles.

"Maybe they heard the dishes falling in the pantry when we were rolling last night," some one suggested. The ship's newspaper solemnly carried the Tokio claim of the sinking.

RAF STRIKES BIG BLOWS AT JAPS ABOVE SINGAPORE

SINGAPORE, Jan. 17 (AP).—Relays of British fighters and bombers, which have been longing for a chance to catch the Japanese at a disadvantage, have found their opportunity and wrought havoc among troops, freight cars, and truck convoys along the Gemas-Tampin line, 110 to 120 miles north of Singapore Island, an official statement said tonight.

As this vigorous air attack was proceeding inland, other airmen struck at concentrations of barges and small ships along the west coast where a picked Japanese spearhead was attempting to enlarge its foothold among the mangrove swamps south of the Muar river, within 90 miles of Singapore.

Strafe Line of 1,000 Trucks.

"While our bombers were plastering the railway marshalling yards at Gemas, fighters were machine gunning a long serpentine line of transport vehicles from a low altitude" on the Gemas-Tampin road," the statement said.

The pilots said they left many fires among the 1,000 or more trucks.

Bombers unloaded scores of large caliber bombs on the railway yards and convoys at Gemas, scoring hits and starting more than 50 fires, the pilots said.

Imperial British field guns likewise thundered at the advance Japanese forces in Gemas.

Mow Down Japs in Boats.

Swarms of British fighters dived on clusters of enemy launches and barges in the mouth of the Muar, littering the dank waters with wreckage and bodies.

The fighters came back with bombers to blast and strafe those mechanized enemy forces which managed to reach the south bank of the stream to form a bridgehead there.

Bomb Two Masted Ship.

One two masted vessel off the port of Malacca was peppered with bombs and another heavily gunned. Severe damage also was dealt to massed small craft, presumably tenders, off the coast and transport vehicles carrying men and supplies inland from Malacca to Tanjong, 10 miles west, were shot up by fighting planes.

Japanese bombers which struck again at Singapore Friday succeeded in dropping a few bombs in the naval dockyards area. Damage was light.

This attack was followed by a 70 plane assault in which at least 150 civilians were killed or wounded.

Australia Rushes Air Aid.

CANBERRA, Australia, Jan. 17 (AP).—Air reënforcements are arriving in the Malayan battle zone, it was authoritatively disclosed today. One source said the Australian government had taken a strong stand in the matter of increasing aerial support of the Singapore defense line on which Australians now have gone into action in the Gemas sector.

"Japs 50 Miles from Goal."—Tokio

TOKIO, Jan. 17 [Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press]. — A Domei war summary claimed tonight that Japanese tanks had driven thru Australian defense lines to within 50 miles of Singapore. It predicted the invaders would be "knocking at the gates of Singapore Island sometime tomorrow."

The news agency's dispatches said the city of Malacca, capital of the Malacca settlement, was "completely occupied" by the Japanese last night. From there, Domei reported, the Japanese drove on down the west coast to the Batu Pahat sector.

In a parallel drive from Gemas, northeast of Malacca, Domei claimed an Australian defense force was broken with a loss of 500 men.

Reporting on operations in the east coast state of Pahang, Domei said Japanese troops had turned inland, up the Pahang river, and fought their way into the Temerloh area deep in the jungle interior.

200 Cretans Executed for Killing Germans, Report

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Kuibyshev radio broacast an Ankara report today that 200 male citizens of the conquered Greek island of Crete had been executed for the slaying of an undisclosed number of German soldiers.

PHILIPPINE RADIO CALLS HINT NEW JAP PENETRATION

Resumption of Service Adds to Mystery.

Washington, D. C. Jan. 17 (AP).—Reëstablishment of direct trans-Pacific civilian communication with the Philippines failed today to clear up official uncertainty as to the situation in island areas not known to be unoccupied by the Japanese.

While Gen. Douglas MacArthur's little army fights on the main island of Luzon, replies to urgent messages have shed virtually no light, officials reported, on the course of events elsewhere in the Philippines.

One inquiry as to whether Americans were safe in Cebu, the Philippines' second city, brought a belated and cryptic reply that aroused suspicions that it might have been dispatched under duress. The city is on the island of Cebu.

Fear Widespread Jap Control.

One responsible official said he feared the Japanese or their agents might be in control there as well as on Luzon and the two other points where the enemy is known to have made landings in force.

A continuous radio link was established a week ago between San Francisco and Cebu, supplementing the messages exchanged daily over crowded military communication facilities between Gen. MacArthur's headquarters and Washington.

Then yesterday the Western Union Telegraph company announced that messages could be transmitted and received between the United States and the islands of Bohol, Leyte, Cebu, Panay, Samar, and Mindanao, except occupied Davao. Presumably an inter-island telegraph and radio network of the commonwealth government's bureau of posts was utilized.

Radio Traffic Is Heavy.

Officials of Radio Corporation of America, which operates the trans-Pacific link, said the new communications channel was in operation, altho under difficulties. It was called on to handle a heavy volume of traffic. Several hundred inquiries have piled up at the interior department's Philippine office alone since the mass invasion of Luzon started nearly four weeks ago.

On the basis of Gen. MacArthur's reports, more than half the Philippines are free of invasion, and therefore remain possible centers of resistance, even tho the main fighting forces were massed on Luzon.

Southern Points Bombed.

Cebu, Iloilo, and other southern Philippine points have undergone air raids, but aside from Luzon, landings are known to have been made only at Davao, now a base for attacking the Netherlands Indies, and at Jolo, colorful home of Moro tribesmen.

Both Davao and Jolo are in the extreme south and all islands between these points and Luzon presumably remain under the American and Philippine flag.

Gen. MacArthur is believed to be in touch with local commanders, by radio. He has reported to the war department the attacks on Davao and Jolo and other events elsewhere.

[Copyright: 1942: By the New York Times.]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Jan. 17.—New Zealanders, jolted from their feeling of security in Singapore by the raising of the London blanket on news from the Malayan front, today studied the situation which they have been placed in by the threat to the key naval base.

The press calls attention to the remarkable and disturbing change of position that has been enforced by the grim facts of a month's conflict. Until a week ago the assumption was that the disturbing Japanese advance would soon be stopped and that in any event Singapore would resist an assault. It is not possible today to feel that that assumption was well based.

The American discussion about Australia's value as an operations base has forced a reconsideration of the situation. The Auckland Star says that American observers have clearly written off Singapore as a naval base and are not completely confident that it can be held as a fortress.

Britain and Ethiopia Soon to Sign Economic Treaty

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—A treaty between Britain and Ethiopia, recognizing the full sovereignty of Emperor Haile Selassie and assuring him aid in placing his country on a sound economic basis, will be signed soon in Addis Ababa, informed quarters said today. The treaty is expected to include military clauses to cover exigencies during the current war, the sources said.

IT'S A NIGHTLY BLACKOUT ON THE FLEET IN PACIFIC

Ships Hunt Japs Without Pinpoint of Light.

BY TOM YARBROUGH.

WITH THE UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET, Jan. 17 (AP).—It is sunset, and the ship's loudspeaker broadcasts the order "darken ship, darken ship." The voice is mindful of a police broadcaster "calling all cars, calling all cars," with a bad case of adenoids and a cold.

The tropical night falls quickly. Not a pinpoint of light is showing as our heavy cruiser and its companion warships plunge ahead on a gigantic patrol job somewhere in mid-Pacific.

There isn't any cocktail hour, for Uncle Sam's navy is still bone dry; but out here at sea where watches are hard and stakes are high, there is less howling about the lack of a drink than there is in Honolulu, which went dry under martial law after the Japanese attack of Dec. 7.

It is war by night, the same as by day. In the distance can be seen the fuzzy silhouettes of the great ships that are with us. A false turn anywhere would mean disaster.

Sight No Jap Ships.

This deadly force has patrolled hundreds of thousands of square miles the past few days, almost entirely without incident. A few enemy submarines were reported sighted, but what happened to them remains for the navy to say.

Most of the shooting has been target practice. No major Japanese force has appeared in these waters since Dec. 7.

Gunners' itchy trigger-fingers make it tough on whales, whose big shadows often resemble submarines. As one officer cautioned his men: "When you see a whale with a conning tower and a gun, it's no longer a whale."

This afternoon our guns gave a demonstration of the kind of fire an enemy ship would have to face. The blast of the first salvo caught me off guard as I turned aside to get some cotton for my ears. It nearly took me off my feet.

Bang Away at Targets.

The target was on a raft towed by a destroyer. Thru our binoculars we could see geysers shoot into the air on all sides of the target as our turret gun salvos struck home. The gunnery officer kept shouting into his telephone "good shooting, good shooting."

One antiaircraft gun fired a shell that left a compact burst of dense smoke hanging in the sky, to represent an enemy plane. Streams of machinegun fire guided by tracer bullets were poured straight into the center of the smoke. Again the gunnery officer cried out: "good shooting."

While planes based upon our aircraft carrier patrol far away areas, pontoon-equipped planes which have been catapulted from our ship keep watch over inner sectors. Catapulting looks dangerous at first, but after it comes off day after day without a hitch, it looks simple.

Still, it always is fascinating to see pilots of these catapulted planes brace themselves to be literally shot across the water.

CLAIMS BRITAIN'S WEAK LEADERS IMPERIL EMPIRE

"We're Going Smash," M. P. Says.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Asserting that the British people are watching the British empire breaking up before their eyes without any guarantee that the worst is not yet to come, while the men responsible for this state of affairs still remain in power, Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite member of parliament, at Droylesden, Manchester, charged today the government had been caught napping in every theater of the war.

Recalling that many months ago a cabinet minister had declared Britain never should allow her men to fight without adequate equipment, Shinwell asked:

"Can this be said of Malaya or Hongkong? Can we say, after 5 months of preparation, that even in Libya our forces had the striking power to enable them to win as rapidly as we were led to believe they had?"

Calls for Shakeup.

It is time, Shinwell said, that all the facts were exposed, that the British people should be told what the position is, and that those responsible should be "cleared out of office and not promoted to positions where they can do more damage."

Shinwell singled out Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair for a particularly violent attack on the inadequacy of the defense of British air fields.

"It is only in the third year of the war and after 20 months of the present government," he charged, "that we are given assurances as to the defense of our airdromes. What has Sinclair to say about this?"

Questions Need of New Unit.

Asking if the air minister conceived the idea of defending Britain's air fields against attack, Shinwell went on:

"And, if he did, why is it necessary to create a new force for that purpose? Is it fair to the people of this country that such men should retain office?"

Despite all this, he said, critics are expected to stifle their criticism and support the "blah blah" which saves some government spokesmen when they are short of sound arguments and substantial performances.

ENSIGN COMMENDED FOR OCEAN RESCUE OF ANOTHER OFFICER

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP).—Action of Ensign John J. McMullen of Jersey City, N. J., in rescuing another officer after a fighter plane crashed at sea won commendations from Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox today.

The navy reported McMullen dived overboard from a destroyer and swam under water to rescue Ensign James P. Bates Jr., who had been hurled into a choppy sea after his plane crashed Oct. 31, 1941.

Their present assignments and the location of the crash were not disclosed by the navy.

16 JAP PLANES BOMB AMBOINA BASE OF DUTCH

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, Jan. 17(AP).—Apparently held at a high altitude by the island's anti-aircraft defenses, two waves of Japanese bombers, each containing eight planes, struck another glancing blow today at harbor installations on the strategic naval and air base on Amboina, in the Moluccas. The Indies high command said damage was "very slight." The raid was the third on Amboina in as many days. One civilian was killed in strafing attacks by Japanese planes on two unspecified places near Amboina.

The high command, silent as to the progress being made against Japanese forces which landed on Celebes and Tarakan last week-end, also reported an assault by eight bombers, with an escort of three fighters, on a Celebes airdrome.

Soldiers Guard Sugar Mills in Cuba Against Sabotage

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 17.—Detachments of soldiers today were dispatched to reinforce the rural guard posts at each sugar mill on the island as the crop grinding season approached. The troops will guard against sabotage at the mills and in the cane fields.

CHICAGO WOMAN AMONG POSSIBLE VICTIMS OF JAPS

Only one Chicagoan was a possible victim of the Japanese massacre of an undisclosed number of American missionaries on the island of Hainan, off the south coast of China, according to an official communique issued by the Chinese government Friday night. She is Miss Margaret Moninger, a Presbyterian missionary.

It was not certain that Miss Moninger was on the island at the time of the slayings, according to her Chicago relatives and her church board.

A brother here, John Moninger, said Margaret had written him some time ago that she was taking a furlough beginning in November and was going to Canton.

RIO CONFERENCE NEARS CONCORD ON AXIS BREAK

Seek to Bring Argentina to Agreement.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Jan. 17 (AP).—Brazilian Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha said tonight that the conference of American foreign ministers was "near agreement" on accepting the proposal for serverance of relations with the axis.

A proposal to this effect offered by Mexico, Colombia, and Venezuela has been opposed by Argentina.

Aranha, who is chairman of the conference, said he was surprised the proposal had been published.

"I hope to have a statement Monday," he said. "I am not sure we will succeed by Monday, but we hope to put it thru."

[Acting President Ramon S. Castillo of Argentina told the Associated Press in Buenos Aires last night that Argentina was prepared to impose rigid restrictions upon axis national and diplomatic representatives. He said his government was ready to subscribe to "any agreement to safeguard the common interests in America."]

Chile's Attitude in Doubt.

Many private talks outside the conference rooms were directed toward swinging Argentina to approving severance of diplomatic relations. Earlier, Chile appeared veering toward Argentina's previous stand against a complete break.

Chile's delegation declined to throw any light on the subject and the Santiago régime's attitude is not expected to be clarified until debate starts Monday on the resolution.

The resolution calling for a unanimous break with the axis declared Japanese, German, and Italian aggression against the United States was part and parcel of their "concerted plans for world conquest."

Attack One, Attack All.

The resolution, made public today, proposed further that western hemisphere nations consult with one another before reëstablishing relations with the aggressors. It was presented by Colombian Delegate Gabriel Turbay on behalf of Colombia, Mexico, and Venezuela.

Invoking the declaration of Havana that any attack by a non-American nation upon an American republic be considered an act of aggression against all other American states, the resolution suggested four plans of action:

1. That the American republics consider these acts as "an immediate threat to the liberty and independence of the western hemisphere."

Will Consult Each Other.

2. That they "reaffirm their complete solidarity and their determination to coöperate closely for their mutual protection until the present threat has completely disappeared."

3. That "none of them will be able to continue maintaining relations, political, commercial, or financial, with the governments of Germany, Italy, and Japan, and declare that in the full exercise of their sovereign rights will form individual or collective measures corresponding to the defense of the new world."

4. That the American republics "before resuming their political, economic, and financial relations with the aggressor powers will consult among themselves in order that their decision may have a collective and united character."

The text of the all-embracing resolution was announced as conference delegations discussed at informal meetings how far the other American nations would go in war aid to the United States.

18 Police Guard Welles.

A settlement was expected in the ancient boundary dispute between Ecuador and Peru. Altho the Ecuadorian delegation was insisting it is coöperating 100 per cent, there were reports it would not participate in the conference unless the border controversy is settled.

With so many American dignitaries in the city, 2,000 special policement kept a close watch on axis commercial establishments, but there has not been an untoward incident.

Sumner Welles, United States undersecretary of state, has been assigned a bodyguard of 18 policemen. Chilean Foreign Minister Juan Rossetti has six, Brazilian Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha five personal guards, plus 15 secret police at Itamaraty palace, his official residence. Delegates from other countries have a guard of four each.

JAPS SEEK VITAL STRAITS PLIED BY TREASURE SHIPS

[Copyright: 1942: By the New York Times.]

SINGAPORE, Jan. 17—Control of the Indonesian straits, vital passages thru which ships have carried the treasure of the western Pacific islands for centuries, is the apparent major aim of the recent Japanese attacks in the southwest Pacific.

Capture of the island of Tarakan, off the northern coast of Dutch Borneo, with its oil harbor and air base, gives the Japanese a position from which traffic thru Macassar strait can be menaced, while establishment of a foothold on Minahassa, a peninsula of the island of Celebes, sets up a similar menace for shipping thru Molucca passage.

Thru their acquisition of air bases on the west coast of Malaya the Japanese attained a position to menace Malacca strait, while from Sarawak and as a result of naval activity in the South China sea, the northeastern approach to Singapore is brought within the sphere of Japanese striking power.

The allies still control Sunda strait, between Java, Sumatra, and Bali, and the Lombok and Alas straits, thru which shipping from the south normally reaches eastern Java. Observers believe Japan will strike at Java next.

IT'S HOT IN RIO, SO DELEGATES GO TO NIGHT CLUBS

Evacuate City for Cool Mountain Resorts.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Jan. 17.—The importance of war problems in the Rio de Janeiro conference was relegated to second place today as the delegates focused their attention on dodging the intense heat over the week-end. The chief topic of conversation was the weather and where relief could be found over Sunday.

There are several attractive small summer resorts back in the mountains, within easy driving distance of Rio. A general diplomatic evacuation to these places took place.

All delegates were taken on a special tour of the marine arsenal this morning. The minister of marine gave a special luncheon.

At 1 o'clock instructions were issued to all contemplating leaving the city to arrange for gasoline requirements before 7 p. m. No gas is sold in Rio from 7 p. m. Saturday until 7 a. m. Monday. In addition, the delegates were reminded of the additional credentials required by the police under regulations issued by the foreign office for persons leaving the city.

In a Rio Night Club.

The week-end really got under way last night when the director general of propaganda gave a dinner at the Urca night club for delegates and visiting newspaper men. The party broke up at 3:30 o'clock this morning.

There is never a dull moment in a Rio night club. Two orchestras provide continual music and the floor show is varied and good. In the adjoining casino roulette wheels and other gambling games are as thick as the dancers on the ballroom floor. The gambling was strictly business and not on the house, however.

The United States representatives received the most attention from the performers and the entertainers. As part of the show, a large picture of President Roosevelt and President Getulio Vargas of Brazil was unfurled on the stage. Both received ovations.

Among the statesmen attending the conference Mexico is playing an unexpected leading rôle. Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla is already one of the most outstanding personalities of the conference. Elected yesterday as chairman of the economic committee, Mr. Padilla told The Tribune correspondent that his task will consist of the coördination of all the questions and matters related to the problem of finding an immediate solution to the economic position of each American country.

Padilla holds that economics is the true basis of American trade intercourse as a source of work, industry, and agriculture. Wars are won not in the trenches but in production and transportation, he said.

Will Exploit Rubber Jungle.

The expected solution of Peru and Ecuador's border dispute will give more latitude to the settlement of the economic problems. Among the latter group to be considered at the conference will be the question of Brazilian rubber. The federal government is ready to turn the unexplored Amazon jungle territory into a healthy living section and eliminate all the endemic diseases which are responsible for the little progress and development so far reached in the north.

The American delegation appears to be keenly interested in this Brazilian project. Every effort is to be made to increase the production of wild rubber and raise exports, which during the rubber boom of 1904-'10 attained 40,000 tons, but never have been better than 20,000 tons in the last decade. There is a project to bring Brazil's rubber production up to 80,000 or 100,000 tons per year and thus meet the major percentage of the United States' needs of the commodity.

JAPS BOMB RAF BASE, BUDDHIST PRIESTS IN BURMA

RANGOON, Burma, Jan. 17 (AP).—Two waves of Japanese bombers raided Moulmein today, scoring direct hits on two Buddhist monasteries, while in land fighting in the invaded narrow neck of Burma, bordering Thailand, the British declared their position was "developing favorably" in the Myitta sector.

Moulmein, across the gulf of Marataban from Rangoon, is the site of an RAF base. An intense barrage was hurled against the bombers, and at least one craft was believed destroyed. A few civilian casualties were reported but the military forces escaped injury.

About 250 Japanese troops had infiltrated into the Myitta sector, 15 miles from the Thai border and near the center of the thin Burma panhandle. The British first announced skirmishes with these invaders last Friday.

DROP RED CHUTE ARMY IN REAR OF TRAPPED NAZIS

Seek to Destroy 100,000 in Mozhaisk Salient.

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—Striking hard at both the rear and the flanks of imperilled Germans before Moscow, the Russians were reported dropping clouds of parachute troops behind the Mozhaisk wedge to the west tonight as Red forces surged forward almost to Rzevh in a new and smashing gain northwest of the capital.

The parachutists were declared to have virtually cut off the Nazi forces —perhaps 100,000 men—holding Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow. German lines on both sides of this salient have been bent far back, exposing this last remaining advance position which has held out against the soviet onslaught.

Air Operation on Big Scale.

One London source said the parachute operation might prove to be the most extensive use of such troops the war has yet seen. The air troops were believed landing in such force that, aided by organized guerrilla bands already operating there, they might attack the Nazi rear as well as cut communications.

Observers said the soviet tactics indicated a determination to wipe out the whole salient rather than attempt to push its defenders back.

Loss of such a force, it was said, would be a hard blow to Adolf Hitler's hopes of falling back in sufficient strength to halt the Russians at a "winter line" farther west.

There were indications that the salient had started cracking under the hard Russian pressure and that some withdrawals were under way when the Red army sent its parachute troops into action.

Seize Two Regional Centers.

Northwest of Moscow the Russians announced their forces have smashed German counterattacks and recaptured Latashino in an advance that carried almost to Rzhev, German strong point on the north shore of the Volga. Latashino is some 130 miles northwest of Moscow on the high road to Rzhev.

Shakhovskaya, another regional center on the Moscow front, was declared also liberated along the numerous other populated centers.

To the south, heavy fighting was reported continuing around Kursk, Kharkov, and Taganrog with the Russians driving hard to win back the important industrial districts of the Donetz basin.

Tonight's Moscow communique claimed the Reds destroyed seven battalions of Nazi infantry and brought down 36 planes in the last two days, including seven near Moscow today. The Russians admitted losing nine.

Finns Claim Gains.

HELSINGFORS, Jan. 17 (AP).—Finland's war communique today reported infantry fighting on the Leningrad front where Finnish shells were said to have smashed a number of enemy positions.

[An official German broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said two Siberian battalions of the Red army had been annihilated within three hours on the eastern Karelian front after attacking Finnish positions.]

Nazis Claim Crimea Gains.

BERLIN, Jan. 17 [Official broadcast recorded by Associated Press].—The German high command today said German and Rumanian troops repulsed repeated enemy thrusts on the Sevastopol front in the Crimea with heavy casualties to the enemy. On the western coast of Crimea German coastal batteries forced an enemy warship to turn back, it was said.

"On the central and northern sectors of the eastern front German troops strongly supported by the air force yesterday again inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy in heavy defensive fighting," the communique said.

PRIVATE NURSING MAY BE ANOTHER WAR CASUALTY

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP).—The office of defense health said today that patients may have to do without private nurses if soldiers and sailors need them.

Alma C. Haupt, executive secretary of a defense health subcommittee on nursing, said in a statement to a house committee studying methods for maintaining the nation's civilian health that all forms of "luxury nursing" may have to be curtailed soon for the duration of the war.

In the last war, 24,354 nurses were in service with the army and navy. Present service requirements have become a military secret since this country's entry into the war, Miss Haupt informed the committee that the American Red Cross had enrolled a first reserve of 25,700 nurses—those under 40, unmarried and physically fit—to meet army and navy requirements. She added that the number would have to be increased to more than 50,000.

5 YEAR DEFENSE PLAN LIGHTENS SWEDEN'S FEARS

Air, Sea, Land Arms to Get 340 Millions.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan. 17.—The rapidly changing methods of warfare and Sweden's vulnerable position on the Baltic sea have led the Swedish government to recommend to parliament a new armament program designed to strengthen enormously this country's position in northern Europe.

Details of a five year defense plan which appeared in the Swedish press today received a nation-wide welcome. Altho preparedness is going to cost Sweden almost $340,000,000, the plan has brought a feeling of relief.

The bitterly contested war in Russia is expected to decide whether the Baltic sea will become a frontier, with the Russians again holding naval bases in the former Baltic states, or whether the east coast of the Baltic will be controled by Germany.

Lulled by False Security.

During the short resistance of the Baltic countries, which acted as a buffer against the Slavs, Sweden enjoyed a feeling of security which led her to neglect her armaments. A widespread sympathy exists here for the aspirations of Lithunia, Latvia, and Estonia to regain their independence.

After studying recent military campaigns and reports from their military observers abroad, the Swedish general staff has made numerous recommendations. One of them is that the country be divided into several defense zones, each capable of independent operation.

For the army, they would construct new, secret military posts, double the size of the air force, organize an anti-aircraft defense unit separate from all other artillery branches, form new mechanized units, and greatly increase the mobility of nonmotorized troops thru the use of bicycles.

New Naval Strength Urged.

For the navy they suggest the construction of two new cruisers, a numbed of modern destroyers especially armed against air attack, and carrying four or five inch guns; a large number of small, fast motor torpedo boats of the type that have been found to be exceptionally efficient in the British, German, and Finnish navies, and some new naval bases.

Incidentally, Stockholm's naval base, now located near the center of the city and within a mile of the royal castle, is going to be moved to Gustavsvik, a small fishing village north of the capital.

AXIS BOMBERS RAID MALTA 6 TIMES IN ONE NIGHT; TAKE NO LIVES

VALLETTA, Malta, Jan. 17 (AP).—The British command issued this communique today:

"Friday night: Alerts sounded for a number of enemy aircraft which dropped bombs causing slight civilian damage but no casualties. Our fighters intercepted and hit an enemy bomber which escaped in the clouds. Anti-aircraft artillery, together with our fighters, turned back the enemy. Six alerts sounded during the night.

"Thus far three alerts have sounded today for a number of aircraft which approached, dropping bombs and causing slight damage to civilian property but no casualties."

MOTHER, 26, DIES UNAWARE OF HER CAESAREAN BABY

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Kasper Peter Mellang, 26 years old, died of burns today without knowing she had given Caesarean birth to a son a few hours after her husband had carried her from their blazing home in White Center, a suburb. She also was unaware that her husband, 38, and their son, James Henry, 2½, had died of burns. Hospital attendants said the new born infant had a good chance to survive.

VON REICHENAU, GERMAN FIELD MARSHAL, DEAD

Nazi Broadcast Blames Attack of Apoplexy.

Field Marshal Gen. Walter von Reichenau.

BERLIN, Jan. 17 [Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press].—Field Marshal Gen. Walter von Reichenau, who since June 22 had commanded a German army on the southern wing of the sweep into the Ukraine, has fallen to a fatal stroke of apoplexy while returning from the eastern front, said an announcement today.

Adolf Hitler named Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering to represent him as Fuehrer at a state funeral for the 57 year old Von Reichenau, it was announced. Field Marshal Karl von Rundstedt, will represent the Fuehrer in his capacity as supreme commander at the services.

[The death of Von Reichenau will involve a further reorganization of the German high command, which rumors say has been under way since the removal on Dec. 19 of the commander in chief, Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch and the personal ascendancy of Adolf Hitler as supreme commander.]

From Family of Generals.

From an old family of German generals, Von Reichenau was one of the most famous commanders in the present war.

Appointed commander in chief of army group 4 in 1938, he led the Germans into Czecho-Slovakia and occupied Prague in 1939. He marched into Poland from Silesia, on the right wing of the German advance, in September of that year.

Led Army Into Belgium.

He was the commander of the 6th army which advanced into Belgium and France in May, 1940, winning his greatest fame in that campaign with his direction of operations against encircled Belgians, British, and French at Dunkirk.

For these services, he was awarded the knights cross of the iron cross after the Polish campaign, and was promoted to field marshal after the French campaign.

Knox Statement Worries Netherlands Indies Press

BATAVIA, N. E. I., Jan. 17 [ANETA].—The Netherlands Indies press today expressed concern over the statement of United States Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that he considered Germany the principal enemy, but voiced confidence that the United States would not abandon its positions in the Pacific.

British Knock Out Last Axis Pocket Behind Libyan Lines

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 17.—A force of 5,500 Germans and Italians surrendered at Halfaya ["Hellfire"] pass today, thus giving up the last axis stronghold east of Agedabia.

South Africans and "Free French" of the division whose presence in Libya was recently revealed spearheaded the final onslaught. Seventy-six allied war prisoners were rescued. The rest had been removed to Europe before the garrison surrendered.

If the Halfaya garrison, on the Libyan-Egyptian border, intended to "do a Tobruk," they made a sad failure. They held only 60 days until they were starved out. When the British campaign began on Nov. 18 Halfaya had the benefit of the harbor at Sollum, Egypt, but the British air force made the harbor useless. It apparently accomplished what axis bombers had been unable to do at Tobruk—made it impossible for axis ships to bring in supplies.

Capture Ends Long Detour.

Halfaya's surrender will save the British several thousand truck miles daily. Halfaya is a pass where the road winds up from the sea thru a long line of cliffs known as the escarpment. While the enemy held that pass, every British truck or car going to Libya or returning had to make a 100 mile detour into the desert to the south. Added to the mileage of every British convoy, this burned up a lot of gasoline that could have been used elsewhere.

The signficance of Halfaya's surrender, however, is greater than the mere saving in mileage. Halfaya represented a defiant gesture of the same sort that made the axis waste so many lives, shells, and bombs in its vain effort to take Tobruk. It failed, but as long as Halfaya held out it could say it was doing as well as the famous Tobruk garrison. It did not.

Halfaya could have been taken long ago. Every enemy point in eastern Cirenaica except Halfaya, Sollum, and Bardia fell early in the campaign. The British wanted to conserve lives and materials. Unless the enemy made a successful counterattack, those points could not last. The enemy did not attack and these islands of resistance were forced to surrender.

Only Main Battle Area Left.

Now only the main battle area remains. It is now about 350 miles west of Halfaya, around El Agheila. There the British are pushing the enemy back thru rugged country which is thickly sown with enemy land mines.

Bad weather made operations difficult today and curtailed the heavy blows the royal air force has been raining on the axis. However, attacks on the main road between El Agheila and Sirte and a raid in which fires were started in Tripoli were reported.

The El Agheila region is a marsh and interspersed with small hills, which make it difficult for mechanized vehicles but favor defensive artillery. There is only a narrow area along the coast where passage is feasible and that is well studded with mines.

Mines Unable to Halt Advance.

It is not a nice idea to run over a mine or step on it. Not long ago I heard an ear splitting detonation when one of the trucks behind us hit a mine as we were creeping thru a minefield in the darkness, led by a man on foot. Thereafter the drivers took care to keep right behind the guide.

Mines are highly effective in slowing an advance, but never can prevent it. They help the defenders only because they prevent any sudden rush.

The enemy in Libya is fighting a purely defensive fight now. British armored cars, tanks, and infantry are following as fast as they can clear the way and the air force is pounding the enemy relentlessly every day.

No official indication has been given whether the British intend to push on to Tripoli, but it is certain that the enemy still has not found means to launch a counterattack. He is distinctly on the receiving end of this battle.

Italians Admit Difficulties.

ROME, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Italian high command admitted today that the axis garrison isolated in the Sollum-Halfaya Pass region in north Africa was facing growing supply difficulties, but said it still was offering fierce resistance to its British besiegers. Air attacks on the rear of the British forces in the Agedabia region were reported.

Germans Tell of Air Attacks.

BERLIN, Jan. 17 (AP).—The German high command today reported "lively attacks and violent artillery fire on the German and Italian positions in the Sollum area in North Africa. German bombers were reported to have successfully attacked British tank and motorized columns and airdromes in Cirenaica and on the Egyptian coast.

CHURCHILL VISIT TO FLORIDA TOLD BY WHITE HOUSE

Roosevelt Also Out of the Capital, Says Early.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—The White House disclosed today that Winston Churchill, British prime minister, made a secret vacation trip to Florida while he was in the United States conferring with President Roosevelt on the war program. He was there about a week.

At the same time it was acknowledged that Mr. Roosevelt was absent from the capital for several days around the same time. The trips were disclosed by Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, in an announcement commenting upon Churchill's safe return to England.

An Open Secret.

The President's absence from the capital was an open secret, but newspapers and radio stations were unable to mention it, nor were reporters allowed to accompany Mr. Roosevelt. They were barred at the President's specific order.

In today's announcement of Mr. Roosevelt's trip Early said the President's destination, the length of his stay, and the identity of his companions remained secret. It was disclosed, however, the President did not accompany Churchill to Florida.

Reporters have been trying for almost a week to induce the White House to lift the ban on the President's movements. Secrecy thrown around this trip was regarded as an indication similar censorship will prevail in all future movements of the President.

Early Expresses Thanks.

Early said the President was delighted—perfectly delighted—that Churchill had got home. At the President's request, Early expressed official appreciation to the press as a whole, the press associations, the radio, and other information sources for the coöperation they gave in maintaining the secrecy of the prime minister's movements.

"The results speak for themselves," Early declared. "The prime minister is safely home and the subs are still off the coast."

Early said Churchill's movements and the arrangements for his return to his homeland were kept so secret that even Mr. Roosevelt had no idea when his guest left Washington or where he was going. He said the President did not even know whether the prime minister was returning by boat, plane, or submarine.

Word of Churchill's arrival in England was transmitted to the White House by trans-Atlantic telephone by John Winant, United States ambassador to Great Britain. Early assembled reporters in his office soon thereafter and said he was permitted to disclose certain of the prime minister's movements during his American visit.

Tells Time of Arrival.

He said Churchill arrived at the White House at 6:57 p. m., Dec. 22, Early said. He said the prime minister's first visit with the President at the White House was "a policy clarification between the two and in consultation with representatives of the united nations."

As soon as the two reached an agreement on matters of policy, Churchill left for Ottawa, Ont., where he addressed the Canadian parliament Dec. 30, arriving back at the White House on Jan. 1.

Early said that during the prime minister's absence in Canada the joint British-American military and naval staffs studied details of policy for presentation to Churchill upon his return.

Early said it was after his return from Canada that Churchill went to Florida, where he remained about a week. His destination in Florida was not made known.

Churchill Returns to England

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Big cigar clenched in his teeth, Winston Churchill, the British prime minister, is met by his wife upon his return to London after epochal visit to the United States. A cheering throng greeted him at Paddington station upon his arrival yesterday.

CHURCHILL HOME; FAR EAST LOSSES BEGIN TO PINCH

Weak Aids Expected to Be Dropped.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Amidst a scene of uproarious enthusiasm mixed with confusion Prime Minister Winston Churchill returned to London today from his visit to the United States and Canada. He had arrived in Plymouth earlier in the day from Bermuda in a Boeing flying boat, having covered 3,287 miles in 18 hours. On his flight he was accompanied by Minister of Supply Lord Beaverbrook, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, and Sir Charles Wilson, president of the royal college of physicians.

Immediately after his arrival at Paddington station, the prime minister went to No. 10 Downing street to face new problems and announce fresh triumphs. Besides reporting to parliament the success of his American trip, he will be confronted by severe criticism of the reverses in the western Pacific, the pinch of which the British people already are beginning to feel, not only in rubber and tin losses, but also in food.

The premier's departure from Plymouth for London was delayed 20 minutes, it was disclosed, owing to the temporary loss of a large black satchel which later was found.

Stampede at Station.

Some confusion marked the meeting of the prime minister and his wife and cabinet ministers at the Paddington station. Those responsible for the arrangements misjudged the spot where the carriage would stop and the reception party waited too high up on the platform. An immediate stampede followed, inwhich Mrs. Churchill and members of the war cabinet were almost swept off their feet.

As the train stopped, Mrs. Churchill stepped briskly aboard and the crowd cheered as she and her husband kissed and kissed again. Then, after the customary greetings to the cabinet and other officials, the prime minister and his wife moved to their waitin gcar.

Must Implement Decision.

Among the important tasks which await the prime minister as he resumes his duties, the following stand out:

1. To implement the far reaching decisions made at the Washington, D. C., conferences,

2. To meet the hail of criticism, not only in this country, but thruout the whole empire, over the deficiencies in the defense of northern Malaya, and

3. To effect cabinet changes to cope with the new munition and supply situation and to deal with weak links in the government which have been the subject of so much caustic criticism, both in the press and among the public.

Hint New Job for Beaverbrook.

It has been suggested that Lord Beaverbrook may be given the opportunity to use his organizing ability as liaison production minister between Britain and America, thus leaving the ministry of supply vacant. Sir Andrew Duncan, president of the board of trade, is reported to be his likely successor.

It also has been hinted that a number of minor ministers who have been criticized all around will be removed.

Parliament Critics Ready.

It is felt generally, at any rate, that the debate in the house of commons when it next reassembles will be torrid, since the members of parliament will press for a satisfactory explanation of the "utter laxity" which has characterized the defense arrangements in Malaya.

Australia also will expect satisfactory assurances and decisions about certain problems in the western Pacific. However, Australian Premier John Curtin's recent announcement that he had been greatly reassured by Churchill's promises regarding defense preparations in that area would seem to indicate that the prime minister already has the answers for some, if not all, the questions with which he will be confronted.

QUININE SUPPLY ADEQUATE IN U. S. SAYS DR. CUTTER

The United States faces no quinine shortage because of the war in the Pacific, as does India, Dr. Irving S. Cutter, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, said yesterday. In 1939, the government purchased 10 million ounces of the drug, he explained, which was over and above stocks then on hand with druggists—the whole totaling a supply which would be sufficient for several years.

These figures are those of Norman Taylor of New York, director of the Cinchona Products institute, Dr. Cutter said.

Quinine comes from the cinchona plant, a native of South America transplanted in Java, in the Dutch East Indies, which holds virtually a world monopoly on quinine.

FOUGHT TO LAST, GUAM DEFENDER QUOTED BY JAPS

Tokio Tells of Interview with U. S. Governor.

TOKIO, Jan. 17 [Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press].—Domei reported today that it had interviewed Capt. George J. McMillin, governor of Guam, at a prison camp on Shikoku Island, and quoted him as expressing the wish that President Roosevelt be informed that Guam's defenders fought valiantly to the last.

Capt. George J. McMillin.

Domei said its correspondent asked Capt. McMillin whether he had any message and was told:

"I want you to tell President Roosevelt we of the American forces fought valiantly and defended our posts until the last."

Domei said the governor of Guam was asked whether he had been confident Guam could hold out against the Japanese, and replied:

"I was not. It is impossible to defend a little island like Guam with a small garrison composed of a group of marines and police against a strong attacking force."

Domei said that in answer to other questions Capt. McMillin said he had not underestimated Japan's strength; that the Japanese were well prepared and equipped for their attack, and that his treatment as a prisoner at the hands of the Japanese had been satisfactory.

The Domei correspondent said Capt. McMillin seemed "well and chipper" after a 2,000 mile trip to Japan aboard a warship.

The dispatch said the reporter noticed that the American used his left hand to sign his name, and when he commented upon this was told:

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—Snow-haired David Lloyd George, Britain's premier in the first World war, observed his 79th birthday today by opening the United Kingdom's first sitdown restaurant for agricultural workers at his farm in Surrey. A frequent critic of the government's agricultural program, Lloyd George told the farm workers that Britain had failed to learn its lesson from the last war and had "neglected agriculture" at work.

CHRISTEN FIRST BIG FLYING BOAT FOR IRISH ROUTE

Designed by Sikorsky for New Export Line.

Stratford, Conn., Jan. 17 [Special].—A sleek, black hulled flying boat, designed for nonstop passenger service across the Atlantic, was christened here today for American Export Airlines by Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President. The ship may be used on the route to Ireland.

Named Excalibur and the first in a fleet planned for transocean service, the new plane was built by the Vought-Sikorsky aircraft division of United Aircraft corporation. The four motored ship is equipped with de luxe sleeping accommodations and compartments for mail and cargo. "Excalibur" was the name of King Arthur's sword.

Igor I. Sikorsky, noted designer and inventive genius, mounted to a flag draped platform and spoke to the 3,000 workmen who left their jobs briefly for the ceremony.

Dedicated to Country.

"We hope this plane will be useful to this country in time of war as well as in time of peace," he said simply, stuffing his prepared speech in his pocket.

W. H. Coverdale, president of American Export Airlines, mentioned the company's five year struggle to compete in the air route across the Atlantic. The line has been granted a certificate to fly the New York-Lisbon route which has been halted by the war.

"We expect to fly the trade route to Lisbon when peace is restored," said Coverdale. "Meanwhile we have applied to the government for permission to fly to Ireland."

Mrs. Wallace then took a batter's grip on the champagne bottle and whammed the snub nose of the flying boat a dozen times. When workmen interposed an iron bar the bottle finally shattered. A number of naval officers were present.

Adopted from Naval Model.

The ship is a commercial version of the SPBS, a naval patrol bomber designed by Sikorsky. The power plant consists of four Pratt & Whitney engines and propellers are Hamilton standard. Many of the details of the plane were not given because of war restrictions.

American Export Airlines, facing the opposition of the well established Pan-American Airways, which is the lone operator of overseas air service from the United States, had the validity of its Civil Aeronautics board certificate affirmed by the federal Circuit Court of Appeals last summer. Work was started in August for its hangar and base at La Guardia field here in New York.

Bette Davis Here

Bette Davis, film star, and her husband, Arthur Farnsworth, Boston business man, stopped off here on their way to New York yesterday. They arrived on the Santa Fe Chief in Dearborn street station and left several hours later on the Century.

Miss Davis will appear on a radio program while in New York and will donate the fee received for it to the Red Cross. Later she will go to her country home in New Hampshire for a two month vacation.

While here Miss Davis commented on the tragic death of Carole Lombard. "I never knew Miss Lombard but I admired and enjoyed her pictures very much," she said. "I feel desperately sorry for her husband, Clark Gable, whom I know thru our defense activities."

JAMMED CAPITAL TOLD: PREPARE FOR 85,000 MORE!

Already a Boom Town; No Housing Available.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—A tidal wave of 85,000 new government employés this year was forecast today for the national capital by Harold D. Smith, director of the budget.

In 1941 a flood of 47,000 new government employés made the capital a boom town. Numerous business records were shattered, housing accommodations were swamped and life quickened to a faster tempo.

The addition of 85,000 new workers in the capital will send the boom skyrocketing on to new high levels. It is estimated that the influx of new workers will send the capital's population up 250,000 during the year.

45,000 More by July 1.

Data gathered by the budget bureau indicated that 45,000 new workers will be added betwen now and July 1 and 40,000 more will be added by Dec. 31.

An idea of the mushrooming of the capital can be gathered from estimates of the number of stenographers who will be employed in the nation's 59 billion dollar war effort during the budget year which will begin July 1.

A little more than a year ago the capital had 150,000 government workers of all classes. By the end of this year it is expected that it will have that many stenographers alone.

33,000 Typists Needed.

To reach the 150,000 total, civil service commission will have to bring 33,000 typists and 17,000 stenographers to Washington in the next 12 months. Last month it recruited 1,500 stenographers alone. It probably will have to continue at that rate.

At present, there are roughly 67,000 typists and 33,000 stenographers. Those are round figures—but substantially correct.

Experience shows, the budget bureau reported, that 85,000 new government employés will draw an additional 42,000 workers to serve them and their families as clerks, craftsmen, city employés, and in other capacities.

The new government workers, together with their families, are expected to bring the total population increase during the year up to 250,000.

Washington's population is now in excess of 770,000 and the population of the capital's metropolitan area is in excess of 1,000,000.

Unless the city can empty out a large number of employés, who are not engaged in defense units, Washington will be unable to house the expected increase. The city lacks homes, office space, and utilities for the accomodation of 250,000 more persons.

OPM SAYS QUOTA OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS IS ASSURED

Asserts 20,000 Goal for 1942 Will Be Met.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.— The office of production management announced today that America's industries will deliver in 1942 the 20,000 anti-aircraft guns listed by President Roosevelt in his armament message to congress. With contracts awarded and others about to be awarded, the OPM said this output of these weapons for this year was assured.

In addition the ordnance department of the army announced today that mass production of 20 mm. aircraft cannon has been attained. Manufacture of these guns was tripled within the last month, and there is every indication that the production rate will continue its rapid climb, it was turned out last summer.

Automobile plants, masters in mass production, are carrying the bulk of the assignment altho parts are also being produced by hundreds of other industries.

Assembler Makes Two Parts.

One motor firm, for example, is assembling the weapon but is making only two of the 125 parts. The other 123 parts are made in other shops under subcontracts. Another motor plant is assembling the gun but the carriage contract is held by a tire factory.

The intricate and expensive anti-aircraft artillery was produced in this country in only limited quantities prior to June, 1940, when funds for a modest expansion were made available. Today, the capacity of American industry is being employed.

The types vary in size from the 50 caliber machine gun to the navy's 5-inch fixed mount gun. The smallest caliber is used for protection of ground troops against dive bombers and strafers. The largest has a vertical range into the substratosphere.

Improve on European Models.

Improved models of the best performers in European service are in production. These include the Swedish Bofors 40-mm and the Swiss Oerlikon 20-mm. These 20-mm [slightly under one inch] can tear a hole a foot square in an attacking plane. The fire is rapid.

Another automatic in production is 37 mm. Its projectile is about an inch and a half in diameter and weighs about a pound and a quarter. It explodes on touching any part of a plane. If it misses, it explodes automatically in the air. Mounted on a mobile carriage, the gun can be towed over good roads at high speed.

The 40-mm Bofors has a higher range. The explosive projectile weighs slightly more than two pounds. The gun, with its funnel mouth shielding the flash, also uses tracer ammunition.

Have Used 3-Inch Guns.

The army up to this time has been equipped principally with 3-inch guns. The projectile weighs three pounds. The size is approximately that of a 75-mm field gun.

The next anti-aircraft weapon in size is the 90-mm. Its picture is on the two cent stamp of the defense series. It's the new standard anti-aircraft weapon of the coast artillery. The projectile weighs 21 pounds and the range is effective against high flying bombers. Army experts say it outclasses in accuracy and range Germany's corresponding weapon, an 88-mm.

Six hundred and ten thousand Illinois men 20 thru 44 years old are expected to register for the draft Feb. 16, Paul G. Armstrong, state director of selective service, estimated yesterday. He predicted a registration of 335,500 in Cook county, 285,480 of them in Chicago.

Armstrong released the following age estimates:

	20-21.	36-44.	Total.
Cook county..	61,600	273,900	335,500
Chicago	52,416	233,064	285,480
Downstate	50,400	224,100	274,500
Entire state...	112,000	498,000	610,000

The state draft director emphasized that all aliens residing in the United States on Feb. 16 are required to register for the draft.

ROB WESTERN UNION OFFICE.

A bandit who held up the Western Union office at 340 North Clark street yesterday forced the manager, John A. Meerse, and two messenger boys, into a washroom and escaped with $20.

U. S. HOLDS UP PAY OF CONGRESSMEN IN ARMED FORCES

Told They Can't Take Two Pay Checks.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 [Special].—The house of representatives must decide for itself whether its members in active service with the armed forces should receive their $10,000 a year salaries as congressmen or the regular army or navy pay.

This was the ruling sent to the house today by Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, who pointed out that pending action by the house he is without authority to pay the salaries of members who have taken leaves of absence to join the armed services.

Cites Legal Difficulties.

There are two legal complications in the situation, Lindsay said. One is a law forbidding any individual to draw two pay checks from the government if they exceed $2,000, altho permitting such a person a choice of which check to accept. The other is the possibility that joining the service might be construed as bringing about automatic forfeiture of office.

In army circles it was pointed out that $10,000 a year is more pay than major generals receive, and there was speculation over the possible effect on army morale of $10,000 a year privates under the command of corporals and sergeants drawing regulation pay. Rep. Frank C. Osmers [R., N. J.], has just entered the army as a private.

Require Decision by Feb. 3.

The question must be decided before the next congressional pay checks go out Feb. 3. In the World war members of congress who joined the army or navy resigned their offices and drew army pay for the duration, but bills later were passed to reimburse them to the amount they would have received if they had remained in congress.

Other members of congress who have entered the service thus far include Reps. Albert L. Vreeland [R., N. J.], army, and Lyndon Johnson [D., Tex.], Eugene Worley [D., Tex]., Warren G. Magnusen [D., Wash.], and James E. Van Zandt [R., Pa.], all in the navy.

MONOXIDE VICTIM DIES.

Charles Klein, 29 years old, 3506 Monroe avenue, Brookfield, who was found unconscious from carbon monoxide gas Friday in the garage at the rear of his home, died yesterday in the Berwyn hospital. Klein was an employé of the Electro Motive corporation.

Enters Air Corps

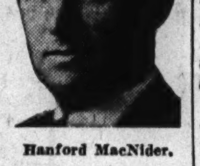
Donald Chin Poy, 21 years old, 220 Alexander street, who was born in Canton, China, was accepted for training as an airplane mechanic in the army air corps yesterday. He is a graduate of the Aeronautical university at 1338 Michigan avenue.

The youth came to the United States 12 years ago and is an American citizen because his father, Chin Toy Dick, was born here. A brother, Chin Toy How, was released from army service under the 28 year old rule but expects a recall momentarily.

Poy said he hoped to see action in the western Pacific, "But, of course, I'll gladly serve wherever the army thinks I'll do the most good." He was sworn in by Lieut. Sidney T. Holzman in the army station at 515 South Franklin street.

MacNIDER, SOLDIER AND FOE OF WAR, TO REJOIN ARMY

Mason City, Ia., Jan. 17 [Special].—It's back to the army for Hanford MacNider, distinguished soldier of the World war, who fought intensively against the trend toward war in the United States during the last few years and delivered many speeches under the auspices of the America First committee.



Hanford MacNider.

MacNider, who is 52 and a colonel in the infantry reserve, prepared today to leave immediately for active duty on a special assignment.

MacNider was commissioned a second lieutenant in August, 1917, and went to France the next month.

He took part in the battles of the Aisne, Marne, Saint Mihiel, and the Argonne and was wounded at Saint Mihiel. Among the decorations given him were the legion of honor, distinguished service cross, and the Croix de guerre.

After the World war MacNider served during Republican administrations as assistant secretary of war and as United States minister to Canada. He is a former national commander of the American Legion.

President Says Transfer Aided by Allies.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—President Roosevelt tonight said that the United States is expediting the transfer of Americans now serving in the British, Canadian, and other allied armies who are applying to fight under their own flag.

However, the President warned that such transfer will take time and must be accomplished without weakening or hampering allied efforts. For this reason, he said that Americans in such service should be aware that they can best serve their country's interests by remaining where they are.

Previously Urged to Remain.

The President made his third expression on the subject in a formal statement. Twice previously he had stated that men who are employed abroad in armed service or on projects essential to the conduct of the war should not return home for enlistment or conscription, but should continue their present connections.

"Prior to the entry of the United States into the present conflict, hundreds of Americans proceeded abroad and enlisted in the armed forces of those countries fighting against the axis powers," the President said.

"Needless to say, an immediate transfer of all of these individuals to the American forces would materially reduce the effectiveness of the units in which they are now serving and thus impair the value of the overall military effort against our common enemies. This would be particularly true in the cases of Americans now actually fighting in British, Canadian, and allied units.

Governments Collaborating.

"With this in mind, the service departments of this government and of the other interested governments are now collaborating to the end that those Americans who wish to do so may transfer, under defined conditions, to the armed forces of the United States as soon as transfers can be arranged without unduly hampering the combined war efforts of the united nations now combating the axis powers."

20,600 Joined in Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 17 (AP).—More than 20,600 Americans in the Canadian navy, army and air force—about half of them air force personnel—are expected to enter the United States forces when plans are completed for the transfer.

About 10 per cent of the 100,000 enlisted men in the royal Canadian air force, trained or in training, are Americans. while 600 other Americans are instructors. Nearly 10,000 more are serving with the Canadian army.

Rob Motorist of Auto and Cards, Return Cash

Three bandits accosted Joseph Novak, a piano finisher, as he was driving his automobile into the garage at the rear of his home at 1628 West Pershing road late Friday and forced him to lie on the floor while they drove to Southwest highway and 83d street. There they took his automobile, driver's license and identification cards, but returned his billfold containing $9, then forced him out. The car was found abandoned early yesterday at 74th street and Ashland avenue.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.

Service in Uncle Sam's newest combat arm—the parachute battalions—is the goal of hundreds of young men today. The flood of mail received by this department and by army headquarters in Chicago asking information about the army paratroops attests to this fact.

The letter writers will be glad to learn that, within the last few days, the army has issued a ruling allowing recruits to enlist directly for duty in the parachute units providing they meet the rigid requirements for this dangerous service. Prior to this ruling, men had to have at least six months' army service before they could transfer to the paratroops.

Requirements Set Forth.

Requirements for the paratroops are that the applicant be between the ages of 20 and 30 inclusive, unmarried, weigh not more than 185 pounds, and able to pass a strict physical examination. In addition, he must be "capable of developing into an aggressive, individual fighter with great endurance," as the army puts it.

Men accepted for the parachute battalions first will spend 13 weeks in an infantry training center. There they will learn to be jacks-of-all-trades among the instruments of war, for a paratrooper plummeting into enemy country must be ready instantly to use the weapon which parachutes to earth nearest him, whether it be grenades, machine gun, mortar, 37 mm. gun, or what.

Get Monthly Bonuses.

Members of the parachute battalions receive monthly bonuses in addition to their regular army pay because of the hazardous nature of their duties. In addition, because the battalions are new to the army, they have a good chance of receiving quick promotions to the various noncommissioned officer grades.

Soldiers interested in transferring to the paratroops units should apply to their commanding officers.

QUESTIONS.

W. M. asks: "Where is the nearest recruiting station of the Royal Canadian Air Force?"

ANSWER: The RCAF has no recruiting station in the United States. A recruiting depot is maintained at Windsor, Ontario, across from Detroit. The main recruiting station is at RCAF headquarters in Ottawa.

Mrs. E. A. S. writes: "Recently I read an article in The Tribune telling of the precautions taken to guard Fort Sheridan from possible sabotage. Just lately I made a trip to Camp Forrest, Tenn., and I was amazed to find how indifferent the guards there were to the persons entering the camp gates. Why is this?"

ANSWER: The commanding officer of each post or station is in charge of the protection of his camp. Apparently some camp commanders are inclined to lay down stricter regulations regarding visitors than other commanders.

R. J. C. writes: "I spent seven months in the coast artillery as a draft volunteer, and then my feet began to hurt. Because of this I was released for disability. Now that war is on do you think I will be recalled?"

ANSWER: I imagine that, upon your release, you were placed in class 1-B [available for limited military service]. Local draft boards now are combing thru the men in this and other classes, so it is highly possible that you may find yourself back in uniform again if your board thinks your feet have rested long enough.

ADJUDGED GUILTY OF LEAVING AUTO FATALITY SCENE

Clarence T. McDonald Jr., 20 years old, 314 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, a student in the Illinois Institute of Technology, was found guilty yesterday by Judge Victor A. Kula in Boys' court of leaving the scene of an accident. Judge Kula continued to Jan. 30 a motion for probation.

On Oct. 5 McDonald was driving an automobile which struck and fatally injured John P. Grady, 64, of 1508 Rosemont avenue, and John Doles, 58, of 2748 North Artesian avenue. The accident occurred as the two men stepped off a safety island after alighting from a street car at Devon and Western avenues. McDonald admitted drinking beer just before the accident and said he fled the scene because of fright.

Attorney James J. Muench, representing the Grady family, said the youth, son of a wealthy manufacturer, should be punished and opposed probation.

U.S. TRACTORS AID BRITISH IN FOOD PRODUCING DRIVE

More Women Put to Work on Nation's Farms.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON [By Air Mail]—With the help of American tractors this year should be the biggest food producing year that British agriculture has ever known.

Shortage of skilled labor is a serious handicap. But the land is in better condition than it has been for years. Much more of it is available. There is the coöperative use of machinery, more technical advice at hand, and an increased employment of women.

Lists Three Assets.

Minister of Agriculture Robert Hodgson in a message to all persons working on the land said:

"We face the toughest year in the history of British farming. We have to produce every ounce of food our resources will permit. It cannot be done by hard work alone. It is going to need a great deal of hard thinking and careful planning, too. Fortunately we have three growing assets.

"The first is the new power on the land. Nearly 2,000,000 horse power have been added in two years.

"We must see to it that our tractors—many of them brought from the United States in precious shipping space—do not stand idle this year. We can always help to win the war by helping a neighbor.

Hails Women's Land Army.

"The second is knowledge. For centuries our best farmers have set the highest standards of husbandry in the world. Since the war our scientific and practical knowledge and experience have been mobilized and placed at the disposal of each one of us, thru our county war committee.

"Our third asset is the women's land army. I have good reports of their work from all over the country. They must bear an increasing part in wartime food production in the months that lie ahead. The war situation demands redoubled efforts in food production as in every other sphere of the nation's activities."

Owl Adopts Couple

Mrs. Hilda Walsh with the owl she and her husband found.

The Jack Walshes of 6441 North Campbell avenue like pets, but the one they have now is something of a problem. A few nights ago they were walking home, and at Devon and Western avenues Mrs. Walsh kicked something on the sidewalk. Her husband picked it up. It was an owl with a wingspread of about 18 inches. They took it home and fed it, and now the bird refuses to leave.

PLAN HEARINGS ON NEGRO JOBS IN ARMS WORK

Determined to develop a fuller use of available Negro man power for war production, the President's committee on fair employment practice will meet today to draw up its program for public hearings tomorrow and Tuesday in the city council chambers.

Ald. Earl B. Dickerson [2nd], a Chicago member of the committee, said that today's task will be to decide which of the hundreds of complaints of discrimination against Negroes in employment can be heard mos profitably by the group. It was explained that time limitations will permit only a sampling of the complaints.

Members of the committee expected to attend the sessions include David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; alternates for the presidents of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Mark F. Ethridge of Louisville, Ky., chairman.

11 CRAZED DOGS DIE DEFENDING MASTER'S BODY

Avenel, N. J., Jan. 17 (AP).—Four policemen laid a shotgun and revolver siege today to a snack sheltering a pack of hunger crazed dogs, killing 11 before they could remove the body of their master.

William Blair Woodruff, tall, lean and 72, had little left in life except his dogs, and there were 13 of them.

His income depended on his work at a diner on U. S. route 1. When he did not show up, police investigated. inside.

A dozen dogs ran barking between yard and house, fiercely threatening to attack at every advance by the officers. Capt. Benjamin Parsons gained the roof and shot dogs which ran out of the building. Capt. Jack Egan ripped a clapboard from the dwelling and shot the dogs snarling inside.

When it was over, Woodruff's body was found inside the door. He had died of natural causes.

DRIVER ROBBED OF $53.

Joseph Kon, 1401 North Avers avenue, a driver for a beverage company, was robbed of $53 last night in front of 7460 Addison street by an armed bandit.

WOMAN STRUCK FIRST BY AUTO, THEN BUS; KILLED

An unidentified woman about 23 years old was killed last night when she was struck by an auto and a Chicago Motor Coach company bus at Sheridan road and Pratt avenue. She first was hit by the auto driven by Jack Lindermuth, 19 years old, of 3716 North Paulina street. The impact threw her into the side of the bus, driven by Edward J. Leibach, 7320 Osceola avenue, and crushed her.

Wilbert Herman, 30, 6336 Raven street, was killed when he drove his automobile into the path of a Chicago bound North Western railroad passenger train at the Elm street crossing in Park Ridge. Police said that blinker signals at the crossing were in operation, but that Herman, a filling station attendant, apparently thought a motionless freight train was causing them to signal a warning, and the passenger train came by on a second track.

A man about 65 years old, identified by a card in a pocket as Carl Schultze, a member of Townsend club 34, was killed when he was struck at 101st street and Kedzie avenue, Oak Lawn, by an automobile driven by Fred Eckert, 18, of 10104 South Keeler avenue, Oak Lawn.

John Szymanski, 47, of 1535 Ohio street, a machinist, was killed at Chicago and Racine avenues when hit by an automobile driven by Edward Frye, 19, of 2512 Chicago avenue.

Fred Couch, colored, 27, of 10850 Glenroy avenue, was killed when the automobile in which he was riding collided with a truck at 119th street and Ashland avenue. The truck, loaded with steel, was driven by Walter Mencil, 38, of 1519 South Springfield avenue. Mrs. Ardelia Wise, colored, 33, of 1444 West 110th place, was the driver of the car. She and two male passengers were injured.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 52 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these, 38 were killed in Chicago, where 1,098 were injured in the same period.

RED CROSS DRIVE THIRD OF WAY TO GOAL IN CHICAGO

$1,212,131 Raised; New Donors Are Listed.

In two weeks of active solicitation, the Chicago Red Cross chapter has collected $1,212,131 in its campaign for $3,750,000 for war relief, James B. Forgan, general chairman, announced yesterday. The national drive for 50 million dollars has passed the halfway mark with a total of $25,574,148.

Letters received at campaign headquarters, 105 South La Salle street, indicate that many persons are confused about the present war fund drive and the regular Red Cross roll call recently completed.

"The roll call annually provides money for regular peacetime activities of the organization," Mr. Forgan explained. While a certain reserve is accumulated, it is in no way sufficient to defray the costs of wartime operation.

City's Quota 7½ Per Cent.

"This is apparent from the relative amounts involved. In Chicago the roll call annually provides between $150,000 and $200,000. The quota for the present war fund is $3,750,000, or 7½ per cent of the 50 million dollars President Roosevelt has declared to be needed immediately to meet war demands on the Red Cross."

The nine vital services performed by the Red Cross are to: Supply hurses for all war fronts; build blood plasma banks for emergency treatment of both military and civilian casualties; care for convalescent wounded in the recreational buildings at 63 army and navy hospitals; produce 40 million surgical dressings for immediate war use; serve as contact between men in the armed forces and their families; ease the hardship of captured men in enemy prison camps; make and distribute millions of comfort garments; aid civilian war victims, and prevent accidents within the army and navy units.

Company Donations Mount.

Donations totaling $28,150 were received from companies yesterday. These gifts are exclusive of employé contributions which Mr. Forgan expects to start reaching headquarters this week. Pledge cards have been issued to 3,458 employé groups in Cook and Du Page counties and the southern half of Lake county.

Yesterday's gifts included $7,000 from Libby, McNeill, and Libby; $5,000 each from Morton Salt company and American Can company; $3,000, S. S. Kresge company; $1,500, Lucien Lelong, Inc.; $1,200, J. B. Clow and Sons; $1,000 each from Cluett, Peabody and Company, Inc., and A. G. Becker & Co.; $750, the Teletype corporation; $750, Steele Wedeles company, and $500 each from the Great Western Steel company, McKesson and Robbins, Inc., Lyon and Healy, Inc., and the Mercantile Discount corporation.

AMERICANS IN CUBA PROTEST REGISTERING TAX OF $120 A YEAR

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 17.—American residents today presented two protests to United States Ambassador George Messersmith against the foreigners' annual registration tax, which was sharply increased by the Cuban government this month. Other protests are in preparation.

Today's protests termed the tax "discriminatory and contrary to the spirit of the reciprocity treaty," and pointed out that 30,000 Cubans living in the United States are not subject to such a discriminatory levy. There are 4,000 Americans in Cuba.

The tax now requires payment of $120 a year for those earning more than $4,000. British Minister Sir George Ogilvie Forbes also has protested.

5 PERSONS HURT IN 'L' CRASH AT LOOP STATION

Five persons were injured last night and about 200 others bruised and shaken when a Westchester elevated train ran into the rear of a Lake street train at the State and Van Buren street station. The motorman of the Westchester train was John B. Flynn.

Elevated officials said Flynn sought to bring his train to a stop too close to the rear of the other.

Those injured, all of whom were given first aid and sent to their homes, included Miss Mary Connery, 5946 Race avenue; Mrs. Mary Vaughan, 639 North Leamington avenue; John Cahill, 2227 North La Crosse avenue, who was hurt in an effort to save his 5 year old son, Michael, from falling between two of the cars of the Lake street train; the boy Michael, and Joseph Cohn, 1431

STAY IN COLLEGE UNTIL CALLED, STUDENTS URGED

Defense Director Appeals for Civilian Help.

Maj. Raymond J. Kelly, director of the 6th civilian defense region, urged college men yesterday to remain on the campus and complete their educational training before attempting to enlist in the armed services.

"As trained men, college graduates will be of far greater value to the war effort when they are called," Kelly told representatives of 12 colleges and universities in the Chicago area at a meeting in the Civic Opera house.

He advised college students to enlist as auxiliary firemen, policemen, air raid wardens, and fire watchers in their community civilian defense organizations.

Place for College Women.

Mrs. Mary Jeanne Byrd, a representative of the consumers' division of the Office of Price Administration, called upon college women to enroll in consumer courses to develop wise buying habits.

Other speakers included Roger Holden, manager of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross; James Ward, national coördinator of college activities for the youth division of the Office of Civilian Defense, and John F. Langdon, head of the youth program for the 6th defense region.

Forty student representatives and faculty members attended the conference. They represented Barat college, De Paul university, Loyola university, Northwestern university, University of Chicago, Lake Forest college, Mundelein college, St. Xavier college, Rosary college, Illinois Institute of Technology, the National College of Education, and Central YMCA college.

"Y" Acts to Aid Men in Service.

The opening of all YMCA recreational facilities to service men free of charge was recommended yesterday at a conference of the board of directors of the North Central area in the La Salle hotel. The board also voted to make housing facilities available to service men at cost. William J. Grede, of Milwaukee, Wis., was elected president of the board.

LOCAL TAXES GO UP RIGHT ALONG WITH U. S. LEVIES

Washington Plea to Cut Costs Is Unheeded.

Despite demands by Washington, D. C., officials and local civic groups to slash local expenditures in the face of rising federal taxes, the six major local governments in the Chicago area are planning to spend additional millions this year and to increase their taxes by millions. The state government also has joined in this upward trend.

The war has made heavier federal taxes necessary. Federal tax authorities are warning against unnecessary tapping of revenue sources by local tax collectors for fear of imperiling the government's sources.

Six Local Governments.

The six local governments are the city of Chicago, the school district, the sanitary district, park district, Cook county, and the county forest preserve district.

The 1942 budgets already passed or being drawn up by four of these governments—Chicago, sanitary district, school board, and park district—call for an increase in expenditures of about 2¾ million dollars over the 1941 level.

The city's corporate budget for 1942 is $55,500,000, against $54,690,541 for 1941, an increase of $809,459. The corporate budget is the operating budget and is financed from the tax levy and license revenue.

A Modest Increase.

The sanitary district's budget stands about $1,000,000 over 1941, while the school district's tentative budget, calling for appropriations of $72,377,659, is about $914,000 more than last year. The park district's increase is $52,198, its budget appropriation for 1942 being $23,130,744 again $23,078,546 for 1941.

The two other governments, the county and the forest preserve district, have not yet prepared their 1942 budgets, but they already have been granted tax levy increases by the state assembly amounting to $1,125,000 more than in 1941. Of this, the county proper is taking $1,000,000.

Budgets and appropriations do not always tell the story of the full effect of taxation. Sometimes governments appropriate more than they spend. The real clew to the bad news usually may be found in tax levies, as authorized by the legislature.

Increase Each Year.

Last year Chicagoans paid out 190 millions in 1940 taxes. This year they will pay an additional $3,400,000 in 1941 tax bills. Next year, it is figured, they will hand out $2,775,000 more than this year. Each of the six local governments shares in the revenue. The property tax rate this year is expected to soar to nearly $10 per $100 of assessed valuation, an all time high.

The special session of the legislature just ended tacked on a total of $6,087,500 in new appropriations, mostly for defense purposes.

TAX PAYMENTS MADE AT RATE OF 800 HOURLY

Income tax payments poured into the internal revenue office yesterday at the rate of 800 an hour, or three times as fast as at this time last year, Collector Carter H. Harrison reported.

In addition to the bureau's regular facilities on the fourth floor of the Federal building 80 deputies were on duty on the first floor to aid taxpayers.

Harrison said many taxpayers are paying the tax in full immediately instead of paying the first quarterly instalment. He said many of these are persons who are making a return for the first time and have only small sums to pay. Typical of the others was one man who, in paying nearly $10,000, told the collector he felt it was the least he could do when the government needs the money.

CHICAGO RELIEF ROLLS REDUCED 31 PER CENT IN '41

Chicago's relief rolls were reduced 31 per cent in 1941, the Chicago Relief Administration announced yesterday. The case load fell from 80,869 to 55,972, a difference of 24,897 over the closing figure of 1940.

More than 11,000 persons on relief went off the rolls because they found jobs in private industry, CRA officials said.

In addition to the boom in the job market due to defense work, another reason for the reduction in the rolls is the fact that case workers have been given a correct picture of the needs of industry and are able to advise relief recipients on the correct methods of finding jobs, officials declared.

3 PRIVATES SLUG FORT SHERIDAN SENTRY, ESCAPE

Three Fort Sheridan privates who were shoveling coal under guard yesterday attacked their sentry, knocked him unconscious, took his rifle and ammunition and fled over the fence at the northwest corner of the reservation.

Pvts. James Denos and Frank Rogucki, both of Chicago, still were at large last night and were being hunted by military, state, county, and municipal police. A watch also was set over their homes in Chicago.

The third man, Pvt. John J. Conroy, Niagara Falls, N. Y., returned to Fort Sheridan and surrendered an hour after the escape.

Nothing more was seen of Denos and Rogucki until 9:30 p. m., when they stole Joseph H. Beuttas' 1942 automobile from in front of his home at 2122 North Ridge road, Highland Park. They then drove thru Highland Park streets and across lawns until they made their way to Skokie highway and fled north.

WOMAN ACCUSED IN HUGE SWINDLE MAY ASK MERCY

Mrs. Carr Is Expected to Offer No Defense.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 17 (AP).—The possibility that Mrs. Amelia Mildred Carr never would tell publicly the story of her life arose today with the announcement by Essex County Prosecutor William A. Wachenfeld that the alleged swindler might offer no defense.

She had already signed a waiver for trial by jury, the prosecutor said, and indicated that she would throw herself on the mercy of the court. Wachenfeld tentatively set her arraignment for Monday.

The 66 year old woman, known to her friends as a zealous church worker and described by Wachenfeld as a million dollar defrauder, has been indicted on a charge of taking $4,700 by false pretense from Mrs. Mabel Burnett, 71 year old co-worker in the Roseville Methodist church. Mrs. Burnett alleged the money was to have been invested in oil stocks, but had been appropriated by Mrs. Carr.

Seek to Trace Million.

Detectives still are seeking to trace $100,000 which Wachenfeld charged Mrs. Carr had mulcted from Essex residents and $1,000,000 thruout the nation.

Meanwhile the case took a new tangent today with the finding of a body identified as that of Anthony Ambrose, 67, in the Passaic river. Detective Lieut. Louis Sklarey said Mrs. Carr related that she knew the man and had borrowed $200 from him. The money was repaid with interest, she added.

Mrs. Carr was first taken into custody for questioning a month ago today. Ambrose was reported missing 11 days later. The cause of his death was undetermined.

Husband Makes Sacrifice.

David E. Bernstein, counsel for J. Clarence Carr, church trustee and the prisoner's husband, said that he planned to pool Carr's property with Mrs. Carr's, to be sold for the benefit of her creditors. Investigators have said Carr knew nothing of the alleged frauds.

"We know she had been married at least five times," Sklarey commented.

The Rev. Leon V. Czyl of the Catholic Youth Organization chapel officiated at services in the chapel at 2944 South Michigan avenue. Boys from the CYO school acted as pall bearers.

LEWIS PROPOSES MEETING TO END FEUD OF CIO-AFL

Green Agrees; Murray Reply Awaited.

the repeated appeals we have made have each achieved proportions demonstrating their ability to live and endure, even tho engaged in rivalry and conflict with the other. In membership, resources, and entrenched security, these organizations are comparatively of equal strength.

"It is obvious that if a couplement could be achieved, with united and competent leadership, the results would be advantageous and in the public interest.

"Heretofore, this has not been possible. Previous conferences between representatives of both organizations failed to coalesce. Conditions are now changed. America needs unity in every phase of its national economy. Labor imperatively requires coherency, in order to give maximum assistance to the nation in its war effort to defend American liberties and American institutions.

Suggests Accredited Groups.

"Both the AFL and the CIO have accredited standing committees, authorized to negotiate peace between the two organizations. I suggest a resumption of negotiations between the committees; that such meeting should take place at the early convenience of the members of the joint committee, and that the committee should undertake again the task of finding a common ground to bring peace to the ranks of labor.

"The importance of this request, and the meetings herein projected, can scarcely be overestimated. Labor's task in the effort to overcome the enemies of our nation is greater than that which befalls any other segment of our population. If labor can compose its major internal problem, then the government will be aided in the operation of its war economy and the membership of labor appreciably benefited.

"Every material consideration presses home the inescapable conviction, which will be shared by every thoughtful citizen, that the leaders of labor should now accept the responsibility of this task, and in all good faith devote themselves to its solution.

"May I hope that each of you, in your official capacity, will advise me of your concurrence."

AFL Ready, Says Green.

"Our peace committee stands ready to meet with the committee of the CIO at any time. We regard Mr. Lewis' letter as a partial response to since 1939 for resumption of the conferences to adjust differences between the CIO and AFL.

"Our latest appeal to CIO we made on Dec. 16, 1941, when a special meeting of all officers of national and international unions adopted a declaration war labor policy. This declaration contained the following statement:

"'We regret sincerely and are deeply concerned with the destructive rivalry in organization that has beset the American labor field for the past few years. We hold that all such rivalries and jurisdictional conflicts have no place in an emergency such as faces the world today.

"We, therefore, renew our offer for unity in the labor movement and for the common defense of our nation against mortal danger. We hope our call to this end may not be in vain.'"

BOY PARALYSIS VICTIM THANKED BY WHITE HOUSE

Leroy Ponshe, 15 year old infantile paralysis victim in Wesley Memorial hospital, received a letter of thanks from the White House yesterday for his $1 contribution to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, sent to President Roosevelt last Monday as a birthday present.

The letter, signed by a secretary, read, "As the President is a great admirer of those who put up a game fight, he is pleased to note from your letter the brave and cheerful spirit you are showing. He asks me to thank you ever so much for your thoughtful birthday greetings and for your contribution to the Infantile Paralysis fund.

"The President says that a spirit of determination will do wonders for you and he sends his every best wish for continued improvement in your health."

Ponshe, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ponshe, 2024 West 67th place, has been in the hospital since Dec. 29.

ADMIT TOWNSEND ORGAN TO MAILS AFTER BRIEF BAN

The ban on mail distribution of the Jan. 24 issue of the Townsend National Weekly—organ of the Townsend old age pension movement—was lifted yesterday a little less than 24 hours after it had been imposed.

The government temporarily held up the issue because of objections to an editorial by the founder of the movement, Dr. Francis E. Townsend, calling for imposition of a 5 per cent gross income tax rather than financing the war with stamps and bonds.

The ban was lifted by Vincent M. Miles, postoffice solicitor, who notified Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen of Chicago that the Townsend editorial did not make the issue unmailable. No further comment was forthcoming. Washington reports had it, however, that a disgruntled former employé of the magazine had read the editorial and complained to postal inspectors. The magazine has a circulation of about 170,000.

PUBLIC LIBRARY RICH STORE FOR CITY'S MILLIONS

45 Miles of Books Only Part of Story.

> "A library implies an act of faith which generations still in darkness hid sign in their night in witness of the dawn." Victor Hugo.

BY MARCIA WINN.

The Chicago Public library serves as a great common denominator to the heterogeneous mass of minds that the people of Chicago compose.

With its 46 branches the library, that squat gray building on Michigan avenue around which the pigeons play, is the intellectual workshop for fully half of Chicago's population. Seven hundred thousand Chicagoans are enrolled there as borrowers of its books, music, and pictures. Another million come into its vast reference halls each year to work.

Into its friendly interior, made radiant with jeweled mosaics as beautiful as any palace of Byzantium, thousands troop daily in their thirst for the knowledge hidden in its 45 miles of books. Here they find learning, recreation or the contemplative solace drawn from the written word.

Here one may gaze at a single page of the Gutenberg Bible, the world's first printed book; pore for hours over complete files of Household Words, the magazine Dickens edited; borrow a book in Icelandic, Gaelic or Arabic; look thru the files of the old Analectic, that magazine which flamed a brief six years in America [1813-'19] but long enough to be the first to publish the words to that new hymn of faith and hope, "The Star Spangled Banner"; borrow a complete recorded symphony to take home and play or, if blind, borrow the 100 disks on which "Les Miserables," the library's longest "talking book," is recorded.

The library has many rare and valuable books, including a splendid collection of Americana of the west, but takes little account of them other than to preserve them with care. It feels they belong more rightly to the field of specialized research, a field which by an 1897 agreement it leaves to Chicago's two celebrated research libraries, Crerar and Newberry.

Largest Circulating Library.

For this library is the library of the average man and as such is without parallel, for it is the largest circulating library in the world. In 1940 alone it issued 13,555,000 books. It has only one function: To carry a good stock of books of all purposes and to get the books used.

This is especially becoming when one considers the history of the present library, how it was formed by Chicagoans who, after the fire of 1871 when almost every book in the city had turned to ash, resolved so fervently to have a free library accessible to every man that by 1873, when that library was opened in an abandoned water tank, it had 17,000 volumes. Of these, 8,000 or so came from England in a notable collection with such eminent Victorians as Victoria herself, Disraeli, and Thomas Carlyle among the donors.

Bookmobile for Slums.

This was the beginning of that library which today has branches over all Chicago, places books in 230 hospitals, factories, and business houses, and sends a bookmobile laden with printed treasure thru the city's slums.

The public, thus accepting the library as its own, comes to it with unusual requests. When was the first pie made? What should I wear to christen a boat? When did Sarah Bernhardt give a testimonial on bicycles? How does one use a peach wand to discover a well site? What are the lines preceding ". . . And who doth now for cleanliness put sixpence in her shoe?"

The staff works diligently to answer every request, but draws the line at two. It will not answer crossword puzzle questions over the telephone and will read the inquirer no remedy from home medical books. Nor will it attempt to evaluate old or rare books, altho it will identify them.

Vast Music Library.

In catering to the search for knowledge Chicago's library has many facets unusual in a public library. Its music library alone contains 34,463 instrumental and vocal scores, both in sheet and bound form. It has a collection of popular songs dating back to 1851 and is one of the few libraries in America to have a collection of complete recorded symphonies. These, too, may be taken home.

Its Braille collection of 25,000 volumes is one of the largest in America and serves the blind thruout the midwest. It has 9,000 pieces of music recorded in Braille and 500,000 records of "talking books," each record containing around 7,000 words and requiring 17 or 18 minutes to play. The average work of fiction fills 15 disks, but "Jane Eyre" runs 34 and "Gone with the Wind" 80. The voice on these is vibrant, but matter of fact, with no pretense at dramatization or, in the case of Margaret Mitchell's book, a southern accent.

Thousands Visit Patent Room.

More than 100.000 persons come into the library's patent room each year. Right now, with a war always a spur to invention, it is crowded, an occasional "Whee!" being heard as an inventor notes that the Stuka dive bomber was an American invention but turned down by our war department.

The patent collection here is one of the three finest in the country. Its file of United States patents is complete, beginning with the first, on July 1, 1790, when Samuel Hopkins was granted a patent for "making pot and pearl ashes." The British collection begins with 1617, but French, German, Canadian, and Austrian patent records are here as well.

Big Foreign Collection.

The library has a foreign collection of 100,000 books in 30 languages, manned by a staff which does translations free. Its 300 volumes in Gaelic comprise one of the few Irish collections in America. In Chicago, as one might expect from its racial background, German and Polish are the two most popular languages, but recently sailors from the Naval armory have been taking out books in Portuguese and Japanese.

Stated statistically, the library's wealth is staggering, and with a few exceptions all may be borrowed. It contains almost two million books, 123,000 lantern slides, 600,000 pamphlets on subjects of current interest, 500,000 mounted and unmounted pictures. It has single rooms devoted to the arts, civics, magazines, and newspapers.

The latter, used by 25,000 persons a year, receives 139 English and foreign language newspapers a day, has a complete file of Chicago dailies from 1861 to the present, and a file of Chicago papers since 1833 recorded on microfilm. This includes a complete recording of THE TRIBUNE from 1871 to 1918.

To share this wealth one needs only to walk in. Every weekday of the year except Christmas and the Fourth of July its doors are open from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., on Sunday from 1 to 6 p. m. An adult may take home as many as five books [children, two], a research student eight and a teacher 15, usually for a two week period.

If you wish, you may even take out a parcel post card—this costs $1, the only one for which a fee is charged—and have books mailed to you. And if you don't like to read or look at pictures, the library has two final lures: a book talk every Thursday noon and a symphonic concert every Saturday afternoon.

SCHOOLS USING STAGGERED HOUR PLAN—M'CAHEY

Thirty-five of 40 Chicago public high schols already are operating on staggered hour schedules, President Jame B. McCahey of the board of education, said yesterday.

"Of the 130,000 students in public high schools, 60 per cent are within walking distance of their schools, 25 to 30 per cent use bicycles or automobiles, and about 10 per cent use public transportation facilities," McCahey said. "Thirty per cent begin their school day from 7:20 to 8:20 a. m. Another 30 per cent go from 8:20 to 8:40 and 20 per cent from 8:40 to 9 o'clock. Fifteen per cent start from 9 to 9:20 and 5 per cent from 9:20 to 10."

McCahey said the high school pupils end their day from 1:20 to 4:30 p. m. "To start our first regular day classes at 9:30, as has been suggested," he said, "would extend our regular classes two hours further into the evening and cut the time for defense training classes by more than 30 per cent."

Mayor Kelly said yesterday that it has not yet been demonstrated that there is any necessity for staggering the working hours of Chicagoans to relieve traffic congestion. A city council subcommittee has been considering the proposal for several days. Mayor Kelly said that, in any event, it would be up to industry to work out a voluntary system of staggered hours if one is desired.

THE INDIANAPOLIS SYMPHONY GIVES 3 NEW NUMBERS

Youthful Musicians Play with Exuberance.

BY CECIL SMITH.

This season the Chicago Symphony is experimenting with the novel policy of farming out some of its Saturday evening popular concert dates to other organizations. The Civic orchestra has already played in the series. Last evening the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra, conducted by Fabien Sevitzky, took over the stage of Orchestra hall for a single guest appearance.

Three works were presented for the first time in Chicago. These were David Van Vactor's new "Overture to a Comedy," the second of his works to bear that title; Mr. Sevitzky's orchestral transcription of a "Praeludium and Allegro," originally written for violin by Fritz Kreisler, which Mr. Kreisler for several years pretended was composed by Pugnani, and Arcady Dubensky's "Stephen Foster: Theme, Variations and Finale."

Familiar Themes in Program.

The familiar items in the program were Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony; excerpts from the third act of Wagner's "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," and the first, second, and seventh Hungarian Dances by Brahms.

Mr. Sevitzky's youthful orchestra played with immense exuberance. A spirited eagerness to make the most of every musical score is perhaps the most winning quality of the group.

The ensemble is not yet really well balanced or fully sonorous; Mr. Sevitzky has a tendency to depend upon a brilliant, and even piercing, first violin tone to conceal a want of richness in other departments.

But the playing of the young musicians was uniformly precise and clearly articulated, except for passages in the finale of the Mendelssohn symphony, which was taken at breakneck speed.

Mr. Van Vactor's overture is full of attractive material, neatly put together. In his musical outlook he has now apparently receded into romantic conventionality, however, so that the work can hardly be said to be a milestone in his career.

OPERA DELIGHTS CHILDREN

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Altho five weeks have passed since the close of its regular season, the Chicago Opera company managed to collar enough singers and instrumentalists to put on its annual performance of Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" in the Civic Opera house yesterday.

The place was alive with children. They laughed at the opera's horse play, were agreeably frightened at the plight of Hansel and Gretel lost in the dark wood, and clapped delightedly at the entrance of the witch.

Maria Matyas was the Hansel and Virginia Haskins the Gretel. Mark Love, May Barron, Sonia Sharnova, and Josephine Swinney sang the father, the mother, the witch, and the sandman, respectively. Kurt Herbert Adler conducted.

Sheila Vogelle, a former Chicago soprano, in her début in the rôle of the dew fairy, revealed a clear and well focused voice.

The company presented an amusing ballet called "Viennese Life," choreographed by Lucien Prideaux to Johann Strauss music. Mr. Prideaux and Lydia Arlova danced the principal parts.

SOURCES OF SCRAP STEEL.

Output of steel in the United States is declining. Two open hearth furnaces have closed down in Chicago, eight in Youngstown, and others in Pittsburgh, Detroit, Sharon, and elsewhere.

Our war plan calls for doubled production of defense materials, but instead the output of steel, the basic war material, is decreasing. The reason for the drop is a shortage of steel scrap.

Iron and steel can be used over and over again. Even rust which is knocked loose in the process of demolishing old cars is collected, and one railroad sells 400 tons of it a year.

Ninety per cent of all steel is made by the open hearth process, and half of the raw materials in that type of furnace is scrap. In electric furnaces in which high grade alloy steel is made the charge consists entirely of selected scrap. Moreover, there is a saving in time and money in using scrap, which is already steel at the outset, while pig iron, the alternative material, contains carbon, sulphur, and other impurities which must be reduced or eliminated.

To make steel more scrap is needed. Some recent developments are likely to reduce further the amount of old metal available. The embargo on the sale of automobiles to civilians means that old jalopies which ordinarily would go to the junk heap will remain in use for some time to come. Because it is not possible to buy new machines and engines, equipment which has not been used for years and was regarded as obsolete and ready for scrapping is being brought back into use or has been placed in condition to be used in emergency.

How is the critical shortage of steel scrap to be met? The suggestion has been made that a collection drive be organized along the lines of the aluminum campaign of last fall. No doubt every one would bring some old iron to the city square to help his town and community make a showing, but that this is the solution of the problem of a continuing supply of old iron is greatly to be doubted.

What is needed is the development of large sources of old metal. At the price fixed by Leon Henderson many in the junk business are unable to do business. At a higher price the peddlers would bring to the steel mills the familiar assortment of iron beds, tire rims, stoves, old bath tubs, and other discarded durable household goods. If they are rewarded for doing so the collectors would visit the farms on each of which there are hundreds of pounds of steel and iron not doing anybody any good. The peddler is an important man in our war effort and he ought to be motivated to do his utmost.

But all the itinerant junk men taken together in town and country only produce 20 per cent of the secondary metal. The rest comes from the large sources. An advance in price would make it worth while for each business concern to seek out equipment which could be discarded. The higher price would make it worth while to retire some equipment, which it is not now feasible to do. It would be worth while to junk some old buildings as was done in the last war if a sufficient amount could be realized in the salvage. In 1917 nearly 27 million tons of scrap were salvaged, which was 60 per cent more than in any prewar year.

A higher price is not the only solution. By the application of diligence and intelligence, a vast amount of old steel can be uncovered. Public utility rates are established by the regulatory commissions to give the companies a fair rate of return on the valuation of the property employed. It has therefore been in the interest of the utilities to retain obsolete equipment for the sole purpose of justifying high valuations. In the consolidations of utilities during the '20's, in particular, many obsolete facilities were included in the property accounts and it has been charged that these facilities form an appreciable part of the property now on the books.

If that is the fact, here is a possible source of a large part of the scrap now needed for defense. This is no time to do anything to the utilities which would impair their ability to render good service and to expand their facilities to meet the increased needs of the country. They should be given assurance that their rates would not be affected if they junked a lot of antiquated equipment. We commend this idea to Mr. Nelson, with the further suggestion that some one be given the exclusive job of developing it.

MR. ROOSEVELT ON JAPAN.

In 1923 Franklin D. Roosevelt, recently out of the office of assistant secretary of the navy, contributed an article to the magazine Asia in which he discounted the possibility of war with Japan. Mr. Roosevelt advanced a double thesis: First, the causes of friction and irritation which might have led to war between the two powers were at that time being removed; second, that the great distances of the Pacific basin made it impossible for either nation successfully to attack the other. He wrote:

"Tableau: Japan and the United States, four or five thousand miles apart, making faces at one another across no-man's water as broad as the Pacific. Some genius might then arise to ask what it was all about and what the use was of the atrophy of national life and development. Or, to take a pessimistic view, jingo counsels might prevail in both nations until one or the other or both had bled to death thru the pocketbook. If, then, it were realized by the people of this nation and Japan that a war would be a futile gesture, attended by no sufficiently compensating results, each nation might be in a fair way to change its apprehensive habit of mind."

Time has undoubtedly altered President Roosevelt's own feeling as to the validity of the first thesis which he advanced. It is still to be determined whether his second thesis, that neither nation could damage the other seriously, is to be true. [He more or less conceded at that time American inability to hold the Philippines.]

Mr. Roosevelt's view in 1923 was that since the combatants lacked the means of coming to grips in a military way, the war would after a time evolve into an economic struggle, in which the resources of the United States are obviously superior. This view, that the war will be a long one, probably still has validity. For that reason we must husband our resources to the end that the Japanese suffer more than we do in the economic siege.

THE OPPOSITION IN WARTIME.

When Congressman Joseph W. Martin undertook so successfully the other evening in Washington to define the functions and duties of the political opposition in wartime, he took his text, aptly, from Woodrow Wilson.

President Wilson once said:

"We do not need less criticism in time of war, but more. . . . It is hoped that criticism will be constructive, but better unfair attacks than autocratic repression . . . honesty and competence need no shield of secrecy."

The nation is, as Mr. Martin said, united in the support of our government and of the President, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces, in the prosecution of the war. And as he indicated, real national unity requires something of the chief executive beyond the mere acknowledgement of the support of those with whom he has differed politically in the past.

If that unity is to be made real and directed to the service of the nation's interest, it is not enough to accept allegiance. It is required also that the talents of those who offer it be used for the national benefit. Mr. Martin mentioned a number of men who ought to be serving the nation in important posts. His specific suggestion that Mr. Hoover, as head of price control, "would give the nation greater confidence than those who now exercise that control" is identical with one made recently by THE TRIBUNE. At this time the President could make no greater contribution toward public confidence and national unity than by following Mr. Martin's suggestion.

Mr. Martin's remarks on the function of the opposition in wartime should silence those renegades who are using a specious plea of "unity" in an attempt to destroy the Republican party. If the party is to be an organ of honest criticism it must remain Republican and not be made an appendage of the Democratic party, staffed by turncoats.

In Mr. Martin's thoughtful remarks can be found an authoritative statement of the policy that his party should follow in this year's election campaign:

"It must not be forgotten that we are fighting this war to preserve our American system of government and our American way of life."

"We must see to it that small business does not perish in America."

"We must endeavor to obtain full war production with a minimum of dislocation of our economic structure."

"Not only must we of this generation and the coming generations toil and sweat and sacrifice to pay the bills wisely and efficiently contracted; we must toil and sweat and sacrifice just as much to pay for money unwisely or extravagantly spent or stolen."

"We must discontinue every expenditure which is not vital and essential at this time. What will it profit us if we win the war and lose the peace?"

The speech, eloquent and logical, was a great service to his party and his nation. It raised Mr. Martin's stature as the natural leader of his party in the coming campaign.

THE BRIDGES INQUIRY.

A resolution has been introduced in the house calling for an investigation of the unsuccessful efforts to deport Harry Bridges. Congressman Ford of California, in proposing the inquiry, said he had heard rumors that powerful influences in the administration had been protecting Bridges and that, in this connection, it was being said that evidence damaging to Bridges had been destroyed.

There surely is need for such an investigation. Bridges, an alien, has been the leader of some of the most violent and destructive strikes which this nation has ever seen. He kept the shipping industry on the west coast in a turmoil for years. He has seldom departed from the communist party line. The only time the administration cracked down on him to any effect was in the period when Mr. Roosevelt was at outs with Stalin. It was at that time that Attorney General Jackson instituted the proceedings which led to Judge Sears' deportation order. Now that the Russians are again in favor in Washington a board of appeals has reversed the order and Bridges is reported to be on his way to naturalization.

The facts surely warrant the suspicion that the Bridges case was not handled on its merits under the law, but rather that favoritism has been employed to gratify the Russian communists. An investigation of the circumstances would serve to confirm or dispel suspicions which Mr. Ford holds in common with large numbers of his countrymen.

The country wants and is entitled to know who, if any one, in Washington has been fronting for Bridges, and why. Mr. Dies has found hundreds of communists on the government pay rolls. Is the handling of the Bridges case their work?

THE BROTHER PAINTERS FALL OUT.

The initiation fee racket practiced on men seeking jobs on defense construction projects thruout the country is again subject to attack, this time by the members of one of the unions most active in running the racket. The painters' district council in New York City complains that its unemployed members are being denied jobs in other cities because the union officials in those cities prefer to enrich their treasuries by taking in new members and collecting fat initiation fees from them. The district council intends to petition the international executive board of the union to have the practice stopped.

The obvious retort to the irate painters of New York is that if they don't like what is going on it is their own job to clean up the union. The painters' union has been one of the least reputable of those in the AFL building trades, in so far as artifices to restrict production are concerned. Chicago can testify that many of its locals here have been in the hands of gangsters who have freely murdered each other in the streets over the privilege of collecting dues.

In a wider sense, of course, the matter of these extortionate initiation fees is one in which public authority would be well justified in intervening. What is really being sold is the right to work. Public authorities have a duty to see what becomes of the money. It may be suspected that very little of it, in the unions in which the initiation fee racket is the worst, is ever used for the benefit of either the existing or the new members.

ON FIGHTING FIRE BOMBS

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Shields made out of dustbin lids are among the protective articles with which every British householder is advised to get ready to face the next German air attacks upon London and other big British cities, which the official mind is convinced will be by means of showers of incendiary rather than high explosive bombs. High explosives may be used, of course, and may be mixed with fire bombs, as was the case in the great air onslaughts upon London a year ago. But this time, experts think, the enemy, if he launches a mass air attack, will try to set fire to Britain rather than blow her to bits. For this reason, tests carried out by the ministry of home security have been carried out principally with regard to protection against the firebugs.

The ministry of home security says that its tests have shown that almost complete protection against explosive fire bombs and against flying molten metal can be obtained at all distances with a shield of seven-eighths inch board, not less than 28 inches by 20 inches, and backed with 22 gauge mild steel. This type of shield is fully described in the revised 1941 edition of the ministry's latest pamphlet, "Air Raids," just published.

Householders are warned, however, that a dustbin lid is not effective against steel splinters, even at a greater distance than 15 feet.

Lessons learned during the intensive air raids on London are in this little handbook, which has been completely rewritten since last year. Some of the most striking differences between the instructions given last year and now concern the fighting of fire bombs. Experience has taught the value of sandbags and sandmats [made by cutting an ordinary sandbag in half, filling the empty half with 20 pounds of dry sand, earth, or ash and sewing it up]. Last year's pamphlet made no mention of these. This year's makes them the leading weapon against incendiaries which fall in the open.

That more than half of a number of people in London questioned about gas said they did not know what to do in the event of a gas warning was demonstrated by questions put by "Change," a bulletin published by the Advertising Service guild. To measure the effect of the government campaign to make people wear white in the blackout, standard counts were taken. One thousand people were chosen for each count. An average of only one person in a thousand in London wore a white arm band after dark, altho this was the primary point stressed in the campaign.

Britain is striving to build up more dollar credits abroad by developing her exports of the skins of rabbits, both wild and tame. Exports of raw rabbit skins to the United States and Canada last year total 930,000 pounds sterling, and in the first six months of this year exports of similar skins totaled 920,000 pounds.

A scheme, planned by the fur trade export group, for collecting rabbit skins all over the country for export purposes, has the support of the board of trade, the ministry of food and the ministry of agriculture. Women's institutes and other organizations all over the country are coöperating. To insure that skins will be in good condition, instructions on the methods of handling raw skins are being distributed.

Before the war the United States imported millions of rabbit skins from Europe. Processed by experts, rabbits look so much like mink and muskrats that only an expert can tell the difference. With reasonable care rabbit skin coats will give years of wear.

Editorials of the Day

POLITICIANS OPPOSE BROOKS.

[Ogle County Republican.]

Some time back this newspaper predicted that certain politicians in Illinois were mapping plans to oppose Senator C. Wayland Brooks in the coming primary election. This prediction has now come to the surface, with a blast from a former party head this week, which has been taken up by a certain coterie of politicians, who far too long have tried to run the Republican party hand and foot. The only thing they have against Brooks is a cunningly devised statement that he didn't know about the coming of war to the United States, and so far as that issue goes it is apparent that the same thing applies quite strongly to some of his most outspoken critics.

They fail to mention the fact that C. Wayland Brooks and the most of his immediate family were in the first World war and in there where the bullets were the thickest. As a result Senator Brooks, who enlisted in the marines, carries several wounds received in action against the foe.

Brooks was not in favor of the United States entering the present war, statistics and polls showed that a majority of the people had the same view. Brooks in his preëlection pledges to the people of Illinois declared his intention to fight against any move to put us into the war, and he is one candidate that kept his word. Having served his country, having shed blood for it, having suffered on the battlefield, he knew what he was talking about when it comes to war. However, the opposition was very careful not to, in any manner, mention his patriotic service for the country on the battlefield.

When the hordes of Japanese attacked this country he voted promptly to declare war against that nation, and not only that, he offered his services again to this nation in its armed forces. The opposition didn't mention this point either. In fact, all it did mention was that he was not favorable to this country becoming involved in the present World war previous to our attack.

It looks to the rural dwellers like a star chamber session of the present political shepherds in Illinois has set out to defeat Brooks, but so far they haven't mentioned a candidate to oppose him who, in our opinion, has much chance of doing so. We are yet ready to let the fathers and mothers and the substantial everyday people of Illinois decide on this case. As a rule they have far better judgment than the politicians.

BLANKET BUCCANEERS.

[Minneapolis Morning Tribune.]

The Inter-Allied Review for November contains the text of the official decree by which Norwegians were ordered to turn in all their woolen blankets to the reichskommissar. The decree applies to all individuals, business concerns, and associations. Those who fail to give up their blankets, thru ignorance of the order or for any other reason, are punishable by three years at hard labor, altho in extenuating circumstances a 100,000 kroner fine may be imposed instead upon the erring citizen. So that the blanket transaction will seem less like the organized looting it is, provision is made for payment at whatever price the army provisioning authority may set.

Thus at the beginning of a hard, cold winter, with malnutrition already widespread among the people of Norway, the Nazis set about the systematic, wholesale stealing of that nation's blankets. Let the children shiver, and let the aged and feeble shake. What care the brave Nazis and Quislings so long as they may keep warm and snug in blankets strong-armed from the cold and hungry citizen?

The story of this blanket buccaneering is interesting, among other reasons, for the light it sheds upon the workings of the Nazi mind. One is forced to marvel at the incredible obtuseness of those who imagine they can build a new order in Europe on crimes and cruelties which range from shooting hostages en masse to pilfering the blankets of a nation faced by winter's bitter cold. What Hitler uses for mortar, in this new Nazi order, is the hatred and scorn of conquered peoples. For that reason, if for no other, his Europe will surely fall apart.

"TO SLEEP, PERCHANCE TO DREAM."

JOHN WALLER, a surgeon in the British navy, suggested more than a century ago that dreams may result from ill health. He pointed out that a slight and temporary deviation from normal may send the subconscious mind on a wild journey. In other words, roving thoughts during slumber may announce an oncoming illness.

Our author concluded his essay with a number of prescriptions designed to improve the state of the blood. He believed that banishing anemia would encourage digestion. Iron apparently was relied upon strongly. As we know, this helps the formation of hemoglobin [red coloring matter].

All this is a far cry from the doctrines of Freud, who wrote that all such experiences are "the royal road to the understanding of the unconscious." In fact, without them his followers admit their inability to dissipate emotional conflicts. Devoteés of psychoanalysis hold that infantile disappointments, which may never be recognized during waking hours, are remembered during sleep. Those who suffer from insomnia are said to be afraid to yield to the wiles of Morpheus. Should they do so, the injuries and frustrations of long ago will be conjured up in the realm of fancy.

Now, any normal individual may dream. As a rule, however, there is a physical cause. The stimulus may arise anywhere—from the digestive tract, the skin [cold feet or itching], inflammation within the mucous lining of the airways, noises of various sorts, etc.

If an observer could sit at the bedside during one of these episodes he would note first a period of labored breathing, in which the person makes an obvious effort as tho something were pressing on the chest. Then come sighs, groans, and mutterings. Finally the victim rouses, perhaps with the heart rhythm markedly increased. Resting on the back, with too many comforters, will give rise to the symptom because of too much weight and warmth. Consume a heavy meal, especially after a fatiguing day, and sleep will be restless.

Many have encountered disturbed nights when confronted with new surroundings or a different—possibly more strenuous and oft repeated—type of activity. Soldiers for the first week or so in camp may find their imaginations running riot with what are tantamount to hallucinations of battle and carnage. As soon as homesickness disappears there is no further difficulty.

Furthermore, if one has been thinking intently on a given problem, the pathways of memory may not quiet down completely. Thus puzzling questions that one is endeavoring to answer may present themselves in a cloudy, jumbled fashion. In such circumstances we may liken the mind during an active, busy day to a lake agitated by a storm. After the wind abates the waves will continue to roll upon the shore for hours.

We should remind ourselves that we cannot imagine anything we have not seen. We can only form new combinations. At any rate, if we would free ourselves from these unpleasant bouts we can make certain that light meals are taken at the end of the day, that the circulation is at par, and that toxins from any focus of infection in the body are not allowed to excite the nervous system.

SURGICAL REMOVAL.

N. T. writes: What can be done about nose polyps?

REPLY.

These oysterlike projections require removal by means of a simple surgical operation. Otherwise, they may interfere with breathing. Establishing free drainage from the sinuses prevents their regrowth.

GROWTH ON HEEL.

B. S. writes: What is a spur on the heel?

REPLY.

LASH PATTERN.

H. A. writes: Does clipping the lashes help them to grow?

REPLY.

The length of the lashes is an inherited characteristic. Trimming will not help.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed, attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, THE TRIBUNE.

MOTHER'S HELPERS.

North Chicago, Ill., Jan. 13.—To the writer complaining of her hard day: It's time she refused to be a doormat. My children had their work to do as soon as they were of school age, in fact, long before. When I worked they had to keep house. When they got work, of course, they didn't get much time, but believe me, they paid me enough that I could have a few nickels for myself. And to this day if I am busy they can dish up a dinner, iron a shirt, or sew a button on. When I was in the hospital my menfolks batched it, got their own meals, and found money to have the laundry done, or did it themselves. And if I need hose, hairdo, or something else, they say go do it, and eat spaghetti and like it, and think just as much of me. I have a friend with 10 in the family to cook and wash for, nine lunches to pack every day, but every one does his share of all the work. Doesn't hurt them, either. Now if you have to take a vacation to wake them up, do it and let us know what happens. Don't worry. If they're any good it'll bring it out. ONE WHO KNOWS.

DISSIPATED DOLLARS.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—In the new budget the planners have magnanimously cut the nonessential items. For three items—aid to farmers [which the farmers actually need less this year than they have any year in the last decade], aid to youth [such as salaries for college cheer leaders, etc.], and work relief [in this year of unprecedentedly high employment]—we are only to appropriate 1½ billion dollars.

We might better use this huge pile of dissipated dollars to purchase 15,000 fighter planes, or about the same number of medium tanks, or 2,000 large bombers. Even 15 or 18 warships, outmoded tho they be by air power, will come in handy. Aircraft carriers we can always utilize. Ask the dive bombed boys on Corregidor if they could use 15,000 fighter planes or tanks right now. Ask the lads who hung on to Wake Island with only a handful of planes whether they could have used some reënforcements. How far down the Malayan peninsula do you think our slant eyed brethren would be if they were opposed by 7,500 small tanks and a like number of pursuit planes?

ELBERT H. LONG.

NO SAMMIES, PLEASE.

Marlinton, W. Va., Jan. 9.—I notice in some news reports an abortive attempt to revive the names "Sammies" for American soldiers and "Aussies" for Australian. These were tried in World war I. and were objectionable to the soldiers. "Yanks" was accepted by the expeditionary force; and whatever the derivation of "Anzac," it has a tough sound befitting the hardy men who composed the Australian army. So, no more please, of these childish "Sammie" and "Aussie" monikers. N. R. P.

Veteran of 1917.

STILL PLAYING POLITICS.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Once upon a time we had a government of the people, for the people, and by the people. Now, we have a government of the politicians, for the politicians, and by the politicians. During these strenuous times can't the politicians rise to proper caliber?

E. W. W.

THE CANDLELIGHT SERVICE.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Let me thank you—I've already thanked Miss Winn herself—for an expert piece of reporting in her account in Friday's paper of the Epiphany service at the university chapel. By expert I mean that it really gave you the feeling of what happened. I've been trying unsuccessfully to write an account of that ceremony for several years. But she did it, and beautifully. MACK EVANS, Director, University of Chicago Choir.

ANOTHER SEAL IDEA.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—I suggest that our government issue one cent Victory seals, to be used on all our mail with the regulation postage stamps, as we used Tuberculosis seals recently.

MRS. W. H. POTTER.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problems a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self addressed envelope will expedite handling.

PROOF OF HEIRSHIP.

Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If Feb. 2 is the date set for claim day by Probate court how long will it be before qualified heirs be declared, by said court?

2. If one million dollars was the amount for federal inheritance tax, could you tell me what the amount of the estate would be?

3. Is there any legal way to rush matters along so I could turn an amount of inheritance into war bonds? E. J.

1. The claim day has nothing to do with the proof of heirship. Heirship could be proved at once.

2. No. But we would be able to say that the estate would be large enough so that an attorney should be employed, and the attorney so employed would be in a better position to answer you than we are.

3. Get in touch with the attorney who is handling the probate.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROPERTY LINES.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought a two story brick house in 1925. This house as near as I know was built in 1911. The house on the next lot to me was built sometime later. Now this property has been sold and the new owner says my house and garage are built over on a portion of his lot. Please advise what is the best thing to do in a case like this. T. D.

If you question his claim that you are encroaching you should employ a surveyor. If you become satisfied that you are encroaching you should offer to purchase at a reasonable price the strip in question. Since the limitation period as to land is 20 years, the house has not stood a long enough time to give a right by adverse possession.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

INHERITANCE TAX.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If the father, mother, and daughter have a building in joint tenancy, in the event both parents die before the daughter [1] would the law require that an inheritance tax be paid by the daughter, or [2] would it not be considered an inheritance, and she automatically become the sole owner of the building since it is in joint tenancy?

Say the parents wished two other persons [grandchildren of sons] to have a third portion of the building, [3] would a will be necessary?

4. Could the daughter, after death of parents, divide the property one-third to each grandchild, and one-third to herself?

5. Would an inheritance tax then be involved? E. M.

1. If the value is large enough the shares passing by survivorship would be taxable.

2. See 1.

3. No, as to joint tenancy property.

4. In general, any adult joint tenant could convey his undivided share and thus destroy the survivorship feature.

5. In general, there is no inheritance tax on conveyances made more than two years before death.

LINCOLN LETTER TO GEN. HOOKER VIEWED BY CLUB

Famed Message Bought by Chicagoan for $15,000.

Abraham Lincoln's famous letter to Maj. Gen. Joseph Hooker after appointing him commander of the Army of the Potomac was displayed to members of the Caxton club at a luncheon yesterday in the Midday club at 33 South Clark street.

This letter was described by Paul M. Angle, secretary of the Illinois State Historical society, as "the finest Lincoln ever wrote." The document was purchased two months ago by a Chicagoan, Alfred W. Stern, for $15,000. Mr. Stern has been a collector of Lincolniana for 20 years.

The letter is in a state of almost perfect preservation. It gently upbraids Hooker for thwarting his predecessor, Gen. A. E. Burnside, and for saying that "both the army and the government needed a dictator."

Calls on Hooker for Victories.

"What I now ask of you is military success, and I will risk the dictatorship," the harassed President wrote. His closing advice was: "And now beware of rashness—beware of rashness, but with energy, and sleepless vigilance, go forward, and give us victories."

Hooker, it is known, wasn't sure whether to be angry or pleased when he received the message, and decided that he would win a great victory before answering and "have it published in a Richmond newspaper."

Angle and Herman D. Smith, president of the club, which is composed of booklovers with a special interest in typography, said that Stern had done the people of Illinois a great service in bringing the letter to Lincoln's own state.

Recommends Illinois Writings.

In a talk on the early historical works in Illinois, Angle recommended the reading of the works of John Reynolds and Thomas Ford, governors during the early days of statehood; of Usher F. Linder, onetime circuit rider with Lincoln, and of Gustave Koerner, an early German immigrant.

He said that historical writers often foster misconceptions thru a sense of nicety. The men on the scene, he said, were less inclined to such mistakes.

"We have been taught in many books," Angle said, "that Nancy Hanks Lincoln was frail and ethereal. Linder has related that she was a great wrestler, and could throw any man of her weight in the pioneer community in which she lived."

Asks Books for Men in Service.

Carl B. Roden, librarian of the Chicago Public library, asked support for the Victory Book campaign, sponsored by the United Service organizations as a means of furnishing reading matter to men in military service. He urged that donors give the kind of books they like to read themselves. He added that technical works were much sought by soldiers and sailors who wanted to prepare themselves for postwar jobs.

HUNDREDS SAVED BY NEW SURGERY IN HAWAII RAID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—The war department disclosed today that hundreds of lives were saved after the Japanese attack on Hawaii by an adequate supply of blood plasma and by new sulfonamide therapy in the treatment of the wounded.

The war department made public a report, made to the surgeon general of the army by Dr. Perrin Long of Johns Hopkins university, sulfanilamide expert of the national research council, and Dr. I. S. Ravdin, lieutenant colonel in the medical corps, not on active duty.

Army surgeons said that in the first World war approximately 80 per cent of perforating abdominal wounds proved fatal despite the most advanced therapy of that day.

In the Honolulu attack virtually all of the abdominal cases which survived shock to undergo operative treatment with sulfonamide therapy recovered, the report said.

JAMES STEWART, BUILDER OF U. S. NAVY BASES, DIES

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—James C. Stewart, 81 year old chairman of the board of James Stewart and company, contractors engaged in building United States naval bases, died today of pneumonia.

In the World war Stewart erected a naval shipyard and numerous government buildings in this country and France. He designed the first woven submarine mats. The interstate commerce and labor department buildings in Washington and the capitol in Salt Lake City, Utah, were built by him.

One of his biggest jobs was a large part of London's underground railway system. He reconstructed the Galveston, Tex., waterfront after a storm in 1899.

If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles.

Worry, Colds, working too hard, or over-eating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.

Help Kidneys Remove Acids

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded.

Fourteen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.

Money Back Guarantee

Usually, in non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder disorders the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess Acids, poisons and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee with each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of all your money unless you are completely satisfied. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose, under this positive money back guarantee. Don't take chances on any Kidney medicine that isn't guaranteed. BETTY MEAD AND ENSIGN MARRIED IN LAKE FOREST

Ceremony Is Followed by Home Reception.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Miss Betty Mead and Ensign George W. Merck were married yesterday in the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest. After the ceremony the bride's mother, Mrs. Edward H. Bennett, and Mr. Bennett gave a reception in their Lake Forest home, Bagatelle.

The vivacious brunette bride wore a candlelight satin gown and carried a old fashioned bouquet of lilies. Her ivory veil was held by a coronet of old lace which had belonged to her great-grandmother. The four attendants held bouquets of autumn roses and trailing ivy against their pale yellow and talisman rose chiffon gowns. The matron of honor, Mrs. Joseph C. Sampsell, carried greenish-brown orchids and ivy.

Ensign Merck and his bride will have a 10 day wedding trip before he reports for duty. He is the son of George W. Merck of West Orange, N. J., who was here for the wedding, and Mrs. Walter Gibson of Mexico City.

Miss Martha Borland Weds.

Before members of their immediate families Miss Martha Borland and Ensign James M. Willis were married in the chapel of St. Chrysostom's church. Later Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland gave their daughter's wedding reception in their apartment in Lake View avenue.

The bride's simple white satin gown had a full skirt and small train. Her flowers were white camellias. Young Deborah and Audrey Plimpton, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Barton Plimpton of Framingham Centre, Mass., and the bride's nieces, were the only attendants. Their short gowns were of pale blue velvet, and they carried sweatheart roses. Robert E. Willis Jr., who came from Greenwich, Conn., with Mr. and Mrs. Willis Sr., was his brother's best man.

Miss Dunn Becomes Bride.

Miss Cynthia Louisa Dunn and Alexander Lynde Cochrane of Boston, Mass., repeated their wedding vows in St. Andrew's church at Boca Grande, Fla., where the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, have taken a home for the winter. The bride is a niece of A. Watson Armour and Laurance Armour of Lake Forest.

Miss Baumann Weds.

In the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Baumann of Northfield, Miss Christine Baumann became the bride of Edward Howland Collins. Mr. Collins is a son of Mrs. James M. Collins of Chicago.

NEED MORE LAKE DIVERSION FOR POWER: BARRETT

More than 130 million kilowatt hours of electricity could be generated yearly for war production if the flow of water from Lake Michigan into the Illinois waterway were increased from 1,500 to 8,000 cubic feet per second, Attorney General George F. Barrett reported yesterday.

Barrett is making a survey of the lake diversion problem and will emphasize the health phase in the demand for increased diversion. He also is consulting eminent medical men to ascertain why epidemics might be fostered by present unsanitary conditions in the canal.

Not to be overlooked when war demands utilization of every resource, he said, is the fact that the present flow of water will not operate all the hydro-electric units at Lockport. One of the generators is in operation only one-fourth of the time, he said.

Where the Lockport plant now produces 71 million kilowatt hours of electricity a year, admitting an additional 6,700 cubic feet of water per second into the channel would boost the output to 130 million kilowatt hours, Barrett said.

OFFICIALS URGE HOUSEWIVES NOT TO HOARD FOOD

Consumer Aids Charge It Is Unpatriotic.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—Housewives were urged today to resist high pressure sales appeals to buy more than normal quantities of food by two government consumer officials, Dan West, deputy director of the consumer division of the office of price administration, and Donald Montgomery, consumer's counsel of the department of agriculture. Overbuying and hoarding are unpatriotic, they asserted.

The warning that hoarding will boost prices was inspired by a handbill, circulated by a national distributor of groceries, which was sent to the officials by a housewife. One side of the handbill listed air raid precautions and the other encouraged hoarding by listing 64 different foods which should be stocked on emergency pantry shelves.

Would Clean Out Grocers.

"If all the families of the nation were to follow the advice in this handbill, most of the foods listed would be completely cleaned off grocers' shelves and go into storage, doing nobody any good," they said.

"Encouraging such a stampede to market by housewives could have no other effect than to create havoc, boost prices, and embarrass patriotic merchants who are not trying to profiteer on consumers in wartime.

Practice Not Widespread.

"Fortunately this practice does not appear to be widespread among food distributors. Grocers generally are helping to protect consumers from such appeals.

"Our advice to housewives who encounter this kind of panic arousing sales appeal is to do all they can to put a stop to it instantly. Go ahead and buy your food supplies as usual, tell any merchant who urges you to stock up on foods for the emergency that he is doing our country a serious injury at a time when every one must put our nation's safety ahead of personal advantage."

DEPUTY'S WIDOW SUES 6 TAVERN OPERATORS FOR $300,000 DAMAGES

Six tavern operators and owners of properties they occupy were named defendants yesterday in a $300,000 damage suit filed by Mrs. Margaret Christian, 5232 West 25th street, Cicero, widow of Deputy Sheriff Frank Christian, and her two sons. Christian, 40 years old, was directing traffic at Harlem avenue and 79th street when he was struck and killed by an automobile driven by Leonard Hall, 27, of 6217 South Menard avenue. Hall is not a defendant.

Expect 300,000 Visitors to See Exhibits.

Garden and women's clubs thruout the state yesterday began the sale of tickets for the National Flower and Garden show which opens March 15 in the International amphitheater at 41st and Halsted streets. The show will run for a week.

The flower show is sponsored by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. Each year it is held in one of the nation's large cities. Officials expect more than 300,000 visitors to view the exhibits in Chicago during the week.

Great Mass of Blooms.

Altho the show is to be held long before flowers begin to bud in this area, the entire amphitheater will be a mass of blooms. Spectacular flower gardens will fill the center of the amphitheater, and both wings will exhibit the work of amateur gardeners, garden and women's clubs, and school children.

One of the features will be Crescendo Falls, a rustic mountain waterfalls and woodland rising 50 feet in the air. The falls will have a drop of 26 feet over which more than 2,500,000 gallons of water will pour. Wild crabapple, dogwood in bloom, and hundreds of wild flowers will decorate the sides of the falls.

Tribune to Display Garden.

A typical backyard war garden, with living vegetables ready for harvest, will be displayed by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The garden will occupy a space 25 by 50 feet. It will be designed to produce enough vegetables for a family of five during the summer with an excess for winter use.

The vegetables have been started in green houses by Vaughan's seed store, and when the exhibit opens visitors will see sweet corn in tassel, cabbages, squash, peas, and beans all ready for the dinner table.

Among the clubs that have entered exhibits in the amateur section are are Chicago Garden club, Men's Garden club of Chicago, Blue Island Garden club, Flossmoor Garden club, Palos Women's club, Men's Garden club of Highland Park, Austin Women's club, Garden club of Morgan Park, Music Study club, Garden club of Forest Park, and many others.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Late this afternoon, on the sixth of a mile track on the Garfield park lagoon, eight boys and girls from Chicagoland will win Silver Skates championships. Their victories in the 25th Derbies sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will climax the winter's program of speed skating.

'Way back in 1917 when World war I. was entering its first winter campaign, 300 men raced for the first pair of Silver Skates. The name of the competition, now grown to national fame, was suggested by the story of Hans Brinker and the silver skates. Since 1917 more than a hundred winners have been crowned in their respective age divisions. Indeed, the growth to eight Derbies annually attracting more than 3,000 contestants, is evidence of the success of this idea to encourage amateur competition.

Seventy-Nine Races Held.

Seventy-nine preliminaries and semi-finals were skated yesterday. The largest entry was in the boys' junior class in which 20 trials were followed by five semi-final contests. Buddy Solem, skating for the CYO, won the fifth preliminary race in 1:01.8 and then came back to take the second semi-final in :56.3. He is one of the favorites to win Silver Skates in today's championship races.

Jerry Fahrenbach, a teammate of Solem's, won the first preliminary in this same age class for boys 14 and 15 years of age. He qualified for the championship Derby by finishing third in the first semi-final. Walter Rust Jr., Elgin, Ill., S. C., took the fourth semi-final in :53.1, best time for the division. He earlier had taken the 16th preliminary without difficulty.

Scotty Wallace of the Champaign-Urbana Skating club, reached the championship event in the boys' midget Derby by two victories. He led off the afternoon's program yesterday with victory in the first heat and he also won the first semi-final in the splendid time of :15.1. Allen Becker of the Barrett A. C., another outstanding contestant in this youngest age class, won the ninth preliminary heat and qualified by taking the third position in the third semi-final.

Tilden Is Reinstated.

Tim Tilden of the Glen Ellyn AAA, one of the better midget skaters, was unfortunate in the second semi-final in that he stopped short of the finish line while leading the race. Officials, recognizing that the error was partly due to a group of officials crowded along the course and that it was Tilden's belief this was the finish line, reinstated him for the championship race.

Dave Roll of the Glen Ellyn club, winner in the first boys' juvenile semi-final, is one of the favorites in this championship. He skated the 220 yard semi-final in :28.4. Donald

CANADA DRAFTS DUMART; OTHER STARS IN LINE

Hawks Unworried

THE announcement in New York yesterday that Woodrow [Porky] Dumart, star left winger of the Boston Bruins, had been called to immediate service in the Canadian army and the implication that many other National Hockey league players are eligible for the same call failed to worry officials of the Chicago Blackhawks.

Only three members of the Chicago ensemble are Canadian citizens without dependents and all are above the 25 year maximum age limit of the Dominion draft requirement. The trio comprises Alex Kaleta, first year left winger, and Joe Cooper and Bill Carse, both defense men.

New York, Jan. 17 [Special].—Canada summoned its first major league hockey player to the army today in the person of Woodrow [Porky] Dumart, star left winger of the Boston Bruins, and official hockey circles gloomily predicted half the National league's personnel was likely to follow. The 2? year old Dumart was given five days to report to military district No. 1, London, Ont.

Dumart had to register last year in Canada's first conscription, aged 21-25, and together with several dozen others had to be bonded by his club [subject to 48 hour recall by the Canadian government] before he was allowed to leave the country to play hockey.

But, as New York hockey officials pointed out, about 90 per cent of all hockey players have trained with the home guard during the summer months, and of these the unmarried men may also soon be called to the colors. Boston, Brooklyn, and New York Ranger officials all agreed about 50 of the league's 105 players are in imminent danger of following Dumart into service.

Both New York clubs may lose their goalies, Jim Henry of the Rangers and Chuck Rayner of the Americans. Both are 22 year old rookies.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PLANS MORE NIGHT GAMES AT SECRET MEETING

New York, Jan. 18 [Special].—Efforts to put the 1942 major league baseball season on a war footing in line with recommendations made by President Roosevelt were taken up today in a special meeting of representatives of National league teams. This was learned in spite of an air of mystery with which the officials surrounded the affair, called in advance of the regularly scheduled National league meeting here Feb. 2.

Representatives of the eight teams met with President Ford Frick, who first denied that the conference was held, and then admitted the discussion of urgent matters after he and a few of the owners who had not yet managed to flee the scene were cornered.

Three Problems Discussed.

The matters discussed, Frick said, were threefold. They concerned night baseball, with the possibility of increasing the seven game limit to meet President Roosevelt's expressed recommendation; the playing schedule, and the manner in which the league will operate in the forthcoming sports drive to purchase defense bonds.

Also discussed, according Frick, were the 1942 contracts which, following the President's assuring note, can now be sent to the players without further delay.

When asked to comment on the report that the meeting also, if not primarily, had been called to take up the rumored financial difficulties of the Philadelphia Phillies, Frick returned to his best denying form. He said the session was not called for that purpose.

Phillies Are Problem.

Frick admitted the financial status of each of the eight clubs was discussed in a general way, but that what is known as the Philadelphia situation, was not stressed.

It is no deep secret that the National league has its problems in the lowly Phils. But Frick insisted the situation in that quarter apparently was no more acute than in the past.

"As a matter of fact," said Frick, "the league last summer offered to lend the Phils some money to operate in deals at the world series draft meeting, but Gerry Nugent [owner of the Phils] never took up the offer.

Frick also denied that the National league at any time has threatened to foreclose on loans it previously has made to the Phillies.

Take Up Night Baseball.

Apparently the most trying problem before the National league magnates is the matter of night baseball. Saddled with a seven game limit for each home club, which is written in the league's constitution, the league now fears it may run into an awkward position in view of President Roosevelt's suggestion for expanding night baseball in order to give war workers more opportunity for relaxation.

It also is known that most of the National leaguers, headed by Larry MacPhail, remain stanch supporters of the seven game principle. Frick stated, however, that if the government asked that the number of night games be increased the league certainly would meet whatever number be required.

"However," he said, "we feel it would be a dangerous precedent to wipe out the rule entirely." He thought the league's most probable action would be to suspend the rule for the current year.

It is considered certain that the National league, in joint session with the American league Feb. 2, will vote to increase each team's night schedule to 14 games.

Will Play Full Schedule.

Regarding the schedule, Frick said that a full 154 game schedule will be adopted.

Frick cleared up certain points regarding contracts which in recent weeks have become more or less obscured. Should the season for any reson end prematurely, payment on contracts would automatically stop.

So-called bonus contracts are illegal when made conditional upon a number of games a player must play, the number of victories a pitcher might win, or a player's batting average.

Such clauses cannot be written into contracts, altho Frick admitted that verbal violations of the intent of the rule doubtless exist. The only conditional clauses permitted are on salaries based on club's attendance figures.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17. (AP)—The Chicago Blackhawks outfought and outsmarted the Toronto Maple Leafs for a 4 to 2 National Hockey league triumph tonight. The victory, the Hawk's fourth in a row, moved them to within four points of the Leafs and New York Rangers, who are tied for second place. The Hawks left immediately after the game for Chicago, where they meet the league leading Boston Bruins in the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night.

Bill Carse of Chicago and Hank Goldup of Toronto were the scoring stars of tonight's game, played before 11,500. Each got two goals.

Carse Gets First Goal.

Carse opened the scoring at 5:13 of the first period and Chicago held the lead for some three minutes when Goldup counted to tie the score.

Coach Doug Mills used 20 players, 12 of whom scored. The first team rested the entire second half. Andy Phillip, starting guard, made 12 points in the first period to lead in scoring.

In the second half Ed Parker, Illinois sophomore from Cicero, clicked on three long shots and three free throws to take second scoring honors. Lineup:

MINNESOTA WINS NO. 4

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 17 [Special].—Minnesota's high speed basketball offense clicked only in spurts tonight, but this was enough to give the Gophers a 44 to 32 victory over Michigan before 11,800. It was Minnesota's fourth victory is five games and the fourth defeat for the Wolverines in five games.

The Gophers ahead, 22 to 15, at half time, and 37 to 20 going into the last 10 minutes. Here a Wolverine rally picked up eight points in two minutes and Don Mattson and Don Smith came off the bench to take charge. Mattson promptly scored twice and the Gophers finished with the reserves playing a stalling game.

Mattson totaled 13 points to lead the Gopher scoring. Michigan's Jim Mandler also scored 13 points. Score:

Columbus, O., Jan. 17 [Special].—A field goal by Jim Sims in the last 45 seconds tonight gave Ohio State a 54 to 52 uphill victory over Iowa, its first Big Ten success in four games. BADGERS COME FROM BEHIND IN LAST 2 MINUTES

Clason Misses Shot for Tie Score.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

In a furious drive, during which the lead changed twice in the final three minutes, Wisconsin's basketball team whipped Northwestern last night in Chicago Stadium, 49 to 46.

The Badgers led by a point with 42 seconds to play when Capt. Henry Clason of the Wildcats missed a free throw that would have tied the score. In the last 10 seconds, Ray Patterson counted the superfluous field goal from under the backboard after a quick break from the pileup at the other end of the court.

The pace and fire of the scrap between these bitter Big Ten rivals had the crowd of 13,000 in an uproar. The thousands continued cheering for several minutes after the teams left the floor.

And Out Goes Clawson.

Anything might have happened in the last minute. The Wildcats, altho they had led thruout the first half, gradually slipped behind, 38 to 32. Then Don Clawson, burly center, managed two field goals from close in.

Almost immediately, Clawson committed a fourth personal foul on John Kotz as the Badger dribbled down the side line. Kotz made the point and Wisconsin led, 39 to 36. Clason's two free throws, when fouled by Ed Schiewe, again narrowed the margin to a point. Charles Epperson hooked a goal from the corner and when Harlo Scott of the Badgers came thru with a follow shot, Northwestern seemed definitely out of the game.

Wildcats Lead—for 15 Seconds.

Almost as quickly as one can read this, Russ Wendland sank a long shot, Otto Graham got another, then Clason sent the Wildcats ahead 44 to 43 with another long distance field goal. Before Northwestern fans had finished their first full throated cheer, Epperson scored from 15 feet out. Wendland's ninth field goal of the game gave the Wildcats a last chance for victory at 46 to 45.

Bob Alwin dribbled in close from the side for Wisconsin's 47 to 46 lead and then came the climax at the Northwestern penalty line.

The free scoring game unquestionably was the best of the stadium season. It was Wisconsin's second victory in five games and Northwestern's second defeat in the same number of contests. The Badgers' greater all round speed and a shade better ball handling were foundation for the triumph.

Wendland on Scoring Spree.

Wendland continued the scoring spree he started at Great Lakes Wednesday night and in the two games now has 16 field goals. Bud Hasse, Wildcat center, made his first conference appearance.

Not more than four points separated the teams in the first half until Northwestern's rally in the final minute opened up a 24 to 18 gap.

EXPENSE MONEY TRIPS UP THREE TENNIS PLAYERS

Parker, Schroeder, and Kramer Hit by USLTA.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The United States Lawn Tennis association today reprimanded and penalized three of its ranking players—Frank Parker, Fred Schroeder, and John Kramer—for expense money they accepted at three 1941 tournaments.

The penalty was that the three, all from California, will be permitted to receive expense money from only seven tournaments instead of eight this year in addition to the national and sectional championships.

Name Tourneys Involved.

The tournaments involved were the New York state championships at the Jackson Heights, N. Y., club; the Eastern Clay Court title events at the Seminole club, Forest Hills, N. Y., and the Spring Lake, N. J., Invitational tournament.

The association also forbade the three clubs from paying expense money at this year's tournament to any players without reciving permission for the U.S.L.T.A.

Parker was ranked No. 3, Schroeder No. 5, and Kramer No. 9 on recommendation of the ranking committee. Actually, however, they each move up two notches since the two ranking players, Bobby Riggs, and Frank Kovacs, have turned pro.

Riggs Turns Pro—Escapes!

Charles S. Garland, chairman of the amateur rules committee, said the committee had temporarily suspended Frank Kovacs last fall and had been investigating Bobby Riggs before both players turned professional. "The evidence was such," he concluded, "that we also would have suspended Riggs if he had not already turned professional."

The committee censured Earl H. Cochell Jr. of Los Angeles and William Gillespie of Atlanta "for unsportsmanlike conduct" in a Canadian tournament, but invoked no penalty.

Combine Two Meets.

The association, in adopting the report of President Holcombe Ward, canceled the men's indoor meet unless the championship committee can find a suitable site and sufficient interest to hold it in March. Oklahoma City, where the tourney was held last year, asked permission to cancel because of insufficient interest. The women's event will be held at the Longwood Covered Courts club, Brookline, Mass., March 23-28.

The national rankings, with Riggs No. 1, Kovacs No. 2, and Parker No. 3 in men's singles and Kramer and Schroeder as the top doubles combination, were adopted without comment.

Forest Hills Anniversary.

In awarding both the singles and doubles championships to the West Side Tennis club at Forest Hills stadium next August, the sanctions and schedule committee expressly pointed out that the Longwood Cricket club of Chestnut Hills, Mass., had voluntarily given up its right to the men's doubles in order to add to the West Side club's celebration of its 50th anniversary. Other national championship dates:

Girls' hard court, May 11-19, California Tennis club, San Francisco; men's clay court, June 12-21, Lake Forest, Ill. [site tentative]; intercollegiates, June 22-27, Tulane university, New Orleans; interscholastics, July 6-11, Merion Cricket club, Haverford, Pa.; junior and boys, Aug. 3-8, Culver, Ind.; public parks and playgrounds, Aug. 10-16, Memphis, Tenn.; veterans' doubles and father and son doubles, Aug. 17, Longwood Cricket club, and girls' grass court, Aug. 29, Philadelphia Cricket club.

Ward referred to the impending shortage of tennis balls and expressed the hope that the government might find some way to relax its restrictions to permit some manufacturing to continue. The supply on hand, he estimated, would be sufficient to last four or five months with rationing.

A MISTAKE, SAYS KRAMER

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan 17 (AP). — John Kramer of Oakland, Cal., one of the three ranking players reprimanded and penalized by the United States Lawn Tennis association today for expense money accepted at three tournaments, said tonight "the whole thing was a mistake and I'm glad the association let us off so easy."

He asserted he and two fellow Californians, Fred Schroeder and Frank Parker, had misinterpreted the definition of a sectional championship tournament and had thought they could accept the expense money without exceeding the limit placed by the USLTA.

"I'm sorry the thing happened and I think the association was very fine not to make the penalty more severe," he declared.

EDDIE EAGAN TO COACH NEW YORK GOLDEN GLOVERS

New York, Jan. 17 [Special].—Eddie Eagan will coach New York's 1942 Golden Gloves Inter-City team. The man who was the 1920 Olympic heavyweight champion, amateur heavyweight champion of the United States, heavyweight champion of the British empire, middleweight champion of the allied armies at the close of World War I., and is generally acknowledged to be one of the greatest boxers ever developed, today agreed to take time off from his legal practice to coach Gotham's 1942 team.

"I'm accepting this post," he said, "as a gesture to emphasize my belief that every youngster who may see service in this war should be physically fit. Many of the boys who'll be on the Golden Gloves team will already be in service and many of the others will be in uniform before long.

"I discovered when I was in the army myself during the last war that boxing is the best sport to develop an all-around soldier. It not only develops every muscle in the body but instills those qualities of resourcefulness, initiative and courage vital to the individuals in a victorious army.

Bierman Pulls Sleeper Play to Get Trophy

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 17 (AP).—Pulling another one of his celebrated sleeper plays, coach Bernie Bierman showed up at the field house tonight to participate in ceremonies incident to awarding the Dr. H. L. Williams national championship football trophy to the 1941 Minnesota football team.

Bierman, who has been asked by Uncle Sam to give up his coaching duties for a wartime command in the corps was supposed to have left late last night for Quantico, Va., to take his first examinations.

And There Was Bernie.

But tonight, before 15,000 fans gathered for the Michigan-Minnesota basketball game, the major strolled to the center of the fieldhouse floor to receive the plaque, conceived by the Minnesota "M" club.

Capt. Bruce Smith next introduced Coach Bierman, who said briefly that Dr. Williams "certainly laid the groundwork for all successes in Minnesota football."

Rivals Are Present.

In the crowd were such Western conference leaders as Maj. John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner; Coach Fritz Crisler, University of Michigan; Coach Mal Elward of Purdue, and L. W. St. John, athletic director at Ohio State.

Illinois Beats Chicago, 54-26; Gophers Win

With ten minutes to play the score was 45 to 45 and the lead then changed three times until Gecowets' foul shot deadlocked the battle, 52 to 52. After Milt Kugh, Iowa's high scorer with 15 points, missed a free throw, the ball was recovered by Bob Shaw, Ohio State center. He flipped it to Gecowets, who passed it half way down the floor to Sims, and the latter dribbled in for the winning shot. Score:

HANK LUISETTI TO FACE CHICAGO FIVE ON SUNDAY

Hank Luisetti, one of basketball's all-time stars, and Joe Stampf, star last year at the University of Chicago, will try and outdo each other in a scoring way next Sunday night when their respective teams—Phillips "66" and Acme Steel, play in the Chicago fieldhouse.

Luisetti is making his first middlewest appearance with the Oilers, 1940 National A. A. U. champions. Hank scored 1,596 points during his career at Stanford, which ended in 1938.

Normal Whips De Kalb, 58-44; Takes IIC Lead

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 17 [Special.]—A heavy bombardment in the last 10 minutes gave Illinois Normal a 58 to 44 victory over De Kalb Teachers tonight and the lead in the Illinois Intercollegiate conference race. It was Normal's second league victory in as many starts and seventh triumph in 10 games. The two teams are the defending co-champions this winter.

ILLINOIS FACES MINNESOTA AND IOWA THIS WEEK

Purdue Is Idle During the Mid-Year Lapse.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The Western conference basketball race, longest in more than a decade, comes to the annual schedule break for most of the members after this week's play. Because of the difference in scholastic organization this period is not identical and Purdue, for instance, does not play this week.

Seven games are scheduled, however, and while several may be closely fought, only two or three stand out in the program. Iowa's invasion of the Illinois court tomorrow night is best of the four games on tap and Illinois quite likely will be party to the best game Saturday night when Minnesota also plays in Champaign.

N. U. at Ohio State.

Other games tomorrow evening are Northwestern at Ohio State, Minnesota at Chicago, and Michigan at Wisconsin. In addition to the Minnesota-Illinois scrap Saturday, Ohio State plays at Michigan and Indiana travels to Wisconsin.

The Illini, so far, have largely fulfilled their promise. Picked to figure prominently in the title race, altho depending on several sophomores, they have done just that. Various combinations have been tried by Coach Doug Mills. Vic Wukovits, veteran senior guard, has been seen at center, while Capt. Bill Hocking, normally a guard, was early shifted to forward, but has been sitting on the bench most of the time. Recently Ken Menke and Jack Smiley have been at the forward posts; Wukovits or Art Mathisen, at center, and Gene Vance and Andy Phillip at the guards. Menke, Smiley, Vance, and Phillip are sophomores.

Wildcats vs. Irish.

Unless the Ohio State jinx catches Northwestern, the Wildcats are expected to beat the Buckeyes tomorrow night. Led by the sophomore sensation of the year, Otto Graham, Northwestern has sailed easily into the first division after losing only one nonconference game and that to Notre Dame. The Wildcats will have their chance to even the score with the Irish Wednesday night when they invade the Notre Dame fieldhouse. Capt. Henry Clason, who pairs with Graham at forward; Don Clawson, center; Art Kruger and Russ Wendland, guards, have been the starters in most games. Bud Hasse missed nearly all of the preliminary games because of illness.

Minnesota opens the week's schedule at Chicago and the Gophers, who shared the record for total points in a game by beating Purdue 68 to 50 last year, but were displaced by Northwestern [Northwestern, 69; Chicago, 50] this year, may get that honor back. The winning Northwestern tied the record set in 1937 when Purdue beat Indiana, 69 to 45.

Wisconsin is defending champion and while the Badgers eventually may climb much higher, initial losses indicate that they have no chance to retain their championship. Wisconsin made its breaks last season, winning two games in overtime, and beating Purdue by a point at Lafayette before climaxing the campaign with consecutive triumphs over Indiana and Minnesota. The Badgers also won the National Collegiate championship.

NORTHWESTERN WRESTLERS BEAT BRADLEY TECH

Northwestern's wrestling team opened its season by defeating Bradley Tech, 30 to 0, at Patten gym yesterday. The Wildcats scored two falls and five decisions. Art Netthercott, sophomore 121 pounder, and Maury Stern, 145 pounder, won falls.

The summaries:

121 pounds—Art Netthercott, Northwestern, threw Al Lautenschlager, Bradley, 6:50. 128 pounds—Forfeit. 136 pounds—Herb Weinstein, Northwestern, beat Ralph Coletta, Bradley, 6 to 2. 145 pounds—Maury Stern, Northwestern, threw Bob Lane, Bradley, 1:52. 155 pounds—Ed McMillan, Northwestern, beat Jim McGinn, Bradley, 10 to 3. 165 pounds—Ed Wojceichowski, Northwestern, beat Matt Lauck, Bradley, 14 to 12. 175 pounds—Dick Truby, Northwestern, beat Harold Morrison, Bradley, 15 to 9. Heavyweight—Dave Allen, Northwestern, beat John Knezovich, Bradley, 9 to 4.

JOHN BERARDINO OF BROWNS GOES INTO AIR CORPS

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 16 [Special].—Johnny Berardino, star shortstop for the St. Louis Browns of the American league, joined the United States army air corps as an aviation cadet today.

The former University of Southern California athlete passed his physical examination at the army induction station and was sent with a group of 18 other cadets to the Higley field reception center in Chandler, Ariz., where he will receive his basic flying training.

Navy Fencers Triumph Over Cornell Team, 15-12

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17 (AP).—Showing superiority with the foil and epee weapons, Navy's swordsmen cut their way to a 15 to 12 victory today over Cornell's fencing team. The Tars captured the foil match, 5 to 4, and the epee contest, 6 to 3. The Big Red took the saber event, 5 to 4. Middies Dick Walker and Gail Ellerbe were high scorers of the day, with three victories each. It was Navy's first match of the season.

YES, WE'LL HAVE NO REPORT ON TODAY'S SKIING

Six to Compete Incognito in Norge Tourney.

Ski Facts

EVENT—37th annual international ski tournament sponsored by Norge Ski club.

PLACE—Norge club slide near Fox River Grove, Ill.

TIME—1:30 p. m.

HILL RECORD—195 feet, established by Torger Tokle in 1941.

HOW TO GET THERE—By train: North Western, trains leaving at 7:25 a. m., 9 a. m., and 11:25 a. m. By motor: Rand road, U. S. 12 and 22, or Northwest highway, U. S. 14.

BY JAMES SEGRETI.

The day has arrived when the frost bitten ski reporter can come into his office, shake the icicles off his brow, flatly state he hasn't the names of the winners of the meet—and smile. It may occur this afternoon when the Norge Ski club presents its 37th annual tournament on the organization's grounds near Fox River Grove.

Six Norwegian riders, now stationed at an aviation training base in Canada, are responsible for causing this difficult job of ski reporting. The names of the jumpers have been withheld by officers at the camp because of fear that their identity will endanger the lives of relatives in the Nazi occupied country.

Which Olaf Do You Like?

There were efforts during the week by the Norge club publicitors to distinguish the Norwegians by handing them monickers such as Kaare, Andvik, Sigurd, etc. However, as a veteran of nine Norge club campaigns and also a number conscious gent, this writer will report the Norwegians as Olaf No. 1, Olaf No. 2, Olaf No. 3, Olaf No. 4, Olaf No. 5, and Olaf No. 6.

Of course, identifying the Norwegians by numbers will not simplify the reporting of the meet. Officials, who have been urged on numerous occasions for all-out efforts to release their official point standings before the next dawn, are not impressed whether the skiers have names, numbers, or royal family titles.

Kotlarek Is a Contender.

American jumpers in their press conference yesterday assured reporters there is no need for fear the Norwegians will upset the regular method of recording the meet. They plan to give the Norwegians an exhibition of skillful jumping on American hills. Among the confident United States riders is Arthur Devlin, 19 years old, of Lake Placid, N. Y., who was the only jumper to defeat Torger Tokle, last winter's amateur champion.

George Kotlarek of Duluth, Minn., former national titleholder, also believes he can better the record of 195 feet established by Tokle last year. Other leading class A entrants include the Bietila brothers, Roy and Walter, of Ishpeming, Mich.; Gene Wilson and Bob Riley of Coleraine, Minn., Jimmy Running and Fritz Pohlman of Beloit, Wis., and Hartwig Strand of Minneapolis.

Ralph Bietila, brother of Roy and Walter, is the favorite in the class C competition. Ralph holds the national championship in this division and has beaten his brothers in practice leaps. There will be 11 other riders in the Class C events, among them Bobby Hein of the Norge club and Ray Oja. Sixty riders have entered the class B competition and 15 will compete for the senior division title.

Defends Senior Title.

Ingvar Anderson of New London, Wis., is the defending champion in the senior class. His principal rivals for the 1942 title include Knute Johnson of Beloit, Wis., and Ernest Jacobson of the Norge club.

Entries in IAC Boxing Meet Close Tonight

Amateur boxers today will receive their last chance to register for competition in the 11th Illinois Athletic club tournament in the IAC gymnasium, 112 South Michigan avenue, Tuesday and Wednesday. Deadline for entries is midnight tonight. Any boy 16 years or over who never has boxed professionally is eligible to compete.

Thus far two of last year's champions have sent in their entries. They are Clayton Worlds, heavyweight, and Robert Satterfield, welterweight. Both will represent the Savoy Athletic club. The other 1941 champions are Harold Dade, 112; Bertrand White, 118; Ray Brown, 126; Robert Earl, 135; Lou Angelucci, 160, and Hezzie Williams, 175. All except Earl and Williams, both of whom since have turned professional, are eligible to return for competition.

List CYO Entries.

Dade and Brown are members of the Catholic Youth organization team, but neither's name was listed yesterday when John C. Karas, who is in charge of the CYO boxing director during the illness of Thomas O'Connell, submitted the organization's representatives.

CYO standard bearers will include Ed Kaminski, heavyweight; Frank Bausone, lightweight; Jack McBurnie, bantamweight, and Ray Murray, flyweight. Bausone was runner-up to Jack Ballangee in the featherweight finals in the 1940 tournament.

Yankees Sell Rookie Outfielder to Dallas

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 17 (AP).—Dallas of the Texas league has purchased Arnold Carol Traxler, 23 year old outfielder, from the New York Yankees. Last season he played with the Augusta, Ga., team in the South Atlantic league.

SKIERS ON THE WING—HAPPY LANDING!

Tournament day is here for the Norge Ski club of Chicago, which presents its 37th annual meet this afternoon on its slide near Fox River Grove. This is a general scene of the hill, showing—from an exaggerated angle—a skier in flight. Among the entrants are six Norwegian aviators, now stationed at a training base in Canada. Fearful that the Nazis may purge members of their families, should their identities become known, the Norwegians will be known only as Olafs Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6.

Jacobs Seeks Title Battle for Robinson

New York, Jan. 17 [Special].—Negotiations for a world welterweight title fight between Ray Robinson, who stopped Fritzie Zivic in the 10th round in Madison Square Garden last night, and Champion Freddie Cochrane are expected to be completed early next week by Promoter Mike Jacobs. The bout would be held Feb. 20 in the Garden for the Infantile Paralysis fund—the second in Jacobs' series of benefit bouts.

Cochrane, who enlisted in the navy immediately after winning the title from Zivic in an upset last summer, is stationed at the Newport naval training station and Jacobs spent all day today endeavoring to gain a furlough for the champion to train for the title bout.

Believe Navy Will Approve.

Cochrane had little trouble getting away from the navy for a nontitle fight in December for a Miami, Fla., local charity, and observers believe the naval authorities will okay this one too. However, the big hitch seems to be that Cochrane seems more willing to fight the entire Jap navy than to fight Robinson.

Cochrane's fear of Robinson is well founded. Anybody who saw the hard hitting Harlem colored lad in action last night will tell you that. In hanging up his 27th straight victory and 21st knockout the ex-Golden Glover, who also was unbeaten in 89 amateur fights, looked like a miniature of Joe Louis.

Zivic Praises Conqueror.

Even Zivic, still nursing the welts of his defeat, today hailed Robinson as a great fighter, altho he still maintained that Referee Arthur Donovan shouldn't have been so hasty in halting the bout.

During the rather onesided but nonetheless rough encounter, Robinson suffered a long cut over his right eye, but it was not as deep as at first feared and no stitches were required. He'll be able to keep his date Feb. 20 with Cochrane . . . or any other welter available.

Runners-up in Des Moines will receive silver belt buckles and special prizes will be given novices.

The Cedar Rapids, Ia., Gazette tournament does not open until Feb. 9, but a dinner will be held Thursday evening which will inaugurate the ticket sales campaign.

DAVIS BIDS FOR SIXTH STRAIGHT; FACES NYBERG

Box 10 Rounds Tomorrow in Marigold Garden.

Bill Davis, aggressive junior welterweight of Minersville, Pa., will be searching for his sixth consecutive victory in a 10 round bout tomorrow in Marigold gardens. Three of these conquests were scored in the Marigold ring, the first over George Nyberg last Aug. 11 and the two others over Harry Dubs. In between, the 19 year old Pennsylvanian defeated Sammy Julian in Wilmington, Del., and Billy Marquart in St. Louis.

Joyce, a month ago, lost his first fight in a year when he spotted Sammy Secreet, Canonsburg, Pa., welterweight, 8 pounds. Prior to this setback Willie went undefeated in 1941, vanquishing Ted Christie, Quentin [Babe] Breese, Leonard Bennett, and Dubs. Willie scored a second round knockout over Christie. He also fought to a 10 round draw decision with Aldo Spoldi in the Marigold arena on Nov. 24. Supporting matches tomorrow:

Jimmy Crow, Danville, vs. Dany Villa, Chicago [5], 150.

Armand Sicilia vs. Willie Jones [4], 135.

Luther Brent vs. William Morton [4], 160.

CYO Boxers to Receive League Championship Trophy Feb. 12

BY FRANK MASTRO.

The Catholic Youth organization, whose boxers clinched the first Chicagoland Amateur Boxing league championship by beating Savoy Athletic club, 5 to 3, in CYO center gymnasium on Friday, will be awarded a trophy emblematic of the title at the finals of the city Golden Gloves tournament in the Coliseum Feb. 12.

The award, contributed by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will be received by the Rev. Harold Kenny, who will represent the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, founder and director of the CYO.

In an earlier meeting the Savoys held the CYO fighters to a 4 to 4 draw decision. Despite the 6 to 2 score, the rematch was bitterly fought with the result that several decisions were disputed by fans. These included Curtis McDaniels' defeat of Roosevelt Thomas, Savoy light heavyweight; Al Walker's conquest of Melvin Johnson, CYO lightweight, and Harry Stephens' defeat of Reedy Evans, Savoy middleweight.

Boo Verdict for Dugo.

Even a nonleague bout on the card between Joe Dugo and Jimmy Hunt, who met in an encore for the 1941 CYO welterweight medal, was booed when Dugo was awarded the verdict.

Camp Grant finished second in the race, due to having registered five triumphs and two ties, while losing only one decision. The representatives of the army camp at Rockford would have gained a share of the trophy if the Savoys had beaten or tied the CYO team. This was made possible by Camp Grant's 5 to 3 victory over Fort Sheridan in the post gymnasium at the latter camp on Thursday.

Because of this setback, its fourth in seven appearances, Fort Sheridan wound up in the cellar. Milwaukee concluded its schedule in third position, while the Madison A. C., the Savoys, and the Ashland A. C. shared fourth. Each finished in possession of three triumphs and three defeats. The Illinois A. C., with two victories and five losses, ended in fifth place.

Plan New Race Soon.

The league competition was launched three months ago in an attempt to develop teams for interclub competition with a view toward revitalizing the sport and to stimulate interest in the major tournaments, such as the forthcoming Illinois Athletic club and Golden Gloves events.

The plan was voted a success by members of the league committee at a special meeting Dec. 18 in the Skyline Athletic club. In fact the group was so enthusiastic about this new brand of amateur fighting that it unanimously voted to resume the competition after the Golden Gloves tournament is concluded in March. The men said the league bouts made a valuable contribution to the current physical fitness program and each pledged his continued coöperation. Before a new league race is started, however, one or two rules will have to be amended, John Behr, league chairman, said yesterday.

GOODYEAR Announces

THE TIRE-LIFE EXTENSION PLAN

AN ORGANIZED PROGRAM FOR HELPING YOU GET ALL THE MILEAGE OUT OF YOUR TIRES THAT THE MANUFACTURER BUILT INTO THEM

YOU'VE BEEN WANTING IT

• Here's a well-rounded and easy-to-follow program for e-x-t-e-n-d-i-n-g the life of your tires, and thus adding thousands of miles to your car's usefulness.

NOW YOU CAN HAVE IT!

THIS PROGRAM is sponsored exclusively by GOODYEAR dealers and service stores—recognized tire experts who are backed by the experience of the world's greatest rubber company, and who have had longer training in tire protection than any other group in the country.

HOW IT WORKS

In the next few days, Goodyear dealers and service stores will be able to issue to you a TIRE-LIFE EXTENSION POLICY tailored exactly to your individual needs.

They will first diagnose the "health" of your tires, and estimate their probable life. Then they will show you how, with your co-operation, this life can be extended . . . perhaps for several thousand miles, and in some cases even for an additional year's service.

Your Policy will eliminate hit-or-miss methods of taking care of your tires, and bring you the regular week-after-week services of a qualified tire specialist.

Because the program is arranged in the proper way, it will not only save you rubber, but will also save you money!

WHY YOU SHOULD GET THE POLICY

Nobody can predict how long the present rubber restrictions will remain in force. But the chances are that the tires on your car right now will be your last until the day of Victory. And if even one fails, and you're without a replacement, your car's usefulness will be ended "for the duration."

That is why your tires should be given the protection of the TIRE-LIFE EXTENSION POLICY. Here is a program designed to stand guard on your tires week after week, and month after month, "to keep you rolling"—and do it on an economical basis!

So, no matter what make your tires are, call on your Goodyear dealer and learn the details. You'll find him at the location that carries the familiar blue-and-yellow Goodyear Diamond and the sign that says—"TIRE-LIFE EXTENSION STATION"!

PARALYSIS FUND CROWD SEES AND HEARS MIRACLE

Girl Swimming Champion Tells Story in Loop.

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

The attraction was a tall, trim girl whose fresh, young face was devoid of makeup and whose bright, brown eyes sparkled as she spoke. She was Nancy Merki of Portland, Ore., 15 years old, holder of four national and one world swimming championships. As she stood erect and eager behind the counter, she was the picture of health and glowing youth.

The story she told, however, drew a different picture. It was of a little girl 7 years old, stricken with a puzzling disease which shriveled one frail, small foot and left a family distraught and uncertain. A country doctor scratched his head and remarked, "I can't say what disease the little lady has, but she'll be crippled all her life, I'm afraid. But that won't matter much, since she's a girl and will be wearing long skirts when she grows up."

Swims Way to Health.

It did matter. The little girl was Nancy, herself. The Merki family decided that long skirts were not the solution and sent for another doctor after Nancy had been confined to her bed for six months. He diagnosed the disease as infantile paralysis and prescribed massaging, light treatments, and swimming lessons.

Determined to become as active as other girls, Nancy took to swimming as successfully as the proverbial duck. At 10 years old, one year after she took her first lesson, she won the local three mile swim in Oswego lake, an adult competition. At 12, she captured the 800 meters free style event in the far western competition in 12 minutes and three seconds.

Last year she broke her own and the national record for the 800 meter in the AAU national women's swimming meet in 11 minutes and 16 seconds. In addition, she holds the world's record for the 200 meters free style event.

It was because of this outstanding record in turning a handicap into a championship that Nancy was in Chicago yesterday. She stopped off to do her bit in the Cook county infantile paralysis drive while on her way to Washington, D. C., where she will be the guest of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in the White House tomorrow.

She Has a Busy Day.

Between trains, she was a whirlwind of activity. She shopped, took a swim with the Chicago Polio Swim club in the Medinah Club of Chicago and was presented with a medal for achievement by the club. She had a lovely, gooey luncheon because she wasn't in training and abhors steaks. Then she made the rounds of the stands in the loop where funds are being collected for the drive.

"It is because a doctor didn't realize I had infantile paralysis, that I know how important every dime is in this infantile paralysis drive," she told the people who gathered around the stands. "Every dime means more knowledge gained in how to overcome this dreaded disease. President Roosevelt knows this and has done more for the campaign than any other one person in the country.

"This is one time when a person shouldn't mind hearing the plea of 'Brother, can you spare a dime?'"

ILLINOIS WHIPS MICHIGAN AGAIN IN HOCKEY, 6 TO 2

Ann Arbor, Mich, Jan. 17 [Special]. —Illinois' hockey team scored its second triumph of the season over the University of Michigan tonight, 6 to 2. The Wolverines checked viciously and passed accurately, but could not match Illinois' speedier pace. The winners scored once in the first, three in the second, and two in the third periods.

Lou Ferronti, with the assistance of Clint McCune, made the first goal at 6:20. In the second period Roland De Paul clicked one shot at 4:08. Six minutes later Bob Collins skated in to put thru the Wolverines' first tally. Then Bibs Miller scored a pair of goals for the Illini to put them out in front, 4 to 1.

Doug Hillman for Michigan and the Palazzari brothers, Aldo and Mario, each counted in the third period.

Sparta, Viking Elevens Play in Cup Match

Jim MacDermott.

It's the Vikings vs. Sparta today in Chicago's long awaited soccer showdown. These rivals meet at 2:30 o'clock in a second round National Open cup game in Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue. A preliminary exhibition at 12:30 involves the American Eagles and the Slovaks, who still are in the running in the National Amateur title eliminations.

The Slovaks next will meet the winner of today's game between the South Side Swedes and the Olympias at 82d street and Yates avenue.

The open section battle will bring together undefeatable Sparta and the Viking team which won every amateur title in Illinois last season. The Spartas will be strengthened by the return of Jimmy MacDermott and Willard Lang, who were missing during a New Year's day triumph over the Natural Set-Ups of St. Louis. The Vikings, handicapped by injuries this season, also hope to be at full strength. The lineups:

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.

The Red Cross is to benefit from another series of matches, this one to be rolled at 8 o'clock tonight on the Twentieth Century alleys at 3200 North Cicero avenue, with some of the city's classiest teams—both men and women—competing. The schedule as prepared by Bill Hargadon will match Joe Wilman's Budweisers with the Joseph L. Gills, the Chapin & Gores with the Walter Edens; Heileman's Old Style Lagers with Johnson's Aquarium Tap left handers, and the Budweiser Girls with the Logan Square Buicks. These contests will be followed by singles and doubles, including a Joe Wilman - Adolph Carlson match and another involving Hargadon and Wally Freitag. The entire gate will go to the Red Cross.

The first block of the home and home series involving the Traffic clubs of Chicago and Milwaukee will be rolled Saturday night at Hank Marino's recreation in Milwaukee. Eight five-man teams will compete, with total pins to determine the winner of the Hank Marino trophy. The return match will take place at Bensinger's Adams-Wabash center Feb. 14. . . . Albert and Gilbert Ernst won first money, $40, and the medals in the 28th annual brothers' two-man tourney at Bensinger's Randolph center. They fired a 1,433 total, including handicap. Fifty team prizes were awarded. . . . Hyde Park recreation leagues which already have voted to accept prize money in defense stamps will have almost $10,000 to distribute. Leagues not yet heard from are expected to run the total to $25,000.

Takes Postponed Series, But Johnny Does It.

It took a postponed series to bring out some extraordinary scoring in the Playdium Major. It was done by Johnny Munch, who came up with 269, 223, 222—714 as his 7th Street Hotel team took a pair from the Williams Jewelers. . . . Knuckle Ball John Loughlin fired one of the best series of his career, a 665, in the Ted Lyons Major Wednesday, the same night the Edens and Wesley Smiths pared the Phil Smidts' lead from six to three games. . . . Wallace Coals piled in 2,983 pins for three victories but merely kept pace with the leading Fritzl Scheffs in the Samuelson Major. The Scheffs scored a triple over the Budweisers.

The Eden Insurance five toppled 3,161 pins with an 1,111 game to win three from the Chris Bauers in the Beverly Major. Greene's Restaurant shot 3,015 in taking a pair from the Superior Motors. Paul Krumske was the individual star, firing a 719 total. Other scores:

Bill Buckley, 695; Jimmy Kintz, 679; Don Pinc, 676; Bill Lenzen, 675; Dick Winsberg, 668; Wimpy Moysey, 667; Ed Scesny, 662; Barney Grogan, 642; Harry Bland, 640.

Runner-up Art Williams Jewelers and third place Budweisers will clash in the No. 1 attraction of the Gold Coast Major Tuesday night. Other matches:

Detloff Florals vs. Acme Furnace, International Sports Show vs. Triangle Shirts, Gills vs. De Luxe Recreation, Gold Coast vs. Ballentine's, Pogue's Old Times vs. Glunz Liquors.

Honor scores in the Marigold Major:

Idea: It was midnight supper for the Venice Inn tavern team—on the sponsors—for rolling 3,009, high series in the Pullman company's Calumet league. . . . Tommy Chwala got 667 and Stanley Pasciak 648 to show the way for the Prospect Clothiers in their three game triumph over the Tremont Motors in the Stack & Ryan Major. And Joe Migdal was the siege gun, with 656, as Meister Brau won a full set from Pepsi-Cola. . . . Meister Braus, leaders by three games, will meet the runner-up Brownson council in the top match of the North Side Major K. of C. league tomorrow. Bill Dillenburg, with 682, was high as the Meisters scored a triple last week. . . . Jim Keating, who fired a 300 game in the recent Gold Coast team sweepstakes, will receive his rewards—a watch and a medal—when the Classic league rolls at Gold Coast, 1213 N. Clark street, tonight. The schedule:

Schlitz Beer vs. Koenig Brau Beer, Washington Shirts vs. National Bowling Equipment, Monarch Beer vs. Pabst Blue Ribbons, Ambrosia Beer vs. Blatz Beer.

Two Season Highs, but They Lose Two Games.

Incongruity: Weinberg Clothiers shot the season's high game, 1,106, and series, 3,037, in the Hyde Park Major Wednesday, yet dropped two games to the Hyde Park Herald. Weinbergs fired 1,106, 954, and 977; the Heralds, 1,001, 969, and 989, for 2,959. Leading scores in the league:

Ed Brosius, 669; Merle Leinweber, 645; Al Lorenz, 643; George Lindmark, 641; John Rieman Sr., 635; Al Hug, 621.

Bill Meek of the Quaker Oats Mixed league started with nine in a row at Congress recreation, but a railroad in the 10th spoiled his chance. Final total, 266. . . . Edelweiss stretched its Greater Chicago Traveling lead to six games by shutting out Meister Brau while Playdium was pulling into a tie for second with the Glunz Liquors by winning the odd game from the Glunz five. League's high scores were Russell Cramer's 265 and 684. . . . O'Keefe Coal company will be sponsor of the night at tomorrow's Windy City Major matches. The schedule:

American Transportation vs. Mineralites, Betinis Boosters vs. Budweisers, John Tomans vs. O'Keefe Coals, Sunnyfords vs. Burlington Zephyrs, Furman Funerals vs. Nonebetter Ice Creams, Vogel Brothers vs. Old Style Lagers, Ace Fasteners vs. Bireleys, Gills vs. Reichman Jewelers.

Hawkeyes moved into a second place tie with the 400 in the C. & N. W. league by winning two while the 400 was dropping a pair to Northwestern Limited.

BOBBY SPECHT TAKES FIGURE SKATING CROWN

Joan Mitchell Wins Senior Women's Title.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Bobby Specht, skimming and twirling thru a spirited routine, won the Midwestern figure skating championship for the third consecutive time as the annual meet came to its conclusion last night in the Chicago Arena. Joan Mitchell swung thru a fast moving series of gracefully executed maneuvers to take first place in the women's division. Both of these champions are members of the Figure Skating club of Chicago.

Both were forced to do some of their finest work to earn the No. 1 rating because each had a remarkably capable rival. Arthur F. Preusch II. was runner-up to Specht and Mary Louise Premer, was second to Miss Mitchell. Both of these contenders are from St. Paul.

Eight Prizes Awarded.

Prizes were awarded in eight types of competition. Other winners included James Lawrence of St. Paul in the men's junior; Margaret Grant of St. Paul in the women's junior; Warren Headlow of Cleveland in the men's novice, and Mary Frances Greschke of Detroit in the women's novice.

There also were team events. Robert Uppgren and Janette Ahrens of St. Paul took first prize in the senior pairs and Jean Pierre Brunet and Donna Jean Pospisil of Cleveland in the junior pairs. Two Chicagoans—Charles McCarthy and Dorothy Burkholder—won the contest for dance teams.

Skate Sensationally to Music.

Yesterday's morning and evening program was considerably more spectacular than that of Friday. Tho the first day's events were highly interesting to experts, they consisted largely of standard school figures which were more graceful than brilliant. In the final day's program, however, the contestants cut loose with sensational free style skating to music. Tho this didn't count quite as much in the calculation of the judges as did the execution of the standard school figures, it drew enthusiastic applause from the gallery.

The midwestern event was so smoothly conducted that it is considered almost certain that the national figure skating championship meet will be awarded to Chicago. This was scheduled to be held in Berkeley, Cal., but due to military restraints in that area it has been decided to transfer it. It will be held Feb. 18, 19, and 20.

Summaries follow:

FLY TYING SOARS TO NEW HIGH IN WINTER DEBATING

Fishermen and Bird Lovers All Up in Arms.

BY BOB BECKER.

If fishermen are looking for a subject to be discussed by the hot stove league, the most active "league" of anglers doing business at this time of the year, we suggest that they take up the Izaak Walton league-Audubon society scrap over the question of legislation prohibiting the use of feathers in tying fishing flies.

This verbal clash is a dandy, with Kenneth Reid, cool, sane manager of the league on one corner, and John H. Baker, executice director of the National Audubon society, in the other.

Baker's idea is to prevent all traffic in wild bird plumage regardless of any need or lack of need for such measures. It's blanket legislation to include even plumage of legally shot birds such as pheasants and pests like sparrows, starlings, or crows.

Already Baker has pushed legislation of this type thru the New York legislature. Warnings are being sounded that other states had better watch out for the New York type of law may be put before more legislative bodies.

Just Nuisance Legislation.

The Izaak Walton league says that it wishes the Audubon society well in its efforts to protect rare and diminishing species. Certainly all of us who have studied birds, like birds and have worked to increase bird life join in that wish. But, as Reid points out, this new program on feathers is something else again. It looks like just so much nuisance legislation.

We have been doing a little checking up on the types of feathers used by some of the big fly manufacturers. The idea was to find out how many rare and magnificent species of wild birds were being hunted down for the fly-tying trade. Frankly, the investigation proved to be something of a dud.

In order of their demand and common use here are the most popular sources of feathers for flies: Number one position is jointly held by the common chicken and barnyard goose. Then in order come the common mallard [the big overgrown domestic variety, easy to get from any game farm], ringneck pheasant [America's most common game bird with some 2,000,000 killed every year in South Dakota alone], and the ordinary barnyard pigeon.

By the use of many dyes the fly-tiers get remarkable results. For example, when all of us fishermen buy a "Red Ibis" fly we can be sure that it's a common goose feather dyed red. Inasmuch as some years ago we tried to find the red ibis in the wilds of Brazil and collect some for the Field museum, we have some idea of how tough it would be for a fly-tier to get the real thing.

Proposed Law too Broad.

The Izaak Walton league argues that it's silly to include the feathers of legally killed wild game birds in the Audubon law because any one familiar with the small amount of plumage used by the entire fly tying industry knows that market hunters are not going to sweep thru the country killing such birds for the feathers.

And we can't see any danger to crows, starlings, and sparrows if the law is not passed in all states. As a matter of fact, there are several eastern cities and hundreds of orchard owners who would be money ahead if some one would reduce the starling population.

Bright Willie Wins Hialeah Feature Race

Miami, Fla., Jan. 17 [Special].—Bright Willie, a bronze little son of Brilliant-Sweet Face, owned by Ralph McIlvain, made his bid as Alsab's rival this afternoon when he whipped the favored American Wolf by half a length to take the $5,000 Hialeah stakes, the season's first rich plum for 3 year olds.

Bright Willie, with Alfred Robertson in the saddle, broke fast and took a lead of two lengths over the field of 13, with Jockey Eddie Arcaro and American Wolf at his heels.

As they passed the half pole Arcaro moved alongside and the two raced down the stretch together, Bright Willie on the inside, the Wolf and First Fiddle in the outside lanes. They finished in that order in 1:12 1-5. A crowd of 11,676 saw the race at Hialeah Park.

Earns $4,950 for Owner.

The winner, purchased as a colt for $2,000, earned a net of $4,950 for his owner today. After a mediocre season at Chicago, Bright Willie made his first two New York starts winning ones, but dropped a decision to American Wolf at Empire City last fall. This was his first start for the year.

Conn McCreary rode Gallant Play home a $19.80 winner in the seventh. Rahanee was second, Brown Bomb was third, and the favored Castigada back in the fold.

The daily double, made up of Menex in the first and Sir Gibson in the second, paid $71.70 for $2. Menex, son of Nenow, paid $29.80. He was ridden by Kenny McCombs. The time was :34, with Yolandita taking show from Cananea.

Triumph Easy Winner.

Sir Gibson triumphed by five lengths over Who Reigh. McCreary made it his seventh winner of the meet and returned $5.50 to his backers. He caught the early leaders at the top of the stretch to win in 1:53 3-5.

Apprentice Willy Day, riding the 5 to 1 Spread Eagle, beat Wendell Eads and the favored Putitthere in the third, taking down the purse by one and a half lengths. Holding the inside, Day fought off every challenge made by Eads from the half mark home. The duel was timed in 1:13 1-5.

VALLEY DECIDES FRESHMEN WILL BE VARSITY MEN

New Rules Take Effect This Year.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 17 (AP).—The Missouri Valley conference voted today to permit freshman participation in varsity athletics.

"Because of conditions arising from the war, the conference modifies one of its regulations for the duration of the emergency only," faculty representatives and athletic directors of the six member schools announced.

It Starts This Year.

"To take effect in 1942," the statement continued, "all regularly enrolled students are eligible to participate in athletics under the following provisions:

"Transfer students, except graduates of junior colleges, must meet the one year residence requirement before they are eligible for varsity competition; three years of varsity competition are permitted for transfer students; graduates of high schools who have met all college entrance requirements and are matriculated as regularly enrolled students, carrying a minimum of 12 hours of academic work, will be eligible for immediate varsity competition."

"In order for a freshman to remain eligible for his second semester, he must pass a minimum of 12 hours of work during the preceding term. This specification was intended to remove the possibility of so-called tramp athletes, it was explained.

Drop Spring Events.

Lifting the freshman rule as a wartime measure was the principal action at the meeting. The change had been proposed because of the loss of many college players to the armed [illegible]s and the probable adoption by some Valley schools of three-year [illegible]ses for a degree by adding a third semester.

Conference tennis, golf, and swimming events were dropped and instead the championships will be decided on the results of competition in dual meets. However, the Valley track and field meet will be held here as scheduled.

Bruins Meet Ft. Wayne Five on Wednesday

The Chicago Bruins, who snapped their seven game losing streak with a 53 to 31 conquest over Toledo last week will be seeking revenge for two defeats by the Zollner Pistons of Fort Wayne when the Hoosiers invade the Coliseum Wednesday night. In the season opener the Bruins dropped a 48 to 46 decision. Two weeks ago Fort Wayne beat the Chicagoans, 47 to 38.

The addition of Johnny Drish and George Morse to the starting lineup has strengthened the Bruins for their uphill struggle to gain a place in the National league play-offs in March. In order to reach this goal, the Bruins must win 10 of their 14 remaining games.

Places in the play-offs are far from settled despite the early runaway pace by the defending champion Oshkosh quintet.

In games this week contenders face each other. Oshkosh plays in Indianapolis today, while Akron plays at Fort Wayne tomorrow. The schedule:

Today—Oshkosh at Indianapolis.
Monday—Akron at Fort Wayne.
Wednesday—Fort Wayne at Chicago; Toledo at Akron.
Thursday—Oshkosh at Sheboygan.
Saturday—Sheboygan at Akron.

Yachting Notes

E. G. Daniels, owner-skipper of the racing-cruising cutter Fair Wind, has been chosen by Commodore Manning Hodgdon of the Jackson Park Yacht club to succeed William J. Moore as chairman of the club's sail race committee. Moore, who has headed the committee for the last 25 years without pay or expenses, remains as honorary chairman in an advisory capacity. His was the longest term for any club official in Lake Michigan yachting history.

In addition to Daniels, the committee consists of Oscar Eskonen, Mailton R. Rusco, John Reitz, and Robert Danks.

Hodgdon appointed Durl Ruger, a former commodore of the club, to head the power boat race committee, composed of Al Bennett, Lauren Drake, Fred Gardiner, Harry Roberts, and Park Verner. Stuart Bradley was named judge advocate. Dr. Alexander H. Davis owner of a Star class racing sloop, was made fleet surgeon.

Commodore David C. Zimmerman, a member of the Navy League of Illinois' executive committee, will speak before members of the Jackson Park Yacht club next Sunday in the clubhouse at the outer Jackson park harbor. He will show how the United States navy compares with fleets of the rest of the world, illustrating with the navy's latest moving pictures in sound and color.

Members of the Chicago Corinthian Yacht club, with their families, will gather for their second annual Kingfish dinner at the Chicago Corinthian Yacht club on Friday night. Color movies of yacht racing at Montrose harbor will be shown.

The stretch drives of this famous jockey were responsible for the coining of the phrase "Garrison finish."

Cochran Beats Rubin; Ties for Cue Lead

Welker Cochran, the methodical shot maker from San Francisco, gave added evidence yesterday that he is one of the main threats barring Willie Hoppe's march to a third straight world three-cushion billiards championship.

The smooth stroking Californian, making a run of nine for the second time in the tournament, defeated Art Rubin of Brooklyn, 50 to 38, in 39 innings. This victory put Cochran in a three way tie for the lead with Hoppe and Joe Chamaco. Each has won three and lost one. In the second match on yesterday's program in the Terrace Casino of the Morrison hotel, John Fitzpatrick, the other California entrant, whipped Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia veteran, 50 to 39, in 43 innings.

Rubin Loses Lead.

This brought the title play to a close until 2 o'clock tomorrow when Chamaco and Hoppe will engage in their fifth of nine scheduled matches.

Cochran played brilliantly during the first half of yesterday's match. Rubin, who has won but one game in seven starts, led 13 to 10 in the first half of the 18th inning, but Cochran moved into the lead with a cluster of six in his half of that frame. Welker added four more while Rubin was counting one. Cochran then pulled away with a high run of nine to lead, 29 to 14, at half time.

Welker slowed up in the second half, using up 18 innings to score the necessary 21 points for victory, while Rubin was counting 24 points. Rubin's high run was five.

Fitzpatrick Leads from Start.

In his match with Reiselt, Fitzpatrick started building up a lead from the break until he was ahead, 20 to 9, at the end of 13 innings. At half time he was in front, 26 to 20. A rally by Reiselt brought him up to 38-37 in the 36th frame. Then Fitzgerald pulled away, closing the game with a run of seven. Otto's best run was four.

BULLA MAY QUIT GOLF TO BECOME AIR LINES PILOT

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 17 (AP).—John Bulla, Greensboro, N. C., pro competing in the Oakland Open Golf tournament, told friends today he would leave Sunday for Chicago to take examinations to become a commercial air lines pilot.

He said if he passed the examination he would return to play in the San Francisco open tournament starting next Wednesday, then would give up golf for the duration of the war. Bulla flies his own plane and has more than 500 flying hours to his credit. He is 27 years old, married, and the father of two children.

NEW OELWEIN COACH.

Oelwein, Ia., Jan. 17 [Special].—R. R. Northrup, coach at Johnson township High school of Barnum, Ia., has been named assistant athletic coach at Oelwein [Ia.] High school. He succeeds Earle Mickle, who has resigned.

See Hope of Solving Golf Ball Shortage

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Confidence that the country could be kept supplied with golf and tennis balls and other sports equipment was expressed today by one of the leading representatives of the athletic goods industry.

C. F. Robbins, president of A. G. Spalding and Brothers and a liaison man between the manufacturers and the government, said the shutting off of rubber supplies had made the future unpredictable and acknowledged that all companies had begun rationing in a small way, but he added he felt sure some solution would be found.

The present supply of golf and tennis balls probably will be sufficient to meet normal demands until early summer, he explained. Baseballs are "in the clear" as far as shortages of material are concerned.

No Big Stocks.

The only restrictions aside from rubber that might be considered important are on steel, but the grade of steel used for shafts of golf clubs and other sports equipment is so different from that used for armaments that Robbins expressed doubt any conflict would arise.

He said no one could tell what was in prospect regarding rubber, declaring:

"As soon as the United States became involved in the war the government very properly halted all withdrawals from the nation's 'stock pile' of crude rubber, and all we have been able to do since Dec. 7 was to complete the processing of such rubber as we had already started.

"This was only a small amount, of course, and since the manufacture of athletic goods is a seasonal business we do not carry over big stocks from one year to the next.

Need Very Little Rubber.

"The entire annual consumption of rubber for all athletic goods normally is between 750 and 1,000 tons. That is just a drop in the bucket, perhaps one-sixth of 1 per cent of the yearly consumption of rubber in the nation. But the people who make girdles and balloons and other things also need just a little to keep going and a few 'mickles' makes a 'muckle.'

Badger Regents Approve Odell as Football Aid

Jockey Garrison as he appeared many years after his heydey triumphs, such as the one in the 1893 American Derby. Snapper died in 1930 at the age of 62.

Grover Cleveland Fuller, as an apprentice, rode Highball to victory in the 1904 American Derby. He died of a knife wound in 1928 at the age of 46.

A City and a Sports Department

(The Tribune Grows Up with Chicago)

[This is the fifteenth of a series of articles on the highlights of the development of sports in Chicago, with especial reference to the part the Tribune sports department played in reporting them from pre-Civil war days to the present time.]

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

"THEY were coming down the home stretch for the second time when something blue sprinkled with golden stars shot out, and, easily maintaining the first place, it cantered under the wire, the jockey looking back complacently at the horde of horses thundering after him. The tornado swept by in the narrow lane between two human hosts; and then all over the dry track swarmed the people like so many black ants. All the time there was a roar, not startling, not ear splitting, but deep and varying, like the voice of the ocean. The horses came straggling back to the judges' stand, the figure in blue swinging his cap to the multitude that greeted him.

"It was Garrison, who the next moment was borne away triumphantly on the shoulders of his admirers, while the winning horse, Boundless, was led to the stable, jauntily lounging away with precisely the gait of Lottie Collins when returning to the footlights for an encore. The tenth Derby was over—the greatest in point of attendance, in point of stakes, and in point of the time recorded, ever run in the western hemisphere. This is not an account of the race. Elsewhere it is accurately and at length described. The above is only an impressionistic picture of the finish."

We had a hard time convincing our Mr. Barry, who has been our turf critic since the spring of 1939, that the above was the introduction to THE TRIBUNE'S report of the [old] World's Fair American Derby at the [old] Washington Park track on June 24, 1893. There was a mutual suspicion between the two of us that it was the sort of prose you can read any day by young reporters and columnists out of college only a few years. Yet that was only the beginning. From there the editor of the day lived up to his finishing promise. His staff, ladies and gentlemen both, went on for more than seventeen columns, after having taken over the front page with a handsome line drawing, which included, as reproduced on this page, an artistic chart of the progress of that race, won by Boundless, with Snapper Garrison up.

We have attended the Kentucky Derby in the company of such famed turf experts as the late Harvey T. Woodruff and French Lane, but never hope to see the like of the space that was given to the American Derbies that were run in old Washington Park, from 1884, when Isaac Murphy, the great colored rider, rode Modesty to victory, until Grover Cleveland Fuller, in 1904, won on a horse named for a dish that instantly became famous—Highball.

Tribune Reporters, Editors Were Racing Pioneers.

It was fitting that THE TRIBUNE of those times should have devoted considerable lineage to horse racing. The sport always had been popular in the town, back to the '40s and '50s, when trotting tracks were in operation, long before the flat competition was in vogue. Gen. Phil Sheridan, the Civil War hero of Winchester, who had been one of the leaders in founding a professional baseball club here, was the first president of Washington Park. [No, it wasn't where today's Washington Park track is. It was located in an area bounded by Cottage Grove and South Park avenues, 61st and 63d streets. Our grandparents used to live across the street from it.]

TRIBUNE reporters and editors were among the men closely connected with the turf affairs of that era. Henry Ten Eyck White, still a resident of Chicago was an expert on harness racing. John L. Hervey, who, under his own name and under the pseudonym of Salvator, is still editing an annual review of the nation's leading horses, was a TRIBUNE racing writer in the early '90s. Mr. Hervey's treatment of thorobred breeding is a perennial classic of erudition. Joe Murphy, the Judge himself, who is familiar to many Chicago racegoers as a track official, is now in Coral Gables, Fla., and was once assistant to the man who introduced to Chicago the finished racing form. Another pioneer Tribune writer was Harvey T. Woodruff, who once served as secretary of the Western Jockey club. Hugh E. Keough, who served as patrol judge on a number of tracks, founded the Wake of the News.

That would be the late Frank Brunell, who was sports editor of THE TRIBUNE until 1894, when he left to found the present Daily Racing Form. New York papers had attempted to run past performances and actual running charts, but it was Brunell who first polished them up to a point where the blades of the '90s didn't have to go down to the paddock at Washington Park and Hawthorne and ask the horses where they had been and under what weight and over what distances and what sort of going.

Some Famous Jockeys—Murphy, Garrison, Fuller.

Out of the American Derby emerged three of the greatest jockeys ever to hoist themselves on a horse. Isaac Murphy, the slender Negro, rode three Kentucky Derby winners and four in the American Derby here. Edward H. Garrison, the Snapper himself, whose stretch talents were to make the phrase "Garrison finish" a part of the language, rode Boundless in that famous World's Fair Derby. THE TRIBUNE chart of the race reveals that Snapper [so named by his tutor, Pa Daley, because of his alert and wiry terrier physique] took Boundless from ninth place at the half to fourth at the stretch, eventually winning by six lengths. Those of the throng who had ridden out in broughams, hansoms, four-in-hands and tallyhos who had bet on Boundless and Garrison were rewarded with $41.05 in the mutuels.

Another rider well remembered was Grover Cleveland Fuller, who, only ten months out of an apprentice's saddle, rode Highball across the line in the 1904 Derby that ended for twelve years the career of the big race. The ups and downs of the turf finally caught up to Fuller, one of the highest paid riders on the American turf. He went broke, and ultimately died in May, 1928, after having been stabbed during a party. He was only 46 years old. His death preceded by two years that of Garrison, who died in an eastern hospital at the age of 62.

DUCK HUNTERS TO HEAR TOM MAIN ON WEDNESDAY

More than 350 Chicago duck hunters are expected to hear Thomas C. Main, Canadian general manager of Ducks Unlimited, report on the 1941 work of that organization when he addresses a dinner meeting on Wednesday in the Svithiod club, 624 Wrightwood avenue.

Mr. Main, considered the outstanding authority on American waterfowl problems, has been in charge of all the duck restoration work sponsored by Ducks Unlimited in Canadian marshes to produce more birds and conserve their nesting areas. His talk before Chicago sportsmen will be illustrated with a new motion picture in color titled "In Defense of Ducks" which was taken last summer on the Canadian nesting grounds of the ducks and geese.

Dinner reservations may be made thru the Chicago office of Ducks Unlimited, Room 1032 at 231 S. La Salle street, telephone number Franklin 6260.

ILLINI TRUSTEES TO MEET; MAY ACT ON COACH

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 17 [Special].—University of Illinois officials announced today the next regular meeting of the board of trustees of the state coeducational institution would be held in the Illini Union building of the Chicago departments at 715 South Wood street, Chicago, next Saturday morning.

Inasmuch as spring football drills usually start the middle of February, there is a possibility the board will take some action concerning the appointment of a successor to Bob Zuppke, who late last year resigned as head football coach.

20 WILL RIDE IN CHICAGO 6 DAY BICYCLE RACE

Peden Brothers Break Up; New Pairs Formed.

Ten evenly matched teams made up of the outstanding riders of the United States, Canada, France and Belgium will compete in Chicago's forty-fourth international six day bicycle race which starts in the Coliseum a week from tonight. Harry Mendel, manager of the race, has gathered together a field which includes veteran stars and several young newcomers.

Heading the list are William [Torchy] Peden of Canada, the world champion, who has won 37 races, more than any other rider; Cecil Yates, champion of the United States, who has chalked up 14 victories; Gerald Debaets, title holder of Belgium and winner of 17 races, and Alfred Letourner, champion of France, who has 22 race triumphs to his credit.

Six Chicagoans Entered.

Six Chicagoans are entered. They are Yates, Jerry Rodman, Charley Yaccino, Bill Jacoby, Ed Carfagnini and Bill Kuehn. Carfagnini and Kuehn made their first professional appearance in Milwaukee. This will be the first professional appearance of Jacoby.

In looking over the field, the fans are still talking about the splitup of the famous Peden brothers, Torchy and Doug. Doug will ride with Yates; Torchy will be paired with Yaccino.

Doug Appears a Bit Irked.

The split came about at the request of Doug, who said: "Every time Torchy and I win a race, Torchy gets all the credit and if we lose, as we did in the recent Milwaukee grind, I get the blame for it. I think I can beat Torchy and I want to get the opportunity to prove it."

This probably will be Yaccino's last race until the war is over. He is off on a furlough now from Camp Davis, N. C., and will return as soon as the Chicago race ends.

Silver Skates Derby Titles at Stake Today

Julie Beich of the Northwest Skating club entered the championship event in the girl's junior Derby by winning the ninth preliminary and the second semi-final. Mixie Kitazaki, a teammate, was second in the fourth semi-final. She won the 10th trial in :34.4. Best mark in the trials in this division was made by Marge Allen of the CYO, but she failed to qualify in the semi-finals. Her preliminary mark for 220 yards was :32.2.

Trials will be conducted today in the boys' intermediate, men's senior, and girls' intermediate and senior classes. Thousands gathered yesterday to watch the speed races. Twice as many are expected this afternoon. The division of the program was made several years ago when it was no longer possible to jam 200 races into one afternoon. Hours of preparation by the clerks are necessary, of course, before the first race is held.

200 Qualifying Medals.

All contestants reporting for their tests receive souvenir bronze buttons. Each skater winning a preliminary race yesterday was awarded a gold medal, and all winners this afternoon will receive the same prize.

At least 200 gold qualifying medals are awarded each year and thru these the inexperienced contestants are encouraged to participate.

Today's contestants are in the boys' intermediate, men's senior, girls' intermediate, and senior age classes. All are 16 years of age and over and all must be registered with the Illinois Skating association which has sanctioned the derbies. Registration permits competition in all other events held under the sanction of the association.

Report on Time!

Contestants must report today between 10 a. m. and 12 noon for these racing numbers. This applies only to the four age classes skating for the first time. Numbers will be distributed by the clerks in the Garfield park boathouse. Contestants in the other derbies who have qualified for the semi-finals or championship events need not report until noon.

Distances for today's races follow:

Event.	Preliminary.	Final.
Boys' Midget		220 yards
Boys' Juvenile		440 yards
Boys' Junior		Half mile
Boys' Intermediate	Half mile	One mile
Men's Senior	One mile	Two miles
Girls' Junior		440 yards
Girls' Intermediate	440 yards	Half mile
Girls' Senior	Half mile	One mile

The skaters leading the three longest championship races for the greatest number of laps will receive gold awards. These are in addition to qualifying gold medals, the souvenir bronze buttons, and the championship list of 40 prizes. Those finishing second in each title race receive chromium skates; those finishing third, bronze skates. Silver and bronze medals are the fourth and fifth place prizes.

The team trophy quite likely will be won by either the Catholic Youth organization or the Northwest Skating club since these teams lead in the point score of the Illinois Skating association.

MOVE TO INSURE U.S. BOND SALES IN ANY CRISIS

Plan to Let Reserve Banks Buy Freely.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

A move by the government to prepare for any possible emergency in treasury financing, such as a sudden temporary chilling of the public toward federal bonds in event of a severe military reverse, apparently is behind the current proposal to change the existing rule barring federal reserve banks from buying bonds directly from the treasury.

This was the view expressed yesterday by one of the nation's top bankers in Chicago after disclosure of provisions of the new war powers bill introduced in the senate Friday by Senator Frederick Van Nuys [D., Ind.] at the request of the justice department. One of the many provisions of the bill would permit the federal reserve banks to deal directly with the government in bond transactions.

Buy in Open Market.

Under present regulations, the reserve banks may buy or sell government bonds in the open market only, thru an open market committee composed of members of the federal reserve board and officers of the 12 reserve banks. One function of the committee is to direct bond buying or selling for all 12 reserve banks in such a way as to keep the market price of federal issues orderly.

Commenting on provisions in the new bill, the banker, president of one of the largest loop banks, said that most bankers in the past have opposed direct sale of government bonds to reserve banks because there are times when it holds a threat of drastic inflation.

However, he said, the war involves considerations not applicable to peacetime, and bankers might generally accept the view that the proposed revision could prove useful in case of a military setback.

Some Possibilities Cited.

It is conceivable, he said, that the public demand for government bonds could fall off for a time if England should be invaded or if [and he termed this example highly improbable but illustrative of the way in which plans are being made for any eventuality] an attack on New York should snarl banking activities there for a day or two just at a time when the treasury was starting a large financing operation.

If any such event should interfere with public demand, the proposed change in the law would make it possible for the treasury to go directly to the reserve banks with its bonds, the banker observed.

He said bankers were pleased that the change would be limited to an emergency period ending shortly after the close of the war.

The experience of Europe after the first World war has made American bankers wary of any system which permits a government to unload its bonds directly on central banks. In the postwar era, inflation ruin was spread in continental Europe largely because governments on the continent forced loans on the central banks, with these banks then using the government obligations as a means of expanding note circulation.

Fought Out in U. S. in 1935.

In the United States this issue was fought out when the banking act of 1935 was being shaped. Bankers were fearful that the treasury, in that period of peacetime deficit financing for relief and other purposes, might dump government paper into the federal reserve banks in such volume as to set off serious inflation. The banning of all but open market dealings in the reserve banks' transactions in government bonds was agreed on with that fear in mind, the banker said.

"But what is desirable in peacetime is not always desirable in wartime, and I doubt that the proposed change, if limited to the duration of the war, will meet serious opposition from bankers," he said.

SENATE GROUP TO HEAR AGAIN FROM CORCORAN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—Chairman Harry S. Truman [D., Mo.] said today the senate defense investigating committee would recall Thomas Corcoran soon for further questioning concerning his activities in behalf of firms which have received government contracts.

Corcoran, former adviser to President Roosevelt, testified recently during the committee's investigation of lobbying activities, asserting his work had been strictly that of any attorney and had not involved lobbying.

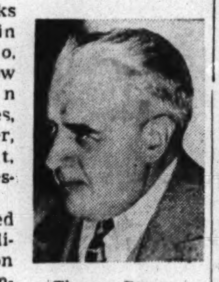
Disclose Start of a Vast New Armor Plant

Construction of a vast plant for the manufacture of cast armor to be used in tanks will be started in East Chicago, Ind., tomorrow by American Steel Foundries, Thomas Drever, president, announced yesterday.



Thomas Drever.

He estimated the cost of facilities at 16 million dollars. The company, he said, will build the structure with Defense Plant corporation funds, serving as DPC agent without compensation except for acutal "out of pocket" expenses. The company will operate the plant under lease and the government financing agency will retain title to the property.

Boosts Area's Capacity.

The development will mark an important addition to Chicago area steel making capacity, since the project includes four open hearth furnaces and auxilliary facilities.

Capacity of the plant will be twice as large as originally intended, Drever said. He could not disclose exact capacity because of war department regulations. Originally a 9 million dollar plant was planned.

He said the plant eventually will employ about 4,000 persons and that production will begin later in the year. The plant site embraces 82 acres.

Produced Under Subcontracts.

The cast armor will be produced under subcontracts and will be delivered to several tank manufacturers. Already American Steel Foundries is producing armor and other tank equipment in its present plants.

In making the announcement Drever said his company is geared for "all-out" defense production. He pledged coöperation with the government "in every possible way" to facilitate the arms effort.

Steel Schedule Calls for Increased Output

Ingot steel production in the Chicago district will start tomorrow at 102.3 per cent of theoretical capacity, compared with 101.7 per cent last Monday, mill schedules indicated yesterday.

HENDERSON REQUESTS COAL MERCHANTS TO HALT PRICE ADVANCES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16 (AP).—Reports of increases in retail coal prices in several areas brought a request today from Price Administrator Leon Henderson that dealers stabilize prices at levels prevailing between Dec. 15 and Dec. 31.

"It is of the utmost importance that the price of coal shall not be increased except in such instances as may be authorized specifically by the Office of Price Administration," he said.

In another statement, the OPA urged housewives to resist any suggestions from merchants that they stock up "emergency pantry shelves."

Deputy Director Dan West and Donald Montgomery, consumers counsel in the department of agriculture declared "This kind of panic-arousing sales appeal encourages hoarding and therefore is unpatriotic."

COURT REFUSES REMOVAL ORDER IN FIDELITY CASE

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—Federal Judge Ben Moore refused today to grant an order for the removal of West Virginia Auditor Edgar B. Sims to Michigan, where he is under indictment in the Fidelity Assurance association case.

John W. Babcock, assistant United States attorney for the eastern Michigan district, had sought Sims' removal on a fugitive warrant to answer the indictment which charged Sims and 12 others with fraud and violation of the securities act in operation of the 25 million dollar Wheeling, W. Va., firm.

Judge Moore held that Babcock had relied solely on the indictment as prima facie evidence that removal should be ordered but the court felt that was insufficient.

Bargaining Vote of Ward Workers Called by Board

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—The National Labor Relations board ordered today an election among employés of Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago, to determine whether they desired representation by the United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employés union, local 20 [CIO].

Egg Prices Cut by Lend-Lease Rumor Denied in Washington

Egg futures prices that had climbed to 12 and 18 year peaks on Friday were slashed more than 1¼ cents a dozen at one time yesterday when a heavy selling movement swept the Chicago market on reports, later officially denied in Washington, that lend-lease buying of foodstuffs for Britain had been halted by the Surplus Marketing administration.

The contracts recovered some of the lost ground before the day's trading ended and finished ½ to ¾ cent lower, with January deliveries at 32.4 cents a dozen. Wholesale eggs declined as much as ¾ cent a dozen, the best grades being dealt at 33¼ cents.

Usual Purchase Missed.

The selling was touched off after the government buying agency failed to report its usual purchases on Friday. It was the first time since late last August that purchases for export had not been reported twice a week.

Denying that failure to take offers meant that lend-lease buying was being discontinued, SMA officials in Washington said the agency merely stayed out of the egg market because it had plenty of eggs on hand for current domestic and foreign needs and because the market was "in good shape."

At the offices of the department of agriculture, Roy F. Hendrickson, agricultural marketing administrator, said:

"War in the Pacific has not changed our basic program for agricultural commodity lend-lease operations."

Agricultural commodities delivered to the British government for lend-lease shipment totaled more than 2 billion, 650 million pounds up to December 1, 1941, he said. Total cost of these commodities, delivered at shipping points since operations started last April, was about 300 million dollars.

Deliveries for shipment during November, as reported by the administrator of agricultural marketing, amounted to 450 million pounds of food and other farm products, costing more than 50 million dollars.

Food for Russia

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—The United States has started accumulating food for shipment to Russia under the lend-lease program. Altho it had been stated officially that this country would help supply its allies with food, first indications that purchases were being made for Russia came today in agriculture department reports on lend-lease buying operations.

"We are continuing heavy purchases to make available the vital supply of food for England and Russia," the department said.

The first item bought for Russia was 17½ million pounds of sugar.

Owners Fear 'Crackdown' in Rent Ceiling

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—Landlords and hotel owners, it was disclosed today, have showered legislators handling the price control bill with protests against authorizing ceilings on rents in defense areas.

Sen. Prentiss Brown.

Senators and house members trying to compromise differences in bills passed by the two branches of congress already have agreed that rentals should be controled. In a closed session today they studied various other points but announced no decisions.

Sen. Prentiss M. Brown [D., Mich.], chairman of the senate conferees, said most of those protesting against rent ceilings appeared to fear some one was going to "crack down" on them. He attributed the volley of objections "largely to misunderstanding."

Five Limitations Cited.

"There are five different limitations or restrictions upon fixing of rent ceilings," Brown said. "No one need fear a crackdown unless he wants to profiteer."

First, he said, federal price fixing officials would intervene "only if local authorities fail to meet the situation."

Second, he said, federal authority would be used only if local officials did not act within 60 days.

Third, a standard of rental rates on or about April 1, 1941, was fixed as the basis for ceilings.

Fourth, and "most important" in Brown's estimation, "increases in taxes and other costs" must be considered in fixing rent ceilings.

Finally, he said, price officials must consult local or state rental and housing authorities on all orders.

Covers Specified Areas.

Under terms of the legislation the power to stabilize or reduce rents is limited to areas described as those where the war program has caused rents to rise, or has threatened to cause increases.

The measure covers houses, apartments, hotels, and rooming or boarding house accommodations in the designated areas.

Leon Henderson, price administrator, told senators that expansion of defense industries already has caused sharp rent increases in many areas.

RFC FUND TO AID AUTO DEALERS IN RATIONING PLAN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 [Special].—Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, announced today that the RFC has set aside 100 million dollars to assist authorized dealers, finance companies, and banks in the carrying and orderly marketing of automobiles and light trucks manufactured subsequent to Jan 16, 1942, to be disposed of under the rationing plan of OPA. Complete details covering the program will be released within the next few days by C. B. Henderson, chairman, Reconstruction Finance corporation.

CONTRACTS LET FOR 632 MORE CARGO VESSELS

Cost Above Billion in Record Program.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—Contracts for 632 additional merchant vessels to be completed by the end of 1943 were negotiated today by the United States maritime commission. The commission already had about 1,400 ships scheduled for completion by the end of 1943.

The new contracts were awarded in order to conform with President Roosevelt's demand for construction of 8,000,000 deadweight tons of ships in 1942 and 10,000,000 deadweight tons in 1943. All of the new ships will be of the Liberty type of emergency cargo vessels.

Cost Over Billion Dollars.

The 632 vessels will cost about 1 billion 110 million dollars. To complete the vast shipbuilding program, set by the President, the nation's shipyards will have to work around the clock on a 24 hour seven day week schedule.

The additional contracts will give the country the greatest shipbuilding effort in all history, according to Capt. Howard L. Vickery, a member of the maritime commission. American shipyards will turn out about 2,000 ships in the next two years.

The 632 ships newly contracted for represent over 5,000,000 deadweight tons. The merchant ships on shipways or previously contracted for total 18,500,000 deadweight tons. If all are completed in two years the President's goal will be exceeded.

Need 850,000 Workers.

Vickery estimated that American shipyards will employ 850,000 workers to carry out the expanded program. Under the previous program it was estimated that 600,000 to 700,000 men would be employed by the end of the year. Normally less than 100,000 men are employed in merchant shipbuilding.

The maritime commission will have to increase training facilities for workmen and for seamen to man the ships. It is estimated that the expanded fleet will need about 60,000 officers and men a year. Present plans call for turning out about half that number in schools by the end of the year.

In the program private shipyards have had their capacity increased by about 500 per cent and must be still further expanded. Vickery said the goal is to turn out ships 105 days after their keels are laid. Some yards have been turning out Liberty ships in 126 to 130 days.

Use Standard Design.

"The reason the maritime commission is able to carry out the President's demand for expanded tonnage is because the design of the ships is standardized," Vickery said. "The building of liberty ships is a mass production problem."

He disclosed that the commission has plans for the construction of passenger vessels which can be used as troop transports. If the United States is to take the offensive on all fronts in 1943 a larger number of transports will be needed to carry expeditionary forces to the various theaters of the war, it is acknowledged.

Vickery acknowledged that there is a shortage of machinery for the vessels. He said that plenty of boilers are on hand but other machinery is not being produced at the pace the vessels are running off shipways.

Details of Awards.

Contracts for the new ships were awarded as follows:

Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipbuilding company, Baltimore, 110 ships.

Houston Shipbuilding corporation, Houston, Tex., 32 ships.

California Shipbuilding corporation, Wilmington, Cal., 109.

Todd-California Shipbuilding corporation, Richmond, Cal., 125.

Business Holds Its Swift Pace in Big Arms Making Campaign

Business held its swift pace last week, absorbing a series of shocks as the government instituted stern moves to shape the pattern of corporation and individual economic activities so that the flow of fighting equipment and food for America and other axis foes can be increased.

More than seasonal gains were indicated in the vital electric power and freight hauling industries, steel output expanded, retail trade surpassed all former volume peaks for the period, mines prepared to send more lead, copper, and zinc up out of the ground, and busy arms plants crowded schedules harder than ever.

Meantime, President Roosevelt shook up the leadership of the war production agencies, putting Donald M. Nelson at the top with unprecedented powers as chairman of a new War Production board.

Knudsen in New Post.

William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, was given a new job as war department director of production. The OPM, army, navy, and other agencies had been accused of bungling and waste in a report by a senate investigating committee.

Authorities controling prices, material priorities and crop quotas issued orders designed to resist inflation tendencies, prevent civilian demand from consuming scarce goods, and boost farm yields. Farmers were called upon to utilize every acre and every machine. The government offered premiums to producers of copper, lead, and zinc and raised the price ceiling on lead to encourage larger production.

Efforts still were being made to work out the intricacies of the automobile rationing program. Price Administrator Leon Henderson said that after Feb. 1 no new cars will be made until the war ends.

Trend of Industry

Walk to Save Rubber.

The public was urged to resort to walking or bicycle riding to save tires, and to "treat tires like gold." Two tire manufacturers, however, challenged the necessity of so drastic a ban on rubber.

The motor industry neared the end of its civilian production program with a quickening of pace for the week, assembling 75,625 cars and trucks, about 15,000 more than in the preceding week.

The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity held unchanged for the week, comparing as follows:

	Latest week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.
Steel mill act	137.6	135.6	132.2
Elec pwr prod	154.0*	152.0	137.6
Composite index	142.4	142.4	123.7

*New high.

The index is based on 1929-'30 figures as 100 and is adjusted for seasonal variations.

100 AXIS BUSINESSES PADLOCKED—98 RUN UNDER U. S. WATCH

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—More than 100 German, Japanese and Italian business concerns in this country have been padlocked and 98 others are operating under strict supervision, the treasury announced today. This step, the department said, has "short-circuited possible axis sabotage on the American industrial front by erasing focal points of enemy espionage and other subversive activity on the American continent."

The only businesses named by the treasury were the Hamburg-American Line and the Nippon Yusen Kaisha [known as NYK] steamship companies, and the Italian Banco di Napoli. However, it said that the list included six banks, a New York publishing house which had printed bund material, some import-export firms, news agencies, trade associations, and brokerage houses.

Some companies have been permitted to operate under treasury supervision because they produce war materials such as films, drugs, insulation for radio sets, plastics and machinery, the department's statement said.

PESKA DEFENDS COMMISSION IN TRACTION CASE

Any delays in settling the Chicago traction question which Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe had in mind yesterday when he blamed the Illinois commerce commission for failure to achieve an agreement, should be laid to predecessors of the present commission, Commissioner Frank Peska said last night. Peska said incumbent commissioners had acted as expeditiously as possible.

Judge Igoe had said: "If we wait for the . . . commission to act, we may have to wait ten years." He made this comment during concluding arguments on the allocation of securities in the proposed unified Chicago Transit company among the bondholders of the surface and elevated lines.

A reference to the commission was made in a letter, read in court, in which Mayor Kelly notified Brig. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, PWA administrator, that as soon as court and commerce commission hearings are concluded, unification plans would go forward.

CONFEREES FAIL TO REACH ACCORD ON PRICE RULE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—The house and senate conference committee on the price control bill, at another meeting today, failed to reach final accord on agricultural sections adopted by the two chambers. Sen. Prentiss Brown [D., Mich.], floor manager for the measure, said the conferees will meet again Monday in further efforts to adjust the different versions preparatory to final passage.

It was reported that the senate may agree to the scrapping of the amendment proposed by Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] tying farm price ceilings to wages, which has been attacked as inflationary, but will insist upon retaining the Bankhead amendment giving the secretary of agriculture veto power over farm prices.

President Roosevelt has expressed his disapproval of both these sections and if they remain in the bill in any form when it is returned to the floor administration members are expected to make a determined fight to eliminate them.

U. S. TO RESTRICT USE OF CADMIUM, RUST PREVENTER

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 [Special].—Strict control over the distribution and use of cadmium was assumed today by the director of priorities of the Office of Production Management.

Appended to the order were two lists, one of items in which the use of cadmium is prohibited after Jan. 31, except for government orders, and the other of items specifically exempt from the restrictions. Cadmium may be used during January in the items in the prohibited list only to the same extent as in January, 1941.

Users not on this list and not otherwise mentioned in the order have until March 31 to cease manufacture, but are permitted to use not more than 70 per cent of the amount consumed in the first quarter of 1941. Beginning April 1, all use of the metal except for purposes given in List B will be prohibited.

Cadmium, used principally in rust-proof plating, is produced mainly as a by-product of zinc, and is considered vital for military purposes.

1941 Record Year for FHA in Insuring Building Loans

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Federal Housing administration reported today that it did a record business last year, insuring one billion 380 million dollars of private loans for building or improving dwellings. The dollar volume was $200 million higher than the previous peak reached in 1940.

F.D.R. ASKS DOLE OF 400 MILLION FOR PLANT SHIFT

Fund Sought to Tide Over Workers.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—Plans were made today at a White House conference for the expenditure of between 400 and 600 million dollars for unemployment relief to aid approximately 4 million workers who will be without jobs while American industry is being converted to war production.

Sidney Hillman [top] and Paul V. McNutt.

Under the plan workers deprived of jobs during the change over would receive compensation up to 60 per cent of their regular wages but not more than $24 a week.

They would be required, in return, to go thru a training period which would enable them to take their places in the new arms industries when the retooling of the old plants is completed.

Speedy Action Urged.

President Roosevelt, at today's conference with his congressional leaders and social security officials, emphasized the necessity for speedy legislative action to alleviate unnecessary hardship among the workers affected by the conversion, the bulk of whom are in the automotive industries.

A bill embodying the salient points of the plan is expected to be submitted next week to both houses of congress. It will be followed by an appropriation measure providing the funds.

From the figures on the amount of money that will be necessary and the number of workers who will be affected, it appeared American taxpayers must pay more than $400 to support every worker temporarily deprived of his job in this period, or enough to pay for more than 1,500 long range bombing planes.

Drafted by Hillman and McNutt.

The program was drafted by Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, and Paul V. McNutt, social security director, who were among those conferring with the President.

The other conferees were Vice President Wallace, Alben Barkley [D., Ky.], senate majority leader; Charles L. McNary [R., Ore.], senate minority leader; Sen. Carter Glass [D., Va.], chairman of the appropriations committee; Sam Rayburn, [D., Tex.], speaker of the house; John W. McCormack [D., Mass.], house majority leader; Joseph Martin [R., Mass.], house minority leader, and Rep. Clarence Cannon [D., Mo.], chairman of the house appropriations committee.

Barkley said the theory of the plan is to help those who are willing to be taught new mechanical skill to fit them for aiding the nation's war effort. He said this is based on the theory war production will require the services of 10 million more men than are now employed.

Would Supplement State Funds.

It was explained the federal funds would be used to supplement state unemployment compensation up to the $24 maximum for early workers.

McNutt said conversion of the war plants probably will require about six months on the average, with retooling for most plants not exceeding that length of time.

The conferees said Mr. Roosevelt probably will communicate his views to congress by letter or special message containing estimates of the funds involved and urging prompt consideration.

MARKET LOSSES HIT TOP STOCKS IN SLOW WEEK

But Most of Declines Are Kept to Fractions.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The stock market today closed a generally irregular week with declines concentrated in "blue chip" issues. Altho most losses were confined to fractions, some of the high priced group fell 1 to 3 points. Chemicals were principally affected. Rails did fairly well and extreme declines, in most instances, were reduced at the close.

Pressure never was pronounced in any section of the list. The ticker tape crawled most of the time and transfers of 221,710 shares were the smallest for a brief session since Oct. 4, last. They compared with 293,030 a week ago.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 37.7 but on the week showed a net gain of .1. It was a restricted market thruout. There were only 552 individual issues traded.

Anxiety About Far East.

Outcome of the Japanese invasion of the Philippines and Malaya still was in doubt and, as a precaution against adverse news over the week-end, many customers kept commitments light or trimmed accounts moderately.

Relative weakness of several high rated shares in the chemical division was thought to have resulted from the possibility a change in the excess profits tax base from the average earnings yardstick to that of invested capital would dent net income severely.

Rails were aided by forecasts that higher passenger and freight rates would soon be granted.

Du Pont, a soft spot yesterday, dropped more than 2 points at the worst and recorded a new 1941-'42 bottom. It eventually halved the setback. Eastman Kodak was down 3¼; Dow Chemical, 2½, and Union Carbide, 1⅜.

Believe Swing Went Too Far.

The belief the decline had gone too far brought a moderate recovery on Monday. Strength of stocks with commodity affiliations gave the list its best average gain of the week Tuesday. Helpful was announcement of the big synthetic rubber manufacturing program and the offer of the government to pay handsome premiums on production of copper, lead, and zinc in excess of 1941 volumes. Tax worries again revived and the market followed a "do-nothing" course Wednesday and Thursday. Tanker attacks by enemy submarines off the Atlantic coast chilled sentiment Friday and the trend was downward.

CHICAGO LIST LOWER.

Prices continued to move unevenly lower on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday. Of 59 issues traded, 13 advanced, 28 declined, and 18 closed unchanged. Transactions totaled 14,000 shares.

In the half hour after the New York close Paramount Pictures advanced ⅛, while Commonwealth Edison and United States Steel declined ⅛.

LONDON AWAITS ALLIED PLAN TO BUOY ECONOMY

Churchill Is Expected to Detail Steps.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 17.—In expectation of an important statement from Prime Minister Winston Churchill, when parliament reassembles, market circles buzzed this week with reports the prime minister may announce a joint anglo-American program aimed not only at the overthrow of the axis, but also at maintaining the stability of the financial and economic structure after the war. Churchill has had long conferences with President Roosevelt in Washington.

Gaps in the lend-lease program under which no definite agreement exists regarding payment for supplies from the United States are becoming recognized here. The political correspondent of the authoritative Financial Times suggested that the time has arrived for "a formal understanding with America, with possibly pooling resources on lines analagous with the agreement recently announced between the United States and Canada."

Gets Views in Advance.

Before going to America, it is known that Churchill was primed with the views of British bankers and others regarding concentration of financial and economic resources of the two countries.

Equally important discussions are going on concerning trade problems. The Financial Times reports: "Russia's tremendous potential producing capacity is fully recognized and the view accepted that the soviet must come within the orbit of the scientific trade program." Allocation of the spheres of influence, as well as measures to prevent unchecked world competition among the allies in the export markets, "will no doubt be considered," it was stated.

Problems of financial demobilization after the war were discussed by Oscar Hobson, British financial expert, in the Bankers' Institute Journal.

Doubts Permanent Control.

Hobson maintained that permanent exchange control would be impossible for Britain. If the control were directed mainly toward the dollar, as seems obvious, Hobson argued that it would seriously offend the United States, with which Britain must, at all costs, maintain mutually cordial relations if a satisfactory and durable political settlement of Europe is to be achieved.

Emphasizing that the exchange control could not remain effective without a full postal censorship, which, he said, is intolerable in peacetime, Hobson suggested that the "sound course would be to develop some sort of currency alliance with the United States on the lines of the tripartite agreement of September, 1936, but more carefully elaborated and more formal."

While the long term prospects of trade and finance were absorbing attention in market circles, the treasury announced that the first 10 days of 1942 broke all tax records in British history, with revenue totaling £102,046,301 [about $408,185,204].

END FURNITURE SHOWS AFTER 2 WEEKS AT MARTS

Chicago's two big winter furniture shows closed yesterday after a two week run. Buyer attendance dropped considerably below figures of the 1940 shows, altho approximately as many stores were represented.

Officials of the National Furniture and Home Furniture show at the American Furniture Mart said that about 10,900 buyers attended. Altho this was the fourth largest total on record, it was substantially below the 13,153 registered last year.

Attendance at the International Home Furnishings market in the Merchandise Mart declined 17 per cent from last year, officials estimated. The number of stores represented dropped only 2 per cent.

FEEBLE EFFORTS AT HIGHER PRICES IN BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The bond market made a feeble try at higher prices today, but the best that could be managed was an irregularly improved range.

Lower priced rails made a better showing than most other groups but even there price lines were tangled.

Many traders cut down their purchases to await week-end war developments. Washington news was rated negatively as a market factor.

Irregularity spread to the foreign list, where some recently supported United States governments swung 1-32 point either way in over-the-counter dealings.

Turnover of $2,982,600, face value, was the smallest for any Saturday since Nov. 15 and compared with $5,362,400 a week ago.

330 FARMS SOLD IN 5 STATES BY EQUITABLE LIFE

The Equitable Life Assurance society sold 330 farms during 1941 in the five-state area served by the company's Champaign, Ill., office, compared with 275 sold in 1940, C. E. Maxwell, branch loan supervisor, reported yesterday.

Buying for investment predominated "because of the belief farms are among the safest investments in view of world conditions," Maxwell said. In the fourth quarter, however, the number of tenant buyers increased as farm prices advanced. Many farm owners added to existing holdings.

Of the 330 farm sales, 123 were for cash and for the remainder there were cash down payments of 36.6 per cent.

Oliver E. Mount, Chicago, secretary and treasurer of American Steel Foundries, was elected president of the Steel Founders' Society of America, trade association of the steel foundry industry, it was announced yesterday. He was chosen by the society's board of directors at a meeting in New York. Mount has been with American Steel Foundries since 1916, when he was discharged from the navy.

The 28th annual convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers will be held tomorrow, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday at the Stevens hotel. Hortense Odlum, chairman of the board of Bonwit Teller, will discuss the sale of defense bonds thru retail stores at the Monday morning session.

Personnel and industrial relations executives from all parts of the country will meet in Chicago Feb. 4, 5, and 6 for the national personnel conference of the American Management association. The conference will be devoted principally to the study of industrial relations problems most likely to occur during the first year of the war.

The National Association of Tobacco Distributors ended its four day convention at the Palmer House last night with a banquet, after reëlecting Edward A. Grauer, New York, president.

Postwar planning and rebuilding of American cities will be the principal topic of discussion at the second annual meeting of the Urban Land institute Thursday at the Drake hotel. Walter S. Schmidt, Cincinnati, is president of the institute.

"FINAL EFFORT" TO AVERT TRUCK STRIKE PLANNED

Meet Next Wednesday in 12 State Dispute.

A "final effort" to settle a wage controversy which threatens to result in a strike of 250,000 truck drivers in 12 midwest states will be made Wednesday when federal labor conciliators and committees representing the companies and the drivers meet at Hotel Sherman, John T. O'Brien, chairman of the central states drivers' committee, said last night.

O'Brien's announcement followed a meeting of 160 union delegates at the hotel in which his negotiating committee was given full power to sign an agreement or call a strike.

Employers Are Expected.

He said John Bridge, Detroit, vice chairman of the committee representing employers, informed him by telephone yesterday that the employers' committee will attend. He said Bridge plans to call a meeting of operators for Wednesday morning to obtain full authority to sign a final agreement.

Both sides agreed to abide by a national defense mediation board decision giving wage increases averaging 13 per cent but leaving to the committees the problem of setting working rules.

The companies, O'Brien said, wanted wage differentials covering states west of the Mississippi river written into the original agreement and walked out on negotiations when the unions refused. These differentials, under provisions of the mediation settlement, are to be worked out after the contract is signed, he asserted.

"Trying to Abide by Pledge."

"We are going to live up to our pledge not to strike if employers abide by the settlement," O'Brien declared. "But if the government doesn't force the owners to live up to the board's decision the men will be forced to strike."

O'Brien said the companies are demanding that wage increases be cut in half in the seven states west of the Mississippi river — North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, and Minnesota. There is no wage controversy, he said, over the other five states—Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Ohio.

WEATHER CURBS SEARCH FOR OIL; OUTPUT SLUMPS

Centralia, Ill., Jan. 17 (AP).—Unfavorable weather and a slump in oil activity which brought little new production reduced the Illinois petroleum yield this week. Producers said the daily output was closer to 340,000 barrels than the 386,400 barrel limit placed on the state's production by Harold L. Ickes, national petroleum coördinator. One producer estimated the production as low as 337,300 barrels daily, more than 10 per cent less than the 381,000 barrels produced the week before.

Since the Office of Production Management order governing the spacing of wells, exploration activtiies have dropped from 464 operations as of Dec. 27 to 339 this week. Many of the 339 were not active, having been shut in while the producers awaited clarification of the federal regulations.

Thirty-six wells were successfully completed with initial production of 8,416 barrels. Last week completions totaled 57 and new production totaled 14,523 barrels.

SAVINGS BONDS ARE CASHED IN AT FASTER PACE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—Cashing in of United States savings bonds, now called defense bonds, has increased in the last year, but not nearly as rapidly as new sales. In the first six and a half months of the fiscal year, redemptions of these bonds totaled $95,657,290, compared with $74,064,972 in the same period of the preceding fiscal year.

Officials said this was expected in view of the greatly increased number of bonds outstanding. Sales in this period aggregated $2,354,863,399, compared with $452,552,092 in the previous year.

Potato Marketing Orders Will Be Effective Jan. 26

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—Federal marketing orders regulating the interstate shipment of potatoes produced in Michigan, Minnesta, Wisconsin, Oregon, California, and North Dakota will become effective Jan. 26, the agriculture department announced today. The orders prohibit shipment in interstate commerce of cull potatoes. They were approved by growers in a recent referendum.

'41 BUILDING AWARDS JUMP 47 PER CENT ABOVE FORMER PEAK

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Engineering News-Record reported today engineering construction awards in 1941 totaled $5,868,699,000, the highest volume on record and 47 per cent above the former high set in 1940. Sixty-five per cent, or $3,823,397,000, of the total was for defense jobs, the trade magazine said.

Public awards, which included much defense work, aggregated $4,690,617,000, a record. Private construction at $1,178,082,000 exceeded 1940 by 1.5 per cent and was the biggest since 1930.

Private industrial building dropped 16.5 per cent under 1940, to $496,176,000, the magazine said. Waterworks construction rose 10 per cent to $76,698,000.

Every section of the country showed gains over 1940. The midwest total, $908,630,000, was up 22 per cent from 1940 and topped the 1928 peak by 12 per cent.

FRAUD CHARGED TO CONTRACTORS AT ARMS PLANT

St. Louis, Jan. 17 (AP).—A suit charging that seven construction, material and trucking firms had defrauded the government by excessive prices and "kickbacks" on contracts for the 100 million dollar small arms ammunition plant was filed in federal court today by David Houlle in behalf of the government. The suit was instituted under a law permitting a private citizen to seek recovery of money alleged to have been obtained from the government by fraud.

Houlle was said to have been in the gravel business. His attorney estimated a million dollars was involved in the suit.

The defendants are the Fruco Construction company, Fruin-Colnon Contracting company, Columbia Quarry company, Big Bend Quarry company, Fred Schmitt Material company, Missouri-Illinois Material company and Arrow Trucking company, all of St. Louis.

It was alleged they acted together to force the government to buy large amounts of materials and machinery at prices far in excess of prevailing rates, enabling them to make large profits and receive "commissions generally referred to as kickbacks."

BUY 3,039 ACRES DOWNSTATE TO RELOCATE FARMS

Mound City, Ill., Jan. 17.—Deeds filed in the recorder's office here show that the Illinois Defense Relocation corporation now has purchased some 3,039 acres of land from five or six individuals in Pulaski county for a total of $114,380. The average price is a little under $40 per acre.

The largest tract was that of W. L. Dunston of Marion—1,150 acres in the north central part of the county—for $45,980. This purchase was made last fall as was the Berry Rife tract of 440 acres for $20,000.

New tracts of land amounting to 720 acres have been purchased west of Mounds. In all 1,349 acres recently have been recorded with the price $48,400.

Purpose of the purchases is to relocate farmers who have been displaced by munitions plants. In case of the Crab Orchard plant nearly all farmers there now have gone, having found their own locations.

Increase of 318 Employes at Rock Island Arsenal

A gain of 318 employés in 15 days at the Rock Island arsenal was reported by Brig. Gen. Norman F. Ramsey, commanding officer. A total of 10,618 persons is now on the pay roll and this figure does not include 224 WPA workers, 185 NYA boys, and about 550 employés of contractors on the island. These bring the grand total to more than 11,500. Of the 10,618 persons, 9,947 are men, a gain of 268, and 663 are women, a gain of 50. Those living in Illinois total 6,156, an increase of 199, and those in Iowa 4,454, a gain of 119.

Investors' Guide

Sunday, Jan. 18, 1942.

[Copyright: 1942: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PERSONAL INCOME TAX—6.

Investors—because they own stocks and bonds—should give special attention to revenue from dividends and interest in figuring gross income for their 1941 income taxes.

Dividends paid by corporations to stockholders are taxable if distributed from earnings in the current year or from profits accumulated after Feb. 28, 1913. Distributions from other sources are not considered dividends for tax purposes.

A stock dividend is income if it gives the shareholder an interest in the corporation different from that represented by his original stock holding. It is not income if the new shares plus the stock already owned represent the same proportionate interest the stockholder had before the stock dividend. If a company gave its common stockholder shares of preferred stock as a dividend, such a dividend would be taxable because the stockholders would become owners of a new type of interest.

A dividend representing a return of capital, such as a distribution from capital surplus or from depreciation or depletion reserves, is not taxable, nor are liquidating dividends, except that portion which might be paid from profits.

A list of all dividends received in 1941, whether taxable or not, should be included in the income tax return.

All interest received or available in 1941 must be reported. This includes interest on bonds, bank deposits, notes, mortgages, etc. Interest due but not collectible is not taxable until received.

Interest payments should be distinguished from return of capital or principal, which is not taxable. Accrued interest bought from the seller of a bond and subsequently received by the purchaser is not taxable because it is considered a return of principal.

Interest on all obligations of the United States and its agencies issued on or after March 1, 1941, is fully taxable. There are a few minor exceptions. This important change in the revenue laws was made in the public debt act of 1941.

As a result of the new law, interest on three classes of obligations is now wholly or partially exempt from income tax. These classes are the obligations of the United States and its possessions issued prior to March 1, 1941; obligations of a state, municipality, territory, or political subdivision thereof; obligations of a corporation organized under an act of congress, if the corporation is an instrumentality of the United States.

All interest received on United States obligations issued before March 1, 1941, is exempt from normal income tax. Interest on certain treasury bonds is exempt from surtax to the extent of $5,000 of the purchase or issue price of the bond. Dividend and bonus payments received from federal savings and loan association share accounts are not considered interest by the treasury department. Such payments are exempt from normal tax but subject to surtax.

[What not to include in gross income will be discussed in the next article.]

MILWAUKEE RAIL FIGHT CARRIED TO SUPREME COURT

Final Decision Is Sought in Long Litigation.

The long drawn out reorganization of the Milwaukee railroad was placed yesterday before the United States Supreme court in a move to speed up the case which has been in the federal courts since June 29, 1935.

Attorneys for a group of insurance companies and mutual saving banks petitioned the court to review an opinion given by the Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago last Dec. 4. The opinion directed that the reorganization proceedings, already approved by the Interstate Commerce commission and the federal District court, be returned to the ICC for further action.

Kenneth F. Burgess of the law firm of Sidley, McPherson, Austin & Burgess acted for the insurance companies, and Fred N. Oliver of Oliver & Donnally represented the banks.

Returned for Valuations.

The Circuit court, in withholding approval of the reorganization plan, said the ICC had failed to set down definite findings of fact determining the value of properties underlying the various securities of the railroad system.

Yesterday's petition said the ICC, to comply with the Circuit court aim, would have to "enter upon the tortuous task of determining the single sum value, in dollars and cents, of each of the debtor's many mortgage divisions and of the new securities to be issued under the plan."

The petition emphasized the point that the Circuit court had agreed with the position of the ICC and of Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe in approving the plan that the common and preferred shares of the Milwaukee are valueless.

Fears Endless Litigation.

"The interpretation of the statute adopted by the Circuit Court of Appeals would open the door to almost endless litigation over the numerous specific valuations which it would require," according to the petition.

The attorneys presented three principal arguments to support their position before the Supreme court.

1. The Circuit court has decided an important question of federal law arising in the administration of section 77 of the bankruptcy act which has not, but should be settled by the Supreme court. The ICC should have the broadest influence in the disposition of rail reorganizations.

Difficulties Multiplied.

2. The Circuit court misinterpreted a previous decision used as a basis for its opinion, and this "unnecessarily multiplies the difficulties, delays, and expenses that attend all reorganization proceedings, both of railroads and other corporations."

3. The public interest will be promoted by a decision on the merits of the case "authoritatively settling the contentions by which the junior interests [stockholders] have so greatly delayed this and similar reorganizations."

Under the plan as approved by the ICC and the District court the Milwaukee's capitalization is reduced from $744,760,713 to $548,533,321. Annual charges under the old capitalization totaled $23,739,279, of which $9,144,900 was contingent upon earnings. Under the proposed capitalization annual charges would be $9,489,134, including $4,269,654 of fixed interest debt.

ORGANIZE GROUP TO LIFT AVIATION GASOLINE OUTPUT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—Formation of a national conference of petroleum regulatory authorities to provide "for the fullest coöperation between the federal government and the oil producing states" was announced today by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, the petroleum coördinator.

Requests to name representatives to the conference were sent to Gov. Leon Phillips of Oklahoma, chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact commission, and to officials of Illinois, Arkansas, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas, and Wyoming.

Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum coördinator, said the conference would consider increasing production from oil fields which yield the high grade crudes necessary for the manufacture of 100 actane and other aviation gasoline.

FIGHT ON PRICE POWER UPSETS TRADE AT YARDS

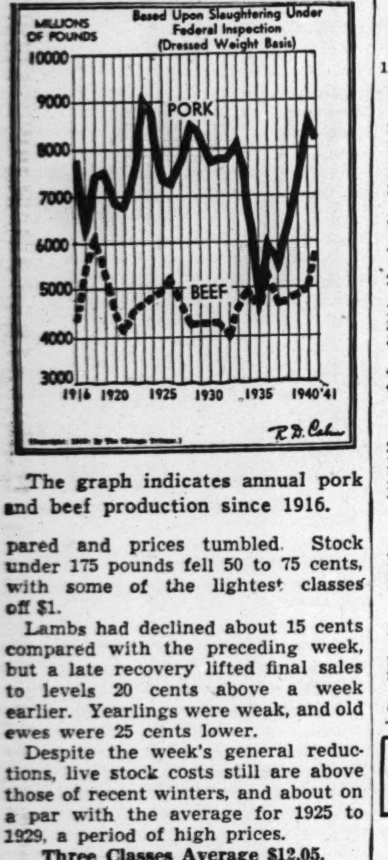
Hog Quotations Register Most Severe Drop.

Live stock prices fluctuated erratically last week as the farm group in Washington fought an apparently losing battle to obtain power enabling Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard to set price ceilings for agricultural products. President Roosevelt's opposition to the group's stand contributed to the steep slide taken by some classes of animals on the market.

Meat animals averaged 20 cents below prices of the preceding week, altho some classes were $1 or more lower. Steers and yearlings lost as much as 25 cents a hundred pounds.

Hogs Sold in Volume.

Large scale selling of light and underweight hogs, which farmers attributed to the cold weather and snowstorms, caught the trade unprepared and prices tumbled. Stock under 175 pounds fell 50 to 75 cents, with some of the lightest classes off $1.



The graph indicates annual pork and beef production since 1916.

Lambs had declined about 15 cents compared with the preceding week, but a late recovery lifted final sales to levels 20 cents above a week earlier. Yearlings were weak, and old ewes were 25 cents lower.

Despite the week's general reductions, live stock costs still are above those of recent winters, and about on a par with the average for 1925 to 1929, a period of high prices.

Three Classes Average $12.05.

Steers, hogs, and lambs together averaged $12.05 a hundred pounds, against the January, 1925-'29 average of $12.10.

The three classes together averaged $1.80 above January, 1941, a rise of 17 per cent, and $3.95, or 48 per cent higher than two years ago. The steepest gains, over 1941 and 1940 were in hogs, which averaged $3.10 above last year, a gain of 38 per cent, and $5.75 higher than two years ago, a rise of 105 per cent.

GRAINS REGISTER FRACTIONAL RISE IN LIGHT TRADE

Federal Sales Exceed Brokers' Forecasts.

BY PHILIP WARDEN.

Grains recorded fractional advances yesterday as the Commodity Credit corporation reported large sales of wheat and corn in the week ended Jan. 10. Traders said that sales of government owned grain since the start of the year may be even larger than they had previously estimated.

The credit corporation said it sold about 3½ million bushels of wheat and more than 13 million bushels of corn during the week. This brought wheat sales for the season to about 22¼ million bushels and left the federal agency with slightly more than 151 million bushels in its possession.

The credit corporation said its corn stocks amount to slightly more than 121 million bushels. Considering large scale sales in the last week, grain men estimated that the government may not have much more than 50 million bushels of corn remaining for disposal.

Large Sales for Alcohol.

They based their estimates on the fact the credit corporation announced it would sell more than 60 million bushels of its grain to distilleries. The corn will be used in manufacturing alcohol for use in making munitions.

Commodity Credit corporation officials said last week that they didn't expect government corn stocks to last much longer if sales continued at the current rate. However, they said they didn't believe the trade buying would continue large much longer.

Grain men expressed the opinion they probably would be required to continue reliance on the credit corporation for grain for some time because the high government loan rate was holding the new crop corn back in the country.

Day's Trading Restricted.

In yesterday's light trading wheat futures closed unchanged to ⅛ cent higher with May contracts at $1.31 a bushel. Corn advanced ⅛ to ⅜ cent; oats, ⅛ to ¼ cent; rye, ⅜ to ½ cent, and soy beans, ½ cent. Lard closed unchanged to 5 cents a hundred pounds lower. YEAR'S BUILDING IN SUBURB HITS HIGH FOR DECADE

Volume Tops 1940 Total by $14,691,000.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Despite priorities and other federal curbs on construction, and eventually war itself, building of all types in Chicago suburbs during 1941 reached the largest volume in more than a decade. Construction in 91 communities last year totaled $73,793,507. This was $14,691,015 higher than the 1940 total and nearly 70 million dollars above the record low year of 1933. The 1941 suburban total was $24,186,110 more than that of the entire city of Chicago for the same period.

Home building in the suburbs also broke all records since the depression got under way in 1929. Permits were issued last year for 8,017 homes, costing $52,943,796. In 1940 there were 5,892 permits for homes valued at $37,659,102.

Metropolitan Area Gains.

The Bell Savings and Loan association, which compiled these figures in its survey of new building in Chicago and suburbs, reported that permits for all types of construction issued in the metropolitan area last year amounted to $140,710,822. This is $35,614,156, or 34 per cent more than the 1940 total of $105,096,666.

Residential construction reported in 1941 in 91 suburban towns, the city of Chicago, and in the unincorporated areas of Cook, Du Page, Kane, and Lake counties, totaled 15,873 homes, costing $91,215,483. This compared with 10,684 homes valued at $59,702,123 in 1940. The increase in value was 53 per cent.

Long Range View.

To take a long range view of the tremendous increase in home building in the last years, the unincorporated areas must be left out, for it was not until August, 1940, that Cook county began to issue permits for building. Following are the annual number and value of homes in Chicago and suburbs for the last six years:

	Homes.	Value.
1941	12,448	$76,959,000
1940	9,015	54,325,000
1939	6,310	38,404,000
1938	3,899	25,239,000
1937	3,362	24,379,000
1936	2,200	17,499,000

Fewer December Homes.

Home building in the suburbs during December, with 450 permits, and a total cost of $2,836,476, was less than the corresponding month of the previous year for the first time in 12 months. There were permits for 427 homes, costing $2,922,762 in December, 1940. December also was the lowest in value of homes in any month of 1941 with the exception of January.

PLANS ADDITION TO TRI-STATE VILLAGE AREA

Tri-State village, a residential development at the southwest corner of highways 83 and 66 [Tri-State highway and Joliet road] is to be enlarged, William G. Buenik of the Central Housing organization announced yesterday. A third unit of the development will be opened to the public today, he said. It will contain 130 homesites averaging from 75 to 100 feet in width by 150 to 250 in depth. It is two blocks north of the two original units and has a half mile of frontage on Tri-State highway. Sixty-five homes are now completed or in various stages of construction in the first two units, with many more to be started in the near future, Buenik said. Priorities on building materials have been received, he stated.

Naval Station Work Is Lure to Carpenters

Lure of overtime work at Great Lakes Naval Training station, where a vast program of wooden buildings is under way, has drained most of the expert carpenters and other craftsmen from the Waukegan-North Chicago area, said George R. Lyon, president of the Waukegan-North Chicago Building corporation, which contemplates building 400 homes in Waukegan.

Instead of the announced initial 20 homes, work is under way on only 10 owing to scarcity of workmen, Lyon said. Two of these are under roof, however, with the expectation of having them ready for occupancy by the middle of February. He said basements of the next 10 units will be ready for construction work by the time the first 10 are out of the hands of the carpenters. Lyon is hopeful that he gradually can assemble enough high class carpenters to enable the home program to go along at good speed.

The houses are classified as "defense homes" and will sell for $4,650, Lyon said. They are being built by a privately financed group following a threat by the Defense Homes corporation that unless something was done by private capital to relieve a prospective housing shortage the government would act.

FIRM WILL MOVE TO MAKE ROOM FOR RED CROSS

Altho its lease on space in the eight story Hoops building, 531 South Wabash avenue, does not expire until 1943, William H. Hoops & Co. yesterday notified the American Red Cross that the firm voluntarily would move on Feb. 1. Mrs. Ada E. Wrigley, widow of William Wrigley Jr., recently gave half of the building to the Red Cross for its use. Two floors are occupied by the Hoops concern, fireplace specialties. This space is needed by the Red Cross.

Hoops & Co. has leased for 5 years the store at 303 South Wabash avenue in the 57 East Jackson boulevard building [formerly the Cable building], all of the second floor and the entire basement, a total of 10,000 square feet. Victor Bredberg of Aldis & Co., manager of the building, represented the owner, and Albert H. Wetten & Co. the lessee.

WEST SIDE LEASE.

The Silvestri Art Manufacturing company, novelties, leased the building at 710 West Washington boulevard, containing 30,000 square feet, from the Augustus F. Beidler estate. J. Beidler Camp represented the lessor and Oliver J. Burns the lessee.

NEAR NORTH SIDE
Why spend time commuting when you can live down here near the lake, and near so many interesting things, with just a nice walk to and from your office in the loop? We have little 2 bedroom shaggy roof peasant houses in a little slate paved court up on the second floor level. Heated and serviced like apartments. Also a cozy 2 room furnished studio. Also a 2 story balcony studio just flooded with light. Also a layout with living room over 30 ft. long, with windows at both ends, and skylight and fireplace; one large and two small bedrooms, and, just outside, a sunny roof all floored and ready for a roof garden next summer. Also a 6 room with sunny bay window living room. All with fireplaces, the comforts and pleasant surroundings that the Cook Estate offers.
We also have a group of handy men who can generally, at short notice, take care of some of your household troubles, such as plumbing, refrigeration, etc.

CLOSING THEOPHIL HERBST ESTATE.
BY THE AUCTION METHOD.
CONSISTING OF A 240 ACRE GRUNDY COUNTY, ILLINOIS FARM.
COL. BOWDEN
Nationally Known Land Auctioneer will sell this great producing Stock, Grain, Hay and Dairy Farm.
at Public Auction
SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1942,

This farm has many features of interest to attract buyers from far and near. Mr. and Mrs. Bill have lived on this farm as tenants for 16 years and not knowing just who would purchase the property, therefore making it uncertain as to their continuing on this farm, they have purchased a smaller farm. Mr. Bill has nothing but praise for the buildings and soil. Why not—one-half of the income in 16 years has bought a farm for them.

187 ACRES IS TILLABLE.
Balance in pasture and 10 A. of timber. Plenty of shade. STILL ANOTHER FEATURE—the Mazon River flows through this property, thousands of fish go by the buildings, ducks and other game. Soil is wonderful for alfalfa, red clover, alsyke. 6,000 Bu. of corn was produced this last season. What a show place for the dairy. Plenty of good drinking water. Electricity.

BUILDINGS: Modern 7 room frame bungalow. The Farmer's bank is a prize Barn, this place has it. $14,000 would not erect this splendid barn today, it's nearly as good as new; 150 T. hay capacity, basement under all. This barn is painted white and attracts attention for miles. Large corn crib; poultry house; milk house; hog houses; steer barn.

NOTICE: Thinking people will admit, investment in good soil today is absolutely safe. 75 Acres in Soy Beans for the next 5 years will more than pay for one-half of this farm at the price it will sell for. It's the best potential buy in the great State of Illinois at the price it will sell for. Good roads in all directions.

INSPECT this good farm. Col. Bowden will be on the premises Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday from 1 to 4 P. M.

TERMS: 15% on day of Auction, balance on or before March 2. If a mortgage is desired, it can be arranged. When you inspect this farm ask for Mr. Bill, the tenant. There is a 100% tenant waiting to rent it.

Day by Day on the Farm.

Gird for War Aid.

January 17, 1942.

NOT only are the men on the Wheaton farm but farmers everywhere are discussing how they can contribute to the war effort. As one of the boys remarked, a farmer plays a very important rôle in producing foodstuffs in peace, but now he must think about improved and more productive methods to keep pace with increasing needs of a nation at war.

Here are some of the things farmers all over the country are talking and thinking about these days:

1. The production of good crops and the maintenance of live stock with fewer workers. The army is drawing farm help and defense industries are taking men from rural areas to the city.

2. The necessity of taking extra care of all farm machinery, because when it wears out it will be hard to replace.

3. The necessity of conserving rubber on all farm vehicles. On the Wheaton farm the men have stored all of the farm trucks except one required for hauling milk to a nearby dairy. One small pickup truck has been placed in the van body of one of the large live stock trucks to keep the tires off the ground. A rubber tired wagon has been stored in another van. The men are using horses and mules for hauling feed and in similar tasks.

Saving for Defense.

4. The government is asking every American to save such necessary materials as paper, scrap iron, jute bags, and other items needed in defense. American farmers who gather and sell to the junk dealer all unused machinery, old metal, newspapers, and other waste material are doing a patriotic service. Since jute is imported, this material is especially vital.

5. Home gardens will receive increasing attention as the war continues. [One of the workers was recalling the big garden promotion of the World war.] Most farmers raise many of their own vegetables for table use. It has been pointed out this year they should raise even more and preserve as much as possible for winter use, thus cutting down living costs and conserving metals required in commercial canning. As in the last war, patriotic Americans in small towns as well as on farms will put emphasis on their "war gardens."

Bird Life Week on Farm.

But the men on the farm aren't devoting all of their conversation to war topics. This week the bird life on the farm again came up for discussion when the bird banding traps began to function. For about 10 days these wire traps were left open and well stocked with seeds, stale bread, suet, and other winter feed for small birds. This week we closed the traps so that any birds which came for a meal would be caught.

The first day a single junco entered one of the ground traps, and the next afternoon two bluejays came in for a meal. The following day there were four more birds in the traps, including two tree sparrows, a chickadee, and the junco making a return visit. So we have had four species of winter birds around our banding traps. All were provided with numbered aluminum leg bracelets and released. Two additional traps were put in operation this week, including one which is located on a wooden platform nailed to a fence. This platform trap has not been in operation long enough for us to tell whether or not it will be a success.

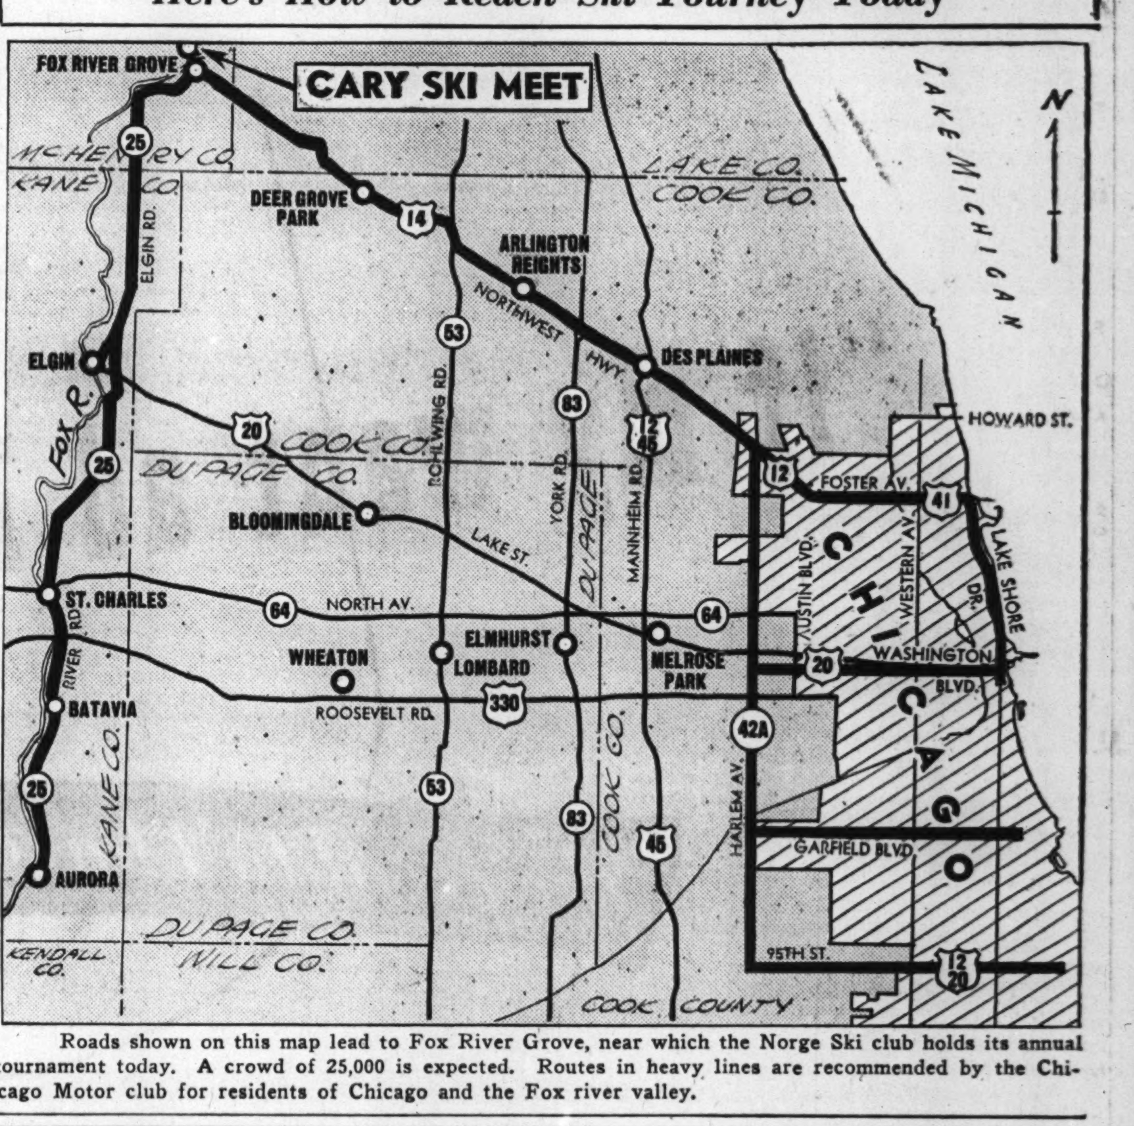
MOTORS—TRAFFIC—HIGHWAYS

Here's How to Reach Ski Tourney Today



Roads shown on this map lead to Fox River Grove, near which the Norge Ski club holds its annual tournament today. A crowd of 25,000 is expected. Routes in heavy lines are recommended by the Chicago Motor club for residents of Chicago and the Fox river valley.

A BIG INDUSTRY SUFFERS DUE TO TOURING SLUMP

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—America's $5,000,000,000 a year recreational touring industry is on the wane and is expected to slump further as the war continues.

This box car money figure [five billion] is the American Automobile association's estimate of what was spent last year by motorists on recreational trips, week-end excursions, vacation jaunts, and Sunday and holiday outings on the highway.

As motorists are forced to conserve rubber, there's a decline in all of the thousand and one businesses that catered to the road fans—hotels, restaurants, gas stations, luggage stores, and the like.

It's Just an Estimate.

Measurements of this decline today are vague, but almost as vague have been attempts in the past to measure how much the 27,000,000 passenger car owners put out of their pockets in the course of a year for pleasure driving. The $5,000,000,000 figure was reached by means of questionnaires sent to several thousand owners.

The best available gauge of the effect of the current decline comes from AAA fieldmen inspecting travelers' accommodations on the main routes to and from Florida. This week they reported to headquarters here that the volume of this inter-regional travel appeared to be about 15 per cent less than a year ago.

The volume of recreational touring stood up well in the depression years following the 1929 stock market crash. The higher priced hotels and resorts lost business in 1930, '31, and '32 to the lower priced caterers, the tourist camps, and roadside eating stands. The lower priced facilities witnessed a conspicuous expansion.

Steady Growth Since 1932.

Since 1932, the number of motor travelers, the amount of their expenditures, and the mileage of their pleasure travels have been growing consistently. Last year, notwithstanding the outbreak of the war on Dec 7, was approximately the same in total expenditures as the best previous year, 1940.

In 1942 and the years to follow until the war is ended, the tourist industry faces unprecedented handicaps for which no help is in sight. The public is conserving rubber for essential driving. It has to conserve because there isn't going to be enough to go around until the Japs are whipped in the far east and the American navy can open the trade lanes for rubber imports from the west Pacific.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson said here this week that hopes for relaxation of the tire ration order are "dangerous and foolhardy." Hopes for the future of the tourist industry are no brighter than the hopes for the rubber essential to this giant business scattered over 99,000 miles of roads.

Congress Turns an Ear to Auto Dealers' Tales of Woe

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—America's 44,000 automobile dealers, innocent victims of war economy, are receiving generous attention from the national administration. This week the house and last week the senate held lengthy committee sessions in their behalf. Also the Office of Production Management has held extensive conferences with representatives of the National Automobile Dealers' association.

The motor car is so close to America's economic and social life that the dealers' problems warrant this special attention. Their problem is the public's problem because their services are required to maintain 28,000,000 motor vehicles in owners' hands.

A Political Aspect.

However, there is another aspect to this interest in the dealers, expressed humorously by a North Dakota spokesman for their association during a session before the house small business committee.

"We've been treated swell in hearings before the senate," he commented. "We're getting even better treatment from the congressmen. Of course, we should get better treatment from the congressmen because they come around to see us every two years, whereas the senators come around to see us only once every six years."

The witness, of course, referred to the political influence of the car dealers. The senator's term is for six years and the congressman's for two. Like other substantial business men, as the automobile men were before Pearl Harbor, they have been subject to solicitations for campaign donations.

Plan Reward for Storage.

Under the new car ration plan being developed by Price Administrator Leon Henderson, the tentative agreement is for the dealers to be paid a full list price for the 550,000 to 600,000 new vehicles that are to be the last produced in America until the end of the war. They are to be paid storage charges for the cars that have been held in their stocks since Jan. 1 and are not to be released for delivery until after Feb. 2. They are to be paid to store 130,000 to 140,000 cars that are to be held for a year as a backlog for replacement of machines for essential requirements, such as public health and public safety.

"They need and deserve help from the government," Floyd B. Odlum, director division of contract distribution, OPM, testified before the congressional committee. "They are war casualties. There have been other similar casualties, such as metal shops that have been put out of business.

"These businesses have been damaged by the government as directly as the farmer is damaged when a troop movement tramples his grain. They are damaged as directly as is a property owner when his house is condemned to make room for a government project.

"There is legal machinery for the individual to collect for those more common forms of damage. The legislature might well consider machinery to compensate for this new form of government damage . . . priorities damages."

NEWS AND VIEWS

[From time to time advice will be given in this department on how to make the family car last longer.]

Proper engine lubrication will prolong the life of an automobile. Your dealer or service man should have the job because he has been trained to do it right. Clean oil will keep your engine running smoothly.

Contrary to the belief of most motorists, the lubrication should be watched more closely in winter than summer because winter driving is harder on oil.

Keep the level of oil in the crankcase within the safety zone set by the manufacturer. Use the viscosity he recommends. Use a light oil in winter. This reduces the drag on rotating parts during the warm up. When the engine is stopped after a drive, the warm oil flows from the pistons, out of the bearings and down into the crankcase. It soon cools and becomes thick and doesn't circulate easily.

When a cold engine is started metal runs against metal without the aid of cushioning oil. It is during the warming up period that the engine gets its greatest wear. One authority comments that the engine is worn out during the warming up period.

One authority recommends the engine be warmed up 5 or 10 minutes.

Summer oil should be heavier—an oil that will not break down under hot heavy driving.

When an automobile engine burns a gallon of gasoline it produces more than a gallon of water. In ordinary weather the water is passed out in the form of steam or vapor thru the exhaust. But in cold weather there is fast condensation, which results in water getting into the oil. An emulsion is formed in the crankcase and the effectiveness of the oil is seriously impaired. The colder the weather the faster the condensation and the more water gets into the oil. City driving during winter, where runs are too short to create sufficient engine heat to avert condensation, are especially hard on an engine. In especially cold weather changes of oil are recommended at 500 miles or less.

City dust which gets into oil acts as an abrasive, damaging cylinder walls, wrist pins, and other delicately finished surfaces of the engine. When oil is used too long it becomes contaminated. Carbon trouble results.

Remember to have cartridges in oil filters changed as recommended. This helps ensure clean oil.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

A SENSIBLE PROTEST.

Barrington, Ill., Jan. 6.—This morning I was driving to the city on Rand road at about 50 miles per hour. Just north of Euclid avenue I was passed by a state of Illinois orange coupe which was going at least 70 miles an hour. It was not a police car.

For the last 25 years I have been a fairly fast driver and I like to get places in a hurry. However, since Pearl Harbor and before the lid was closed on tire sales I have cut myself down to 50 and only drive when necessary.

My point is this. Whoever this state employé was he could have gotten to his destination by starting a bit earlier and going slower. The fact that he can get new tires when these are worn out does not justify his burning up tires where the ordinary citizen can't.

RANDOLPH PAYSON.

NO AMBER LIGHTS.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—I reside near the intersection of North avenue and La Salle street. Scarcely a day goes by that I do not hear and see from my window a rear end auto collision at the lights.

Some months ago the amber warning lights were eliminated from the four traffic lights at this corner. Now the green or red lights flash on abruptly. Most motorists, I believe, are used to the amber warning light. The abrupt change at the North-La Salle corner, I feel, is responsible for the numerous accidents.

MRS. J. J. COLLISSON.

MORE BOTTLENECKS.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—I have driven up and down the outer drive for the last few years watching the transformation of our boulevard system in Lincoln park. What was once a pleasant spot thru which to drive is now a concrete racetrack with ugly lamp posts, stop lights and dizzy curves. What was meant to speed up traffic now retards it. Instead of one or two bottlenecks from the loop to the north side we now have one continuous bottleneck. All this and millions of dollars spent, too. The men who are hired as engineers to eliminate traffic congestion could have done a better job.

JOSEPH S. FARINA.

TRUCKS.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Don't damn the trucks if you're caught in a highway traffic jam these days. They are doing a transportation job essential to the armament program. It isn't their fault if the highways are inadequate. They have paid and are still paying enough taxes to build adequate pavements.

TRUCKER.

UNNECESSARY DRIVING.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—If auto drivers would voluntarily omit unnecessary driving, the gas and tire problems would be well on the way to solution, without expense or trouble to any one. Cars driven to business districts with only one person aboard only add to traffic troubles, anyway.

circulation

● Daily and Sunday during December, the Tribune had more than 1,000,000 circulation. This was 545,000 more than any other Chicago daily newspaper delivered. It was 290,000 more than the second Sunday newspaper delivered and 760,000 more than the third Sunday newspaper.

Right in Chicago and suburbs, the Tribune sold 385,000 more copies on weekdays than any other Chicago daily newspaper. On Sunday the Tribune sold 355,000 more copies in Chicago and suburbs than the second Sunday newspaper and 440,000 more than the third Sunday newspaper.

Multiplied by such market-wide circulation, your Tribune want ad gets across your offer to prospects for everything which can be sold, rented, traded or bought. This is why the Tribune can produce maximum response to your offer.

It is likewise the reason why want ad users in general place more want advertising in the Tribune than they place in any other Chicago newspaper. And this in turn makes it possible for the Tribune to give you Chicago's most convenient and helpful want ad service.

THAT'S HOW CHICAGO FEELS ABOUT TRIBUNE WANT AD SERVICE ...and here's why!

No matter how little you can spend for a want ad—however seldom you may use one—when you call SUPerior 0100 and ask for a Tribune Want Ad-Viser, you get immediate, friendly help.

Each Want Ad-Viser has her own glass inclosed, soundproof booth specially designed and equipped to give you interruption-free attention and service. She has been carefully picked from thousands of applicants and has been specially trained in telephone service. She is expert and experienced in handling want ad problems.

To get results quickly and at low cost, call SUPerior 0100 and ask for a Want Ad-Viser.

Two centrally located want ad stores, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower, 435 North Michigan avenue, are maintained for your convenience. You are invited to take full advantage of the courteous and helpful personal want ad service which these two want ad stores offer.

Prompt, efficient want ad service by mail is gladly furnished by another special department. Just outline what you want to say and an expert ad-writer will shape up your copy and return it to you for your approval, together with quotations of costs. THE MOMENT YOU OPEN the package you'll see that this new soap is whiter—twice as white as the leading granulated soaps on the market today. And no strong soap-powder odor.

BUT THE BIG THING about New 4-Purpose Super Suds is the way it achieves extra washing power without harsh-chemical action. So gentle you can use it for EVERYTHING IN YOUR WASH—safe even for washable rayons, silks and woolens!

WITH IT, you'll see shirts, sheets, pillow cases come as much as 25% whiter, cup for cup, than soap after soap we tested against. And you'll get up to 3 times the suds, cup for cup, of 8 of the popular brands we've tested.

(4) Dishes washed sparkling with extra speed—and with "rayon-safety" for hands! . . . Get Super Suds next washday.

BATH IN A THIMBLE
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Copyright 1942 by News Syndicate Co. Inc. 1-18

A Leaky Faucet

THE TEENIE WEENIE Sailor helped the Cowboy lift a ketchup bottle top full of boiling water from the Teenie Weenie stove and pour it into a thimble. It was Saturday night, and the Cowboy threw off his tiny dressing gown and stepped into the thimble for his weekly bath.

"A thimbleful of hot water cools off mighty quick," said the Cowboy as he scrubbed his tiny body. "I wish we had a winter swimming pool so we could take a bath without freezing. There's no fun taking a bath in a thimble."

"I know where there is a dandy swimming pool," said the Sailor.

"Warm water?" asked the Cowboy.

"Certainly!" answered the Sailor. "I know where there is a leaky faucet. It's in some big folk's washbowl. All we'd need to do to make a swimming pool would be to put the stopper in the hole and let the bowl fill with water. There is an overflow in the bowl so we would not get into any trouble. The boy and girl who live there went to their grandmother's to spend the weekend, and their father and mother took them in their big, shiny car."

"Then tomorrow's the day for us to have our swim!" cried the Cowboy.

He could scarcely wait to get into his clothes so he could carry the news of this delightful plan to the other Teenie Weenies. But even in his haste the Cowboy remembered the Teenie Weenie Doctor's warning that everybody who does not want to catch cold must dry himself thoroughly after a bath.

As soon as the Cowboy was dressed he and the Sailor raced to tell the Cook about the swimming pool plan. Then the Cook told the Lady of Fashion. She asked the General to let them use the bowl for a swim. The General agreed.

On Sunday morning several of the Teenie Weenie men went into the house. They climbed up to the washbowl and after a great deal of grunting and sweating they managed to plug the hole.

While the leaky faucet slowly filled the bowl, the Teenie Weenies put on their tiny bathing suits and climbed up to the basin for their swim. When the water was deep enough, they plunged in and swam to their hearts' content. Some of the men wet the top of the bowl with water and slid a cake of soap into the bowl to be used as a life raft, but it was so slippery that it was all the little people could do to hang on.

The Dunce climbed to the top of the faucet and slid off the smooth spout into the water. That proved to be very popular with the little folk, and some of the men slid so often they nearly wore out their tiny bathing suits. In fact, the Dunce did wear out his suit. When he discovered holes in the seat of his trunks, he decided to leave his bathing suit in the bathroom so that he wouldn't be scolded for his carelessness.

Sunday evening the little girl who lived in the house found the Dunce's suit.

"Don," she said to her brother, who was brushing his teeth, "this rag looks like a tiny bathing suit!"

They would have been astonished to know that their washbowl had been full of people small enough to wear that bathing suit.

"CRAZY KATE," EVER'BODY CALLS HER---THERE'S THEIR PLACE--GEE! IT'S TERRIBLE-- AN' MAYBE LORETTA'S MAMA IS CRAZY--- BUT THAT'S NOT LORETTA'S FAULT---
KATIE WAS ONLY SIX AND LIVED NEXT DOOR TO DOC ZEE WHEN HE WENT AWAY TO SCHOOL, THIRTY YEARS AGO-- GEE--KATIE'S ONLY THIRTY-SIX- SHE LOOKS A HUNDRED-
AND SHE PICKS COAL AND DIGS IN GARBAGE CANS NIGHTS FOR FOOD--- AND IF FOLKS GO TO SEE HER, SHE HIDES-- BUT DOC SAW HER---HE TALKED TO HER--- BUT HE WOULDN'T TELL WHAT THEY SAID--- POOR KATIE--- LITTLE SIX-YEAR-OLD--PIG TAILS-- HAIR RIBBONS--THIRTY YEARS AGO-- THIRTY YEARS, GOING DOWN TO THAT! POVERTY! FILTH! DEGRADATION! INSANITY!
THIRTY YEARS-- AND MY ROAD WAS THE WAY OF SCIENCE---DEGREES-- HONORS--RARE SKILL---EXPERIENCE--- AND WHAT HAVE I LEARNED? I WONDER-- CERTAINLY I'VE LEARNED WHEN NOT TO USE THE KNIFE-
THIRTY YEARS--STALKING THE GREATEST MYSTERY OF ALL-- THE HUMAN MIND--- AM I READY NOW? DARE I STEP BEYOND THE PALE? HAVE I THE RIGHT TO TAMPER WITH A HUMAN MIND? EH? WHO'S THERE?
OH! HELLO! IT'S YOU, PADRE!
YES! IT IS I! I REMEMBER HOW YOU ALWAYS CALLED ME "PADRE"- HA! HA! YOU PRONOUNCE "PADRE" BETTER NOW, SINCE YOUR RETURN FROM SPAIN-
I'M GLAD YOU'VE COME, PADRE--I'M STUCK- I NEED YOUR ADVICE- THERE'S A CASE, AND I'M AFRAID I'VE LOST MY NERVE-
YES? KATIE? THEY SAY SHE IS CRAZY-
IT'S A LIE! OH, SHE'S CRAZY, BUT WHAT I MEAN IS---BUT WAIT--HOW DID YOU KNOW IT WAS KATIE?
I SAW YOU GO TO HER HOUSE--AND I SAW YOUR EYES WHEN YOU LEFT- MY EYES ARE OLD- BUT, IF I READ CORRECTLY, YOU DO NOT NEED ADVICE, MY SON-

Here's why my family starts each day the healthful Super breakfast way!

A girl's best friend is her glamour . . . whether you're a sophomore, or a busy Mother like me! So I'm not going to risk chasing that starry-eyed look from Jim by becoming a tired, cross, uninteresting wife! Not while I have Quaker Oats to help me stay peppy!

Provable facts: Quaker Oats is naturally triple-rich in the great "anti-fatigue" Vitamin B_1—needed by everyone daily for vibrant energy, good nerves! Quaker Oats contains enough natural Vitamin B_1 to "spark" itself and twice again as much additional food into energy!

That heavenly flavor's only half the story, the experts say! I just feel better when I start my family off with a hot breakfast! So imagine how reassuring it was to read how many leading food authorities agreed with me!

Provable facts: In a recent survey, 136 out of 142 of the dietitians and 368 out of 372 of the home economists questioned recommended a hot cereal for the average family! Quick Quaker Oats, with its temptingly different, whole-grain deliciousness, is ready quicker than the coffee!

Pardon me for looking angelic, but . . . I am mighty happy it was I who discovered how Quaker Oats could help our Gracie! Naturally, those compliments I've heard about how nicely she's growing and filling out are music to my ears!

Provable facts: Oatmeal leads all other whole-grain cereals in Proteins—needed for building firm flesh, strong muscles, trim bodies! It's rich in Phosphorus, for strong bones, straight bodies, firm teeth! In Iron, for rich, red blood! In Vitamin B_1—needed by children for normal growth!

DANGER IS HER EVERYDAY BUSINESS

By LLOYD WENDT

WHEN MONA attended one of her own cocktail parties it was an event, and if she remained to the giddy finish the guests pronounced the occasion epochal. People came, invited by telegram at the last moment, to see if Mona was lovely as ever, to meet her odd friends, or to witness one of her famous disappearances. One moment she'd be in the throng, gracious and gay, putting at ease those curious tight-lipped little men who always wandered in; then suddenly it would be observed that Mona had quietly vanished, not to be heard of again for days or weeks.

At Mona's you might meet such persons as Billy the Dip, Frog Face Halleran, and Paper Collar Joe. They were popping in and out among the lawyers, advertising and radio people, and the occasional bankers and pawnbrokers. They drank less than any one else, spoke only when spoken to, and then chose their words with painful care. Once Smooth Johnny Willikens had maneuvered a banker into a corner to hold earnest conversation with him.

"It would be a nice, clean muscle!" Johnny was saying as Mona came up. "No rough stuff. Just a nice, clean muscle."

Presumably no one would ever have learned about Mona's business had not one night a newspaper man raced first to Mona's telephone and successfully imitated her Filipino boy.

"Listen, Juan," said a hurried voice on the wire, "tell missy it's a murder! Tell her to put on the barroom rags and meet me at Lawrence and Broadway. I got th' car. Tell her to hurry it up."

The newsman delivered the message.

"O.K.," said Mona angrily, "so now you know. Come along while I get ready."

The journalist studied the outer darkness thru her bedroom window while Mona changed.

"I do a case now and then," she confided. "It won't help me any if you tell it about, and I know you won't. If it's a murder your office has the flash, and anyhow you can't go with me. Be a good boy and keep them busy while I slip out. I'll call you tomorrow, and if I can meet you I'll (Continued on page two.)

America Salutes Another Great Fighting Hero—Capt. Colin P. Kelly Jr.

By WILLIAM SHINNICK

"HIS PRAISE will be sung as long as liberty lasts." Those words, spoken Dec. 21 in the little Presbyterian church at Madison, Fla., expressed the deep and unqualified admiration of the United States for its first great hero of the war against Japan—Capt. Colin P. Kelly Jr.

Captain Kelly lost his life in battle, but not until he and his six companions aboard a bombing plane had dealt the Japanese navy the heaviest blow it suffered in the first month of hostilities. They sank the battleship Haruna, of 29,600 tons, with three direct bomb hits.

Military men habitually put their reports in understatements, but the official description of Kelly's exploit and his death in the Philippines is enough to prove him worthy of rank with the outstanding heroes of any war his country ever fought. Courage, unlimited devotion to duty, efficiency—all these he had, and his last thoughts were of the safety of his plane and the men who went forth with him on his magnificent adventure.

The tempo of war in the Pacific is swift. Captain Kelly and his crew took off from their home field. Below the big bomber spread the warm eastern seas dotted with green islands, and on the water Japanese vessels carrying yellow men bent on conquest.

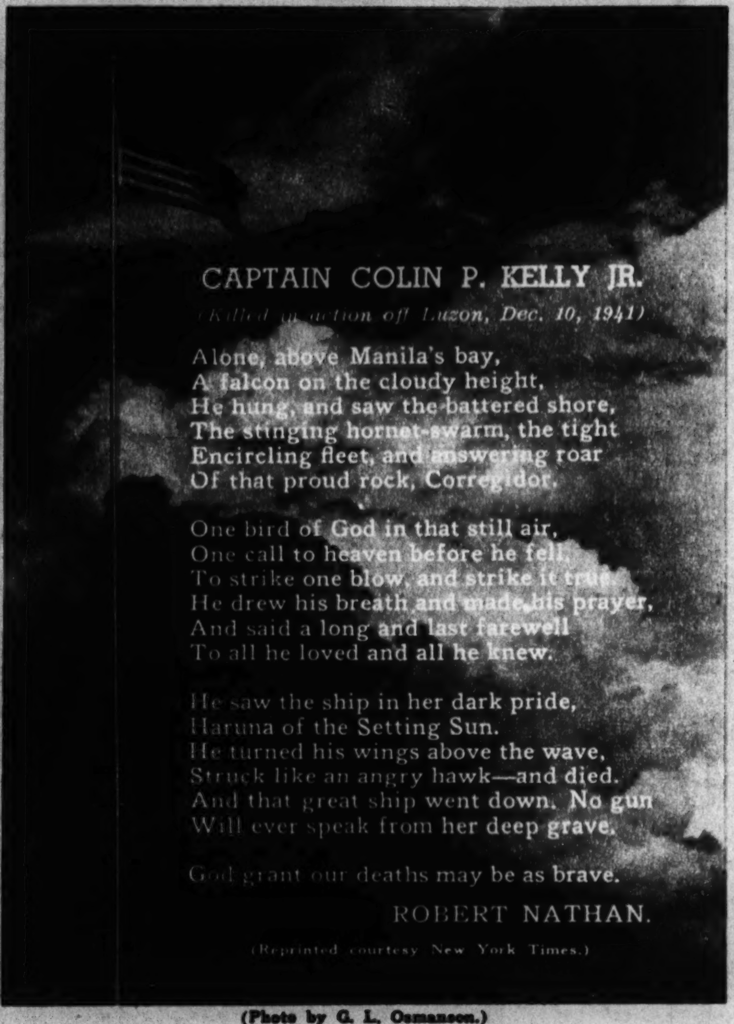
It was the work of only a few minutes for the Americans to plunge thru the heavy protective fire of the Haruna and give her the bombs that sent her to the bottom. Then, his mission accomplished, Captain Kelly headed his plane back to the landing field to get more bombs and to take off again.

Officers who saw his final action said he was only two minutes from base when two enemy fighter planes swept out of a cloud bank and attacked. Their cannon and machine guns sprayed the bomber, which wobbled, righted itself under the skilful handling of the captain, and kept on. Then fire broke out in the motors. Five crew members bailed out in parachutes and landed safely, altho the Jap airmen tried to machine-gun them. A Lieutenant Robbins, sixth and last to leave, was literally blown out when the craft exploded.

• • •

Captain Kelly, still at the controls, was killed by the blast. He did not know even that he had sunk the Haruna; neither did Robbins, who almost miraculously landed with no hurts other than burns. Other pilots had to confirm the sinking.

Meager accounts from the Philippines some days later told of Gen. Douglas MacArthur personally presenting distinguished service crosses to air officers who had inflicted damage on the enemy and lived to tell the tale. He awarded the same honor posthumously to Captain Kelly.



CAPTAIN COLIN P. KELLY JR.

Alone, above Manila's bay,
A falcon on the cloudy height,
He hung, and saw the battered shore,
The stinging hornet-swarm, the tight
Encircling fleet, and answering roar
Of that proud rock, Corregidor.

One bird of God in that still air,
One call to heaven before he fell,
To strike one blow, and strike it true,
He drew his breath and made his prayer,
And said a long and last farewell
To all he loved and all he knew.

He saw the ship in her dark pride,
Haruna of the Setting Sun.
He turned his wings above the wave,
Struck like an angry hawk—and died.
And that great ship went down. No gun
Will ever speak from her deep grave.

God grant our deaths may be as brave.

"His sacrifice," said the general, visibly affected, "will live forever in the memory of the American people."

Captain Kelly was born in Monticello, Fla., on July 11, 1915. He was graduated from the Madison High school and entered West Point in 1933. In the 1937 class he stood near the top scholastically. He went into the army as a second lieutenant of infantry but at his own request was transferred into aviation.

"I think he always wanted to be a soldier—and an aviator, too," said his father.

His training as an airman was obtained at Randolph and Kelly fields in Texas, and he had his pilot rating in January, 1939. He was made a captain in September, 1940.

• • •

In August, 1937, Lieutenant Kelly and Miss Marion Wick, with whom he became acquainted while he was a cadet, were married at West Point. After his heroic death she said that he was "always an officer" and that he would have been happy to know that he was to die in conflict with a faithless enemy.

It is proper to note here that Captain Kelly's abilities were recognized by other officers and that they praised most of all his dash and his willingness to take the initiative.

Mrs. Kelly and her son, Colin P. Kelly III., were in Brooklyn, N. Y., when the news of his death reached them. One of the most touching incidents of the acclaim given his father centered about the boy, who is only 19 months old.

President Roosevelt on Dec. 18 made public a letter he had written, addressed to "The President of the United States in 1956," asking that he appoint young Kelly a cadet at the military academy. The President said he was making the request "in the full confidence that we shall achieve a glorious victory in the war we are now waging."

That was but one of the honors given the captain's memory. Legislation to award him a congressional medal of honor, the highest of all American military decorations, was speedily introduced. Before the new year's dawn an aviation cadet unit in Detroit was known by his name. Messages of sympathy sent by thousands of Americans reached his family, and during the memorial service in Madison, army planes circled overhead.

It was the minister, the Rev. H. R. Latham, who said that Captain Kelly's praise would be sung while liberty lasts. It is true. Kelly alive was one of our forward-looking army men, men who saw the value of air command. His death will be a reminder that to win the war the United States must use modern equipment and methods.

DANGER IS THE GIRL DETECTIVE'S WORK

"What's your name?" she asked. "Just call me Duke."

tell you what it's all about. Now get me a cab, please."

Tony Anturio had been shot and killed just outside a saloon in a district where killings were not too novel. But Tony was not an ordinary victim. He was a union business agent of unpleasant reputation, and a man of wealth. There had been trouble within the union, and racketeers without were reported to be pressing upon its treasury. Tony had enemies everywhere, but the most outspoken of them was young Peter L., leader of a rival faction, who had accused Tony of shaking down the members. Peter had been in the saloon near the time of the shooting. The evidence against him seemed conclusive, and the police had him in jail.

• • •

"Look, this is how it is," Mona told the newspaper man as they sat together over a spaghetti dinner the following afternoon. "I know the police and the papers pin it on Peter, and I know he seems in a bad spot. But I know also that he's innocent.

"I'm working for his lawyer, and my boss was convinced in the beginning that Peter was framed. It works out. The syndicate wants the union. Tony was taking plenty for himself, but he was keeping the syndicate racketeers out. Young Peter is an idealist without too much sense. He wanted to clean up the union, and he swore he'd drive Tony out. What could be better? The syndicate mob hires a killer to get Tony and frames Peter to take the rap for it. You've got to have a theory on a case, you know, and that's our theory. I'm telling you so you can see what's happened.

"We're going to break this case tonight, just as soon as we've picked up a few more loose ends. I'll tell you what's gone on and when you can break the story. But you've got to keep my secret. This girl detective business is tough enough without me getting in the papers. O.K.? . . . Now, here's what happened last night: . . ."

When Mona met her partner from the agency a few hours after the murder he drove her immediately to the saloon, the Silver Spoon. Anturio's body had been found outside, but Jamies, the agent, said that business was going on as usual within the place.

"Here's the situation," he explained. "Anturio hung around the Spoon. Maybe he had a piece of it. I doubt that, because the place has been taking orders from the syndicate. The story the police get is that young Peter came in there looking for him, didn't find him, and then went out. Just outside, the police say, he saw Tony getting out of a car. They had words, and Peter drew a gun and shot him. There's a couple of witnesses testifying to that.

"But Peter tells the boss he got a call to meet Tony in the saloon. He says he went there and waited. Then a man told him Tony was waiting outside. Just as he stepped out there was a shot and Tony dropped to the street. People crowded around, and when Peter put his hand in his pocket he felt a gun! He doesn't know how it got there, but of course he put his prints on it. Just then the police grabbed him. If there are prints of the guilty parties on the cartridges it'll prove something. But they probably were careful of that, just like they were with the gun.

"The boss wants you to pick up what you can in the saloon. Work on one of the bartenders. There's one clew that may help us. Tony had a bump on his head. Maybe he hit the curb when he fell—or maybe somebody clipped him and then brought him to the Silver Spoon to be shot."

Mona carmined her lips, shook out her yellow ringlets, and added a coat of rouge. "How do I look?" she leered.

"Listen, baby," said Jamies, "don't go getting yourself into any trouble. There's more to this than just a union squabble, and the boys aren't going to have the finger put on 'em, no matter what they have to do to stop it. I'll let you out here. Come down to the office when you're thru, no matter what time it is. The boss'll be there, and I'll be back there in a couple of hours. Switch cabs before you come in."

"I may be a long time if the bartender's friendly," she answered.

Mona was accomplished in the art of nursing drinks. One of her first jobs had been to sit at bars and observe whether the bartenders were knocking down on the house. A girl memorizes the liquor prices, sees what the bartender is serving, and then notes whether he puts the full price of the drinks he sells into the till. Many women detectives start at the bottom thus. The trick, of course, is to drink all night without getting intoxicated.

There were men around the bar who wanted to be friendly, but Mona shouldered them off, and the red-faced bartender they called Richard observed her actions with approval.

"U'm jus' a helpless woman, an' these wolves wo'n' leave me alone," she confided to Richard. "But you're a gentleman."

• • •

Richard brightened and set up a drink on the house. Mona told him her imaginary troubles, and he in return spoke freely of his alimony difficulties. But never once thru the evening did Richard or any one else at the bar mention the shooting. Mona thought that significant. It should have been the natural topic of conversation in any barroom. Obviously the customers knew the place well and were scared.

Toward quitting time Richard had grown even more friendly. He described the comfortable security that could be offered a helpless young woman in his tastefully furnished apartment, which was complete with radio, refrigerator, and free beer. Mona seemed interested. Richard put an unaccustomed sparkle on the glasses as he contemplated the progress he was making.

"What time ish it?" inquired Mona suddenly.

"Almost 2 o'clock," said Richard. "We're closing at 2 t'night. After what's happened th' police ud knock us off t'night if we stay open after hours. Baby, how about you an' me——"

"What's happened t'night, mister?"

Richard frowned. "No point talkin' about it."

"But I wanna talk about it. What's happened t'night?"

"They shot a guy outside here, sister," said a swarthy man who had just pushed in beside her. "It's just one a those little things people don't talk about."

"Um-m-h," said Mona, eying him. "Where'd you come from, handsome?"

"What's that matter, so long's I'm here?" he countered.

She purred at him, and they had a drink together, while Richard glared belligerently. Finally the man suggested a date.

"Baby, keep away from him," Richard whispered as the dark man left the bar for a moment.

"I like him—he's nice."

"You was goin' with me."

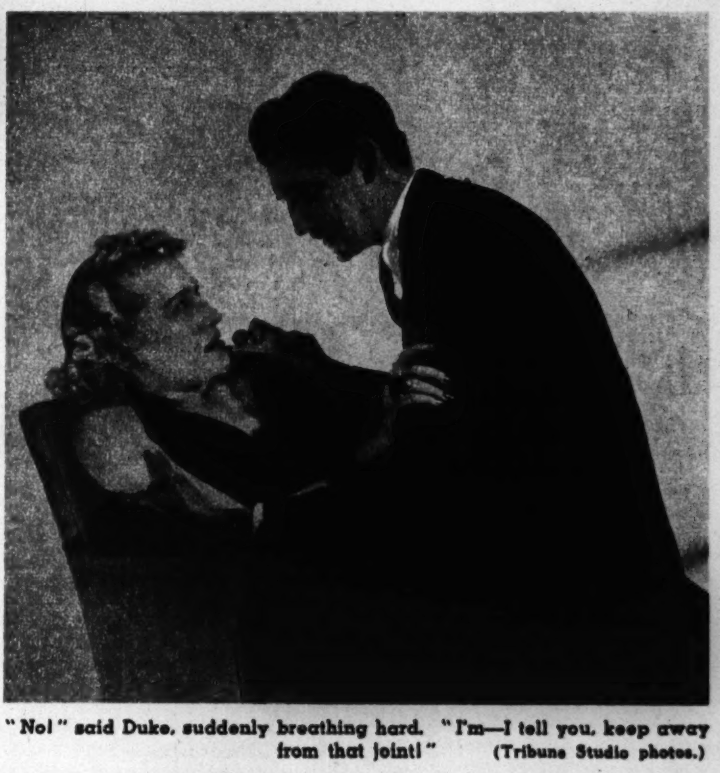
"Well——"

The bartender looked about him. "Listen!" he said fiercely. "You don't want that guy. He's —hot—hotter'n a stove. He's fulla hop or he wouldn't be back here."

"O.K., fella," said Mona softly. "But I can't cross him now. I'll let him take me home—no further. I'll be around tomorrow night. Then you'n me can go places."

"We're going to break this case tonight."

She flashed Richard a smile and was busy with her drink when the dark man returned. She was trying to think things out. She had a feeling that the dark man might actually be the one she wanted. If she could be positive she could take him to a room, give him knockout drops, and then call Jamies to make a paraffin test of his hands. If he had fired the shot they'd find nitrate grains. But that would constitute entrapment, and if her friend wasn't guilty she'd not only blow up the whole case but end her career as an investigator forever.



"No!" said Duke, suddenly breathing hard. "I'm—I tell you, keep away from that joint!" (Tribune Studio photos.)

"What's your name?" she asked her companion as he sat close beside her.

"Just call me Duke."

"O.K., Duke. I'm tired. Let's go."

• • •

That Mona would not permit Duke beyond the lobby of the cheap hotel she chose for the night did not cool his ardor. He was angry at first, but when he saw that he could not shake her he begged her to see him again.

"Listen, girl," said Duke, "you don't want t' live in a joint like this! I'm goin' out on a business trip. Shoulda been gone by now. I've got dough, baby, an' you an' me could do things."

Mona considered the proposal. She dared not lose him, and undoubtedly, if there was no other way out, she must go with him. She watched him curiously as they talked. He was becoming nervous and irritable, there were circles of pallor about his eyes, along the ridges of his forehead and cheekbones, and he licked his dry lips impatiently. She guessed that he was a drug addict and that the effect was wearing off. She suggested meeting him the following day at the Silver Spoon.

"No!" said Duke, suddenly breathing hard. "I'm—I tell you, keep away from that place. It's a joint."

"What's the matter with you?" Mona demanded. "You sick?"

"I'm—drinking too heavy, maybe. I'll pick you up here tomorrow. Be set t' start."

"You need a needle," Mona said.

He sighed. "Yeah. Yeah. You hit it, too, huh? I—had a tough day."

"Come on up," Mona invited with sudden decision. "I know the clerk here, and he'll fix us up. I'll get you a room next to mine."

Duke waited near the elevator; and Mona spoke swiftly to the clerk:

"Just take it easy and listen to what I'm telling you. I've got to have your help. I want rooms for that man and myself. Then call this man"—she slipped him Jamies' card—"and tell him to come up right away with a hypo needle and a dictograph. He's a detective. Tell him to bring up a police detective, and tell 'em to come armed. Don't miss on this. There'll be $100 in it for you."

The elevator man showed them the rooms. Mona inspected them quickly and saw plenty of chinks in the walls where a button microphone might be inserted.

"I'll wait in here with you," she told Duke. "I'm outa stuff, but the clerk's sending some up."

Duke had become too ill to be interested in the fact that Mona was alone in the room with him. He talked feverishly of their plans, moaned over a splitting headache, and promised vehemently that he would never again be without his hypo kit.

Jamies tapped at the door and Mona went into the corridor to receive the syringe and needle. She quickly told him her suspicions.

"Get a record," she directed. "He's sure to talk. I must get back now or he'll get suspicious."

"Listen, honey," she told Duke, "I'll set this up for you. Then I'll have one myself. What you use?"

"Ten grains," said Duke, calming.

She chatted with him to cover

Gregory Ratoff . . . "I am a guy what is looking for something beautiful."

Hollywood.

AMONG Hollywood directors you can find almost any kind of dialect. Lately there have been a couple of Frenchmen around—too late, I suspect, to do themselves much good. There are Britons like Alfred Hitchcock and Robert Stevenson. There are many Mittel-Europeans, and plain Americans like twangy Sam Wood of Philadelphia, Pa., soft-voiced George Stevens of Oakland, Cal., and radio-tongued Orson Welles of Kenosha, Wis. But the champs are undoubtedly Gregory Ratoff and Michael Curtiz. Their specialty is not alone a peculiar and fruity accent but also the wit and personality to make the accent memorable.

When things go wrong on a Ratoff set, Ratoff moans, "Remember I'm a sick man with an accent." Curtiz has been credited with more Goldwynisms than Goldwyn—and, as in the case of Screaming Sam, only few of them really were spoken. Ratoff is Russian; Curtiz, Hungarian. Both men, contrary to the legends which have grown up about their lingual lunacies, are well educated and have an immensely respectable grounding in show business.

I HAPPENED to be on the set of "Trinidad" on the morning Ratoff was winding up that picture for Columbia. It's a comedy about two guys, Pat O'Brien and Brian Donlevy, in the army. Two-thirds of the way thru the production the Nipponese flew over Pearl Harbor and bombed hell out of half the movie plots in Hollywood, including the plot of "Trinidad." Ratoff took this development in stride; he just wrote in the war as he went along.

Now, on this last day, he was making a few finishing shots in an army tent—and Winston Churchill was talking up in Canada. Ratoff was torn between doing his work and hearing the prime minister; he wanted to hear Churchill because maybe Churchill would say something about Russia coming in on our side against the Japs.

Between setups a stooge would turn up a radio full blast. "Closeup of Donlevy next, open up Churchill," Ratoff would bark, and everybody would gather around the radio until camera and lights were ready. On few Hollywood stages would such a diversion be possible—but Ratoff has his own way of making a movie.

Gregory Ratoff was born in Samara, Russia, 44 years ago and was educated in Petrograd, but he never went into any business, because there was another phase of his education that appealed more. He had also gone to a dramatic school, and this work got him a small part—as a butler—in something by Ostrovsky called "Mad Money." From there on the theater was to be his life, but soon after his debut he joined the Russian army and served in the warm-up World war.

• • •

When the war ended Ratoff went back to St. Petersburg, joined a stock company. Within a year he had formed a Russian theater group and set out to conquer Europe. First stop was Berlin, and sure enough he conquered. Vienna, Budapest, London, and Paris followed. In Paris Ratoff was doing a song-and-dance number, and Broadway's Lee Shubert, then quite a traveler, saw him and offered him a job. That was in 1922, and he made his Broadway debut in the "Revue Russe." For several years Gregory played character parts and had 110 weeks in "Blossom Time."

Ratoff had been a producer in Europe, and he wanted to be one on Broadway. He presented eight plays himself, including a road company of "Kibitzer," which on Broadway had featured a fairly well known actor named Edward G. Robinson, and "Candlelight," starring a lovely Russian, Eugenie Leontovich, who had already become Mrs. Ratoff. Leontovich made her Broadway debut with Ratoff in "Revue Russe."

Gregory's performance in "The Kibitzer" brought him to the attention of movie scouts, and pretty soon David O. Selznick hired him for "Symphony of Six Million." From there on Hollywood was his. Early in the history of Twentieth Century-Fox, Zanuck hired him as a four-barreled author, actor, director, and producer.

• • •

Ratoff has been busy directing lately—"The Corsican Brothers" was his most recent opus—but at heart he's still an actor. He is permanently stage-struck, and, like another fine dialectician, Ernst Lubitsch, he acts most of the rôles in all of his pictures during rehearsals.

He is pretty big—nearly six feet—and a little heavy. He wears slacks and a sweater vest and carries a cane with which he does everything but beat his actors. He waves the stick in an argument, swishes it while he's thinking, hammers it on the floor to signify approval of a good take.

"I have so much energy," he explains himself. "I give all the time, and using this cane relaxes me."

Being an actor at heart, he cannot stand not being the center of attention. On his sets he is noisy, full of gags. On occasion he becomes ill-tempered. But, as Brian Donlevy puts it, his bark is worse than his bite. His outbursts of temper occur just before lunch and just before quitting time—because he is hungry. Says Pat O'Brien, "He diets between meals, but boy, what meals!"

One thing actors like about Ratoff is that he is quick to admit he's wrong and somebody else is right. Having decided he was wrong in a recent argument, the director magnanimously told his opponent, "Disregard 75 per cent of what I said."

Ratoff yarns are countless. During the making of "The Corsican Brothers" two Great Danes were spoiling takes by moving when they shouldn't.

"Take those dogs' names," Gregory commanded an assistant. "I'll see to it that they never get a job again."

Explaining O'Brien's rôle in "Trinidad" to O'Brien, he said:

"You're a gangster type. You know—sort of an Irish Dion O'Bannion."

His penchant for playing every part in a picture brought one of the biggest laughs on the "Trinidad" set. He had directed a love scene between O'Brien and Janet Blair by playing the love business himself. When the scene was shot he was dissatisfied; he leaped from his chair and yelled:

"Don't do it the way I do it! Do it the way I mean it!"

Another time Ratoff took great pains with a long romantic scene. It ran about six minutes, and finally it was rehearsed to his satisfaction and a take was called for. The actors were really giving, and Ratoff, tense behind the camera, got violently enthusiastic.

"Good! Dot's wonderful!" he exclaimed—ten seconds before the end of the take. The sound man said it would have to be made over again. "Remind me," said Ratoff, "to fire myself."

Gregory knows he is funny, but considers himself a Pagliacci.

"I say funny things and I do funny things," he says, "but inside I am a guy what is looking for something beautiful."

He has acted in everything from honky-tonk B's to musicals and has directed same, but he thinks his finest job was the direction of "Intermezzo." He also likes "The Men in Her Life," a recent Loretta Young picture he made, even tho the critics didn't go for it much. Another item of his of which he is proud was "Adam Had Four Sons."

Mike Curtiz, right, tries his dialect on Don Budge and Olivia De Havilland. (Acme photo.)

MIKE CURTIZ'S dialect is different from Ratoff's. Gregory's is a burlesque Russian mispronunciation of words. Mike's is not only mispronunciation but also a weird short-circuiting of sentences; like Goldwyn, he arrives at a brilliant meaning without all the claptrap and clutter of being grammatical. His Curtizisms have been spread wide by the Warner publicity department, and the boys help out by dreaming up lines of their own and peddling them. One time he mildly reproached the publicity department for faking.

"What are you trying to make out of me," he queried, "a jingle-bells?"

Curtiz, 53, was born in Budapest, where his father was an architect and his mother a concert singer. Mike wanted to be an actor from the age of 11, when he made his stage debut in an opera in which his mother was singing. He had a year of college, two years in the Royal Academy of Theater and Art—and became an acrobat. He was the understander for a troupe of circus tumblers.

Curtiz was a second lieutenant in the Hungarian army during the old unpleasantness and spent most of his time on the Russian front. There is no way of telling whether he ever took a shot at Ratoff across the lines, or vice versa, but somebody wounded Curtiz and he was retired to the job of making benefit newsreels for the Red Cross.

• • •

After the war he continued directing, first for Sascha in Hungary, then for Ufa in Germany. Afterward he made films in Denmark, Norway, Sweden, France, Italy, and England. He directed Greta Garbo in Sweden and Conrad Veidt in Germany. And he wrote 60 of his own movies.

Harry Warner signed Curtiz for Hollywood, and Mike's first job was a number called "Tenderloin." His newest one, upon which he is currently engaged, is "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the life story of George M. Cohan. Curtiz has been violently American right from the start. Look at his titles: "Mammy," "The Matrimonial Bed," "Under a Texas Moon," "Cabin in the Cotton," "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," "Female," "Kid Galahad," "Angels with Dirty Faces," "Santa Fe Trail."

Curtiz's specialty is spectacle and action. His last films in order were "The Sea Wolf," "Dive Bomber," and "Captains of the Clouds." He has made such swashbucklers as "Captain Blood" and "The Adventures of Robin Hood." When he was asked how he liked working on Jim Cagney's "Yankee Doodle Dandy" he replied:

"Vunderful. This time I work without horses, guns, cowboys, airplanes, Indians, sabers, and Errol Flynn."

Mike doesn't eat lunch, as Gregory does. He believes food slows people up, and when he calls a player "an after-lunch actor" it's a bitter epithet. When he directed Bette Davis in "Elizabeth and Essex" he told that lady: "When you work with me you don't need lunch. You just take an aspirin."

Curtiz's instructions to actors make sense—but not grammar.

"When you smile," he says, "you should brighten the teeth." Demanding quiet, he may say: "Ssh! Just like the mothers for the babies in the middle of the night, ssh!" Once, after finishing a picture he liked, he told Jack Warner the film was the pinochle of his career.

Making a historical picture, Mike sagely observed, "Seventeenth century love is just like 20th century love without the jingle-bells, highballs, and rah-rah." Explaining their rôles to a pair of actors, he said, "These two characters go hand in hand, like the wheels on a bicycle." And of one of his own big scenes he once said, "It made my blood curl."

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

DeWitt Clinton

DE WITT CLINTON, famous political leader, was born in Little Britain, N. Y., March 2, 1769, a son of James Clinton, a brigadier general of the Revolutionary war. Being graduated from Columbia college (now a part of Columbia university) in 1786, Clinton from 1790 to 1795 was employed as private secretary to his uncle, George Clinton, governor of New York.

He entered the New York state senate in 1798 and served in this body until 1802, when he became a member of the United States senate. He resigned, however, in 1803, to become mayor of New York City, an office which he held until 1815. Part of the time that he was mayor he held other offices as well, being in the state senate from 1806 to 1811 and lieutenant governor from 1811 to 1813.

When the congressional caucus in Washington in 1812 nominated Madison for a second term as President, members of the party (Democratic-Republican) of New York put up Clinton to oppose him, desiring, it is said, to break up the so-called Virginia dynasty and also to abolish the system of congressional nominations. Federalists of 11 states rallied to support Clinton as a protest against Madison's policies, but Madison was reëlected by 128 electoral votes to Clinton's 89.

As a member of the New York legislature Clinton was active in movements for needed reforms, such as the abolition of slavery in New York, the organization of a public school system, and the outlawing of imprisonment for debt.

The War of 1812 halted plans for building a canal from the Hudson river to Lake Erie, a project in which Clinton was deeply interested as a member of the canal commission, but after the conflict the plan was revived. So popular did Clinton become as a result of his promotion of the canal project that he was elected governor of New York by a large plurality. He served in this office at this time from 1817 to 1823. He devoted so much of his energy to the building of the canal that he did not choose to be a candidate to succeed himself for a third term, but when his enemies managed to remove him from the office of canal commissioner he once again became a candidate, was elected by a large majority, and served as governor from 1825 to the day of his death, Feb. 11, 1828. His death occurred in Albany, N. Y.

The Erie canal, a 326-mile waterway, was opened with formal ceremonies in October, 1825. Clinton, as governor and leading sponsor of this famous canal, took part in the ceremonies.

PERFECT POEMS

The Tribune has been requested by many readers to continue publication of "Perfect Poems," altho the original list, taken from "Fifty Perfect Poems," compiled by Rossiter Johnson and Charles A. Dana, has been exhausted. Future poems will be selected from the works of all writers whose poetry has survived the test of years.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, one of the great English poets, was born at Cockermouth, Cumberland, April 7, 1770, the son of an attorney. He was educated at Cambridge and began writing poetry at an early age. He passed a year in France (1791-'92) and expressed great sympathy with the revolution. There was a general decline in his poetic powers after 1810. In 1843 he was made poet laureate and died April 23, 1850. Among his short poems is "The Daffodils."

THE DAFFODILS

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host, of golden daffodils;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

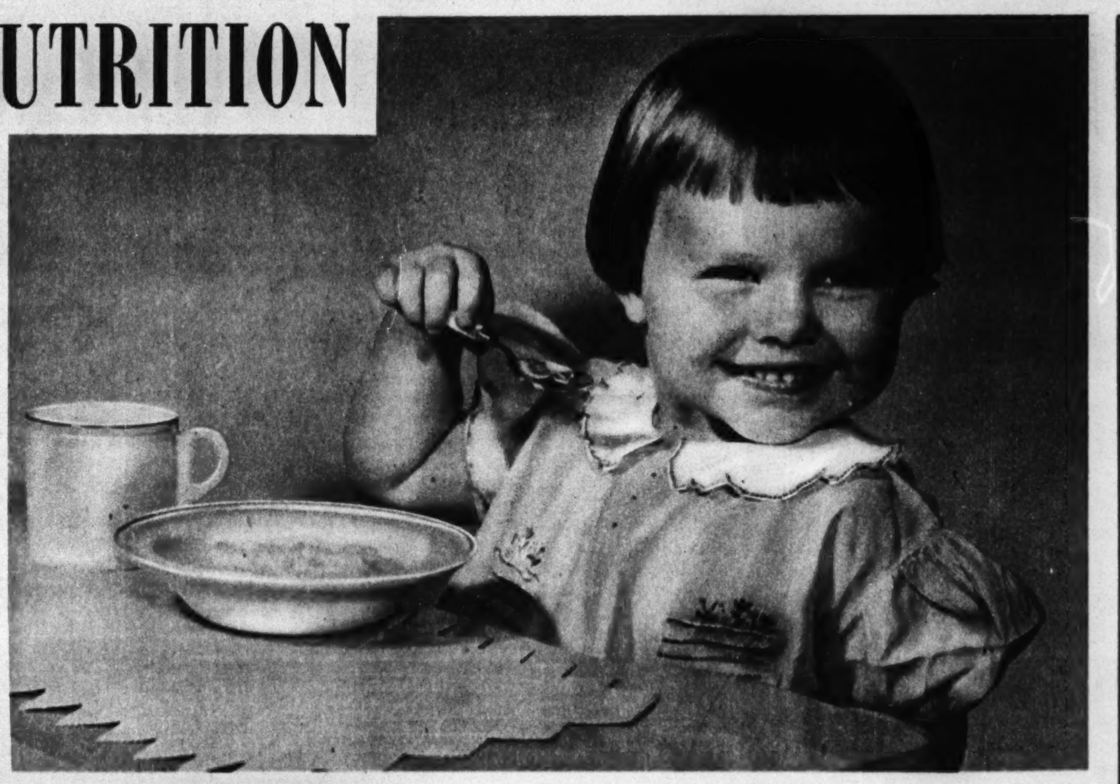
Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the Milky Way,
They stretched in never-ending line
Along the margin of a bay:
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced; but they
Outdid the sparkling waves in glee:
A poet could not but be gay
In such a jocund company:
I gazed—and gazed—but little thought
What wealth the show to me had brought:

For oft, when on my couch I lie,
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;
And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.

NATION'S NEED—NUTRITION

By MARY MEADE



This happy, well fed 18-month-old girl is getting along pretty well at the job of feeding herself.

IT SHOULDN'T have taken a war to make the nation nutrition conscious. But before the world went haywire everybody but a group of nutritionists, physicians, home economists, and socially conscious citizens sat placidly ignoring the needlesssly sad condition of the nation's health.

If anything good can come from this war, perhaps it's a realization that in this rich land of the free there has long existed a general state of malnutrition which must now be combatted with a national program aimed at raising the standard of physical health.

Good nutrition begins in early childhood. No, it begins even earlier, for a prospective mother's diet has an important influence upon the physical development of her unborn child.

• • •

The mother-to-be must supply her own diet liberally with vitamins A, B1, C, and riboflavin. Among rich sources of A are fish liver oils, liver, egg yolk, milk, butter, leafy green vegetables, and yellow vegetables.

B1, the vitamin most likely to be lacking even in a normal diet, may be supplied by whole grain cereals, wheat germ, lean pork, peanut butter, liver, yeast, soy beans, among other foods.

C, of course, is supplied in largest amounts by orange and tomato juice.

Riboflavin, formerly called vitamin B2 and vitamin G, may be found in many of the foods which provide the other vitamins—liver, wheat germ, yeast, leafy green vegetables, dried beans, milk; also in fish (particularly oysters), eggs, lean meat.

Vitamin D, the "sunshine" vitamin, is also particularly important during pregnancy. A child's teeth—not only the temporary ones, but some of the permanent ones as well—are formed before birth, and shortages of vitamins, especially A, C, and D, are going to have sad effects upon the youngster's dental development.

The guidance of a good physician who will advise her on diet is of inestimable value to a mother-to-be, both for her own sake and that of the child.

Careful supervision of the infant diet is of the greatest importance. The advice of a pediatrician who will make a monthly check upon the baby's physical condition and recommend changes in his diet is valuable. Families whose budgets are very restricted should have this physical checkup made as frequently as possible and be guided between times by a good book or other literature on baby care and feeding.

Big brother enjoys feeding baby his strained, warm vegetable and cereal. Coarser food will come when teeth are better developed.

Strict adherence to a feeding schedule is important for baby's sake and for mother's. Six feedings at four-hour intervals are usual for the first month. Boiled water between feedings soothes a fretful babe. A "pacifier" never should be given. After the first month baby usually is fed five times a day, after the fifth month four times a day. Then, when the young one is 8 months or so old, he goes onto a three-meal-a-day schedule, with usually a midmorning and midafternoon cracker with milk.

Until a child is about 3 it is best to feed him separately from the family, authorities agree. His food is different, his eating habits haven't been well formed, and he needs the complete attention of his mother at mealtime.

At the end of his first year the well fed baby is drinking about a quart of plain, slightly warm milk a day, about half a cup of orange juice (or a little more than this of tomato juice), a teaspoon of cod liver oil, two or three tablespoons of strained green vegetable pulp, an egg yolk, two to four tablespoons of well cooked cereal, and a piece or two of crisp toast. No other foods are necessary. Sugars should not be added, as they are likely to pervert the child's appetite and spoil his desire for the foods which are good for him.

Canned strained vegetables, cereals, and fruits are a great help to a busy mother. More recently she has been able to buy chopped baby foods, to be given when baby's tooth development permits a transition from the strained foods.

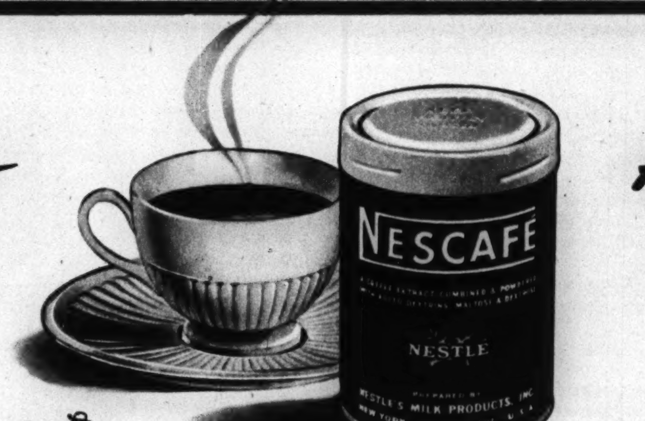
NESCAFÉ



How we make it

. . . and seal in the flavor with added carbohydrates

We start with choice coffee from the Latin-American highlands freshly roasted and ground. Then using much the same principle on which you make coffee at home we extract the soluble coffee solids—the part that contains the aroma, flavor and stimulation. Next we add an equal amount of carbohydrates solely to protect the flavor . . . then dry and powder for your quick and easy use. The result is Nescafé with the goodness of fine coffee sealed into every tiny grain.

How you make it

. . . and release the flavor instantly right in your cup

A teaspoon of Nescafé in a cup. Add hot water. Instantly, the taste-sealing carbohydrates dissolve . . . releasing, but not diminishing . . . the fragrance and flavor of the fine coffee in Nescafé. It's quick as a wink and just as easy. No coffee-maker needed. No grounds to dispose of. Yet quick, easy Nescafé gives you all the flavor . . . and all the "lift" you expect in a good cup of coffee.

DOUBLE-CRUST MEASUREMENTS

2 cups sifted flour • 1 teaspoon salt
*⅔ cup Crisco • ¼ cup water

Notice—this method tells you exact amount of water to use. Standard recipes don't . . . yet too much water is the first big cause of tough pastry. That's ended now!*

Sift flour and salt into bowl. Take out ⅓ cup of this flour and mix with the ¼ cup of water to form a paste. Add Crisco to remaining flour; cut Crisco in with knives, fork or blender until the pieces are the size of small peas.

Next, add flour-paste to Crisco-flour mixture. Mix thoroughly until the dough comes together and can be shaped into a ball. (Notice—the dough is never sticky—it's easy to handle, easy to roll out! So this method saves you from over-handling the dough—the second big cause of tough pastry.) Divide in half—roll out both crusts about ⅛ inch thick. (All measurements level.)

ONE-CRUST MEASUREMENTS: Use 1⅓ cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup Crisco. Take out ¼ cup flour and blend with 3 tablespoons water.

APPLE PIE WITH TOASTED CHEESE TOP—Use your favorite apple pie filling and double-crust proportions of Crisco pastry. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 10 minutes, then lower to moderately hot (375° F.) 30 to 40 minutes. Before serving, lay narrow strips of cheese in a lattice design on top. 6 Gradually slipping into the rut that Marvin feared, Harry finally makes one more effort to win her over. He visits her in New York, but she realizes he will never leave Boston for good and tells him, "No."

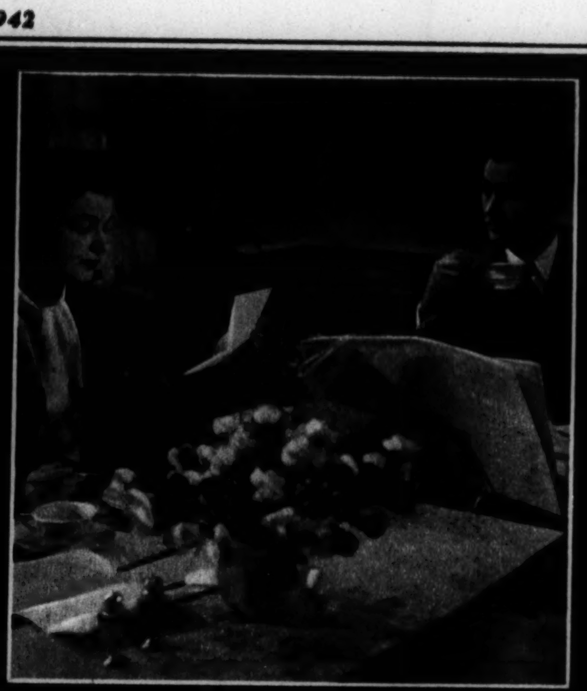
7 Young Pulham finally marries Kay. Life settles down into humdrum complacency. There are children. There are the usual parties—the usual dull friends.



8 One day Kay announces archly, "Anne writes that your friend Marvin Myles married some wealthy New Yorker." Harry is startled, not at the news, for he had assumed Marvin would marry, but startled at his own sense of regret. When he later learns that Marvin is in town he decides to see her.

9 It takes courage for Harry to call on Marvin, for his two selves, the one that loved Marvin and the life she represented, and the sluggish one that led him finally back to Boston, are at odds. Both selves find voice as he and Marvin talk, and it is then that he and Marvin realize that what she had feared has finally come to pass. Harry Pulham has reverted to kind. (THE END.)

Our Rubber, Tin, Silver Supplies

● The United States has long been the world's biggest user of rubber, tin, and silk. Yet practically none of these important raw materials have been produced in our territories. Year after year we have spent ever-increasing sums to purchase abroad our needs of these items which are so essential to peacetime industry and so vital to a wartime armament program.

During 1940 the United States imported: Rubber, $317,711,000; tin, $128,299,000; silk, $124,997,000.

● The rubber and most of the tin were brought from British Malaya and the Netherlands Indies, while Japan supplied the silk. Now that these sources of supply have been closed to us, we are faced with filling our wants from other sources. This is the first of a series of articles reviewing our position in relation to these vital raw materials.

By STANLEY JOHNSTON

THE WAR'S effect on the supply of rubber will mean for most of us a certain scarcity of tires, which hitherto have consumed 75 per cent of the nation's total annual rubber imports; a probable total disappearance of such rubber items as rubber gloves, toilet articles, electrical insulation, door linings, floor mats, battery cases, refrigerator insulation, rubberized coats, galoshes and rubbers, etc.

The far east battleground includes the area from which has come 97 per cent of our regular supplies of rubber. Even if some of this area remains under existing control our chances of getting raw rubber from it are remote. The Japanese now are in position to check any regular transportation across the Pacific. Altho this may change from day to day or week to week, it will be impossible to get ships thru on any schedules that will enable rubber fabricators here to count on them.

What is left? There are the far longer routes westward across the Indian ocean, around Africa, and thence across the South Atlantic to the United States. But should Singapore, the great British base at the tip of the Malay peninsula, fall, these routes too would be closed for all practical purposes.

In any consideration of our position, the hope of getting rubber supplies from the East Indies should be crossed out. Our real hope is development of natural rubber supplies at home, development of rubber substitutes that are usually called "synthetic rubber," and encouragement of rubber plantations and rubber tapping of the wild trees of the Central and South American jungles.

Admittedly all these are in the classification of desperate measures. But the day for desperate measures is here. The rubber industry in the nation has been preparing for this moment for years, altho it could not foresee that the moment would come so soon. For a year and a half we have been collecting a national rubber stock pile—thanks to national buying of East Indies rubber for this purpose. We also have been forcing experimentation in laboratories on the rubber synthetics which give promise in the future of supplying an important part of our ultimate needs. Indeed, the experiments along this line are very promising and indicate the development of an entirely new industry here. Finally, we have commenced intense cultivation of rubber-producing plants that are indigenous to the United States and the agricultural conditions prevalent here, and we have commenced reclamation of used rubber.

• • •

All these actions have a twofold purpose:

1. Conservation of raw rubber for war essentials and for the most essential civilian activities. The purpose is to stretch as far—in time—as possible the raw rubber stock pile, the inventory of fabricated rubber not yet in use, and the re-utilization of the rubber we now are using on the nation's automobiles, accessories, etc. This will give us a breathing spell for:

2. Establishment of rubber plantations on millions of acres of American farm lands and the creation of new large scale synthetic rubber making plants. Both these new sources for rubber are practical and both are being used on small scales.

Fortunately the preparations already made are sufficient to give us a breathing spell of 18 months to two years in which to work out our own rubber salvation. This can be done only by the strictest control by the government of our real rubber stocks. These controls are being applied at this time. The stocks themselves, recapitulated recently by Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator and secretary of commerce, before the senate military affairs committee in Washington, consist of the following quantities:

One hundred and fifty thousand tons in inventory of manufactured commodities—tires, gloves, galoshes, rubbers, pencil erasers, and such items.

One hundred and twenty-five thousand tons of raw rubber in bottoms bound for the United States from the far east as the Japs struck. Most of that should reach us, and may already have done so, but some losses from submarine and air attack are expected.

All this gives us a rough total of 875,000 tons of real rubber. Our needs—both civilian and military during war years—are estimated to be about 800,000 tons annually. But if civilian needs are restricted or even ignored entirely, the total consumption of real rubber could be kept down to 400,000 tons a year for the next two years.

At the end of that time, however, the nation will be stripped of usable rubber. All reclaimed rubber will have been used up. The stock piles will have been wiped out. The manufactured inventory will long since have been consumed. In other words, the absolute time limit for our present holdings is 24 months. This is the period during which we can develop our own rubber resources.

But there is a further complication. It is said that Great Britain has no rubber stock pile such as we have developed. With Malaya out of the picture as a current producer, the only other source for British rubber is a small quantity from Ceylon. What rubber there was in England has been unrestricted thus far, and made up into consumer goods of all sorts much as usual.

All this of course means that the United States undoubtedly will be asked to supply rubber under lend-lease arrangements. We will be forced to put tires on the trucks we provide—making our own domestic rubber problems just that much more difficult. There is a last-minute effort being made by the British at this time to take up rubber stocks from warehouses in the Netherlands Indies or harvest all that can be gathered right now. This will, however, be only a small part of the rubber needed.

It is evident—with even this brief outline of the basic problem—that an entirely new national blueprint must be laid out. We must salvage every pound of rubber that can be reprocessed and used a second time. We must establish an industry to produce a maximum quantity of the rubber substitutes that are known generally as "synthetic rubber." Finally we must encourage every native and Central and South American source of natural rubber—and there are a number of these.

Under any of these measures the substitutes will either be less satisfactory than natural raw rubber we have been obtaining from the East Indies or they will be considerably more expensive. It is likely that a total of $200,000,000 to $250,000,000 will be necessary to make the country entirely self-sufficient in rubber. Unquestionably both synthetics and new sources of natural rubber will be required.

Graphic Laboratory of Popular Science

The tire rationing regulations announced from Washington on Dec. 26 by Leon Henderson, price administrator, indicate that for the average motorist new tires will be unobtainable luxuries for as long as the war lasts. Because there have been some 65,000,000 tires sold in the country and exported every year, this restriction will strike close to home.

Hope of keeping the nation's 31 million automotive vehicles rolling depends for the next two years at least largely on the retreading process that until now has been an outcast industry. The nation's tire builders wanted to sell new tires instead of recapping used casings and they considered the slowly growing retreading processes here as black sheep members of the industry's family. But actually the retreading process is not new.

In many other countries where the high cost of new tires put them beyond the reach of most drivers, retreading is a highly regarded industry in itself. It has been found that if the job is well done the recapped tire will give from 70 to 80 per cent of the mileage of the original tire and only costs half as much as a new tire. It is true that the safety factors are lowered due to the fact that cord in the casing has withstood considerable wear and general deterioraion before the recap is added, but in other countries this is taken into consideration by drivers who operate at lower speeds. In the United States, too, recapping already has found its own niche with operators of fleets of cars, trucks, taxis, and like vehicles. These operators found that recapped tires gave good service—if their limitations were respected—and they effected considerable savings in costs when used over periods of several years. (Last year retreaders in the United States used 30,000 tons of camelback to retread about 8,000,000 tires.)

Retreading itself is done in two different ways. In one case it amounts merely to a recapping of a good tire that has had its tread pattern worn off. In the other case it amounts to a complete replacement of the rubber coating on the bare cords of the inner tire casing.

The recapping takes considerably less rubber than the entire retreading process. In either case the replacement is made with camelback (the industry's term for the rubber strips that are applied). In recapping the camelback is only as wide as the tread and as thick as the tread pattern. In retreading the camelback fits from half way up one side wall to half way up the other and is as thick as the entire original rubber layer on the casing cords.

Camelback is made in many ways. For the purposes of the United States at this time at least 85 to 90 per cent of camelback rubber can be made of reclaimed material from old tires and other rubber items. This base rubber is mixed with 10 to 15 per cent of new raw rubber and then takes on almost the same properties and characteristics as fresh natural rubber.

The reclaimed rubber from tires is stripped and cut away from the old casings and thrown into vats where heat and application of certain chemicals and a shredding process bring it back almost to the form it originally had when it first arrived in the United States. It has of course the content of sulphur and lampblack and other chemicals put in to make it suitable for use in tires. In some instances these are removed, in others they are left in the rubber.

The tire to be recapped or retreaded is cleaned, inspected for flaws in cords and side walls. About 50 per cent of all the used casings are discarded because of such disqualifying weaknesses.

Controled knives, varying for each tire size, then cut the rubber of the selected casings to the depths desired. If only recapping is required the surface is roughed and an adhesive rubber cement is spread on it. Then the camelback is put on by hand and made to fit exactly. The whole tire is placed into a vulcanizing machine. This process not only makes the casing and the camelback one, but also imprints into the smooth surface of the tread the desired tread pattern.

It is estimated now that there are 140,000,000 tires on the highways. Of these 65 million are now or soon will be suitable for recapping or retreading. To do this only 15,000 tons of raw rubber would be needed to mix with the reclaimed rubber. There is approximately 12 pounds of rubber in each new tire, but only six pounds is needed for a complete retreading job and probably two pounds less for the usual recapping. These weights of rubber are given for a 6.00 by 16 tire for such light automobiles as a Ford, Chevrolet, or Plymouth.

In the United States today there are about 15,000 retreading or recapping molds (the vulcanizing machines required) in the hands of the various small concerns that have been doing this work. This is far less than will be required to keep the 140,000,000 tires rolling, but these can quickly be augmented if the big tire manufacturers will make some of their equipment available.

In normal peace times four million new tires have been sold each month for use in this country, and there are only seven to eight million now in inventory. Their manufacture has virtually ceased. It is obvious that there is only a two month supply of new tires now available—all of which merely indicates the justification for the strict rationing now imposed. About two-thirds of the total sales of tires went for replacement of wornout casings—the remainder to new cars, exports, etc.

Most of the large rubber companies have stored up vast piles of worn out and discarded casings. These serve as stock piles for reclamation of their worn rubber. Intensification of such collections can bring in much more.

Next Sunday—Two hopes for the future synthetic and domestic rubber supply.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

(Milan M. Miller photo.)

DOG FANCIERS receive many dividends in fun and companionship thru the ownership of their pets. But keeping a dog also brings occasional problems. Following are some of the more interesting questions which have come to our desk in recent weeks:

I have a terrier that is 9 years old, and the veterinarian tells me that this dog is going blind. He also says that nothing can be done about it. Please advise me if this is true.—E. L. M., Cleveland, O.

Deafness and blindness sometimes accompany old age in dogs. We never have heard of any cure for these afflictions in old dogs.

What can I do to stop my dog from shedding all the time? We have a white fox terrier, and the way he loses hair is a great annoyance. We are great dog lovers and wouldn't think of keeping him outside, but I have much work sweeping white hairs from the rugs and furniture.—MRS. JAMES L., Indianapolis, Ind.

Improper feeding, distemper, keeping a dog inside in warm rooms too much, permitting the dog to sleep in a very warm place during the winter, and skin troubles are among the causes which affect a dog's coat and make him shed when he shouldn't. If your dog is a wire-haired terrier it's possible that you are not keeping him stripped and well groomed, so he is losing dead hair the year around. Your letter indicates that the dog may be spending too much time in heated rooms. The fox terrier is a sturdy dog. Let him get plenty of exercise outdoors. Better make sure the diet for the dog is correct, that he is brushed, combed, and given a hair trim to remove all dead hair, and don't let him sleep in a warm room. Supplementing the diet with vitamins may help.

I have just bought a schipperke. Where can I get books on this breed? I would like to learn something about the care and feeding of the dog, also what diseases it is subject to.—JAMES T. R., St. Louis, Mo.

You are wise to devote some study to the schipperke if the breed is new to you. We do not know of any book on the schipperke which gives tips on its care and feeding, altho the Schipperke club has issued a small book which gives the history and general description of the breed. The "skip" is a sturdy dog and requires no special diet or care. Any good book on feeding and general care will help you raise your dog.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

(Managing Editor, Popular Photography Magazine.)

Still Lifes Are Good Training

THERE'S no better way of learning photography than to concentrate on taking still lifes. You can select your subjects at will; they won't get nervous after a while, as human models do; you can pick your own background for them, and you have complete control over your lights. Such a combination of circumstances is ideal for learning.

You may prefer action shots, portraits, scenics, or other types of pictures to still lifes. Yet it is a fact that all of your pictures are bound to improve vastly if you do a certain amount of experimenting with inanimate subjects. You will actually see how the picture changes by altering the lights, the positions of the subjects, or the backgrounds. You will be able to place shadows in your picture just where you want them, your lights will accentuate just that part of your subject you wish to highlight, and so on down the line.

But don't be scared by what we have said about learning. Photographing still lifes is not a tedious task, and it is not merely an experimental affair for the sake of acquiring some amount of photographic technique. Good still lifes can be very striking pictures, worth photographing for their own sake. In this respect it is good to remember that a considerable part of all photographic illustrations used in advertising consists of still lifes. These still lifes usually show the product advertised, and they are superb examples of photography, because they give perfect reproductions of their subjects. In many instances they also create a definite mood and atmosphere around the subject,

The combination of white scarf and black opera hat is not only an unusual still life subject but also a difficult one. It takes some tricky lighting to bring out detail in the hat without overexposing the white scarf. Three flood lamps were used in the setup. The lens was stopped down to f:45 and an exposure of 4 seconds given.

• • •

In addition to photographic technique the photography of still lifes will give you good practical training in composition. You will learn to arrange your subjects in a pleasing manner. At the same time you will arrange them in such a way that your camera can record what you want to show and that the lights you are using create the desired effect.

As to subjects, you can use any of the time-honored combinations of apples and grapes, bread and wine bottles, or fish and fowl that painters have put on canvas for centuries, or you can select more modern ones, such as objects made of glass or spun aluminum which offer the camera interesting textures and reflections.

Let us assume that you pick a basket of vegetables as your subject. You will arrange the vegetables for effect, thus using your inborn instinct for composition. You will place the basket on a gleaming white kitchen table or on a checkered tablecloth, depending on the type of background you decide to employ. Experimenting with backgrounds will teach you lessons which you can put to use when making any other type of picture.

After your setup is completed you will turn on your lights one by one. Observing their effect on the picture is the most important photographic training you could wish for. Once you learn to notice the ugly black shadow cast by a protruding turnip in your vegetable arrangement, you will be sure to notice in a portrait the disturbing shadow cast by a nose.

Playing with your lights will teach you how you can lighten such shadows with secondary fill-in lights; how sidelighting brings out texture; how strong contrast is created by using only a single light source. You can observe step by step what happens if you raise or lower your lights, place them in front of the subject, alongside the camera, or behind the subject to give back lighting.

You will learn a lot about posing any type of subject if you try making an attractive arrangement like this one of grapes and vine leaves. You must watch not only the position of the objects but also their color contrast, the background, and the lighting.

HOW "NEW MOON" ROSE

● On Saturday evening W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system will present "The New Moon" as the feature of the Chicago Theater of the Air. Miss Marion Claire and Thomas L. Thomas will sing the leading roles.

"THE NEW MOON" is a good example of the trials and tribulations which an elaborate musical show usually goes thru before it braves Broadway and the verdict of the hard-boiled New York critics. In this case the reviewers turned thumbs up, justifying the ruffled tempers, endless headaches, and days of discouragement — not to mention the time, labor, and money — involved in its rehearsal and tryout period.

Some time in 1927 an incident in an obscure autobiography by Robert Mission, a French aristocrat of the 18th century, suggested a musical comedy plot to Frank Mandel, Laurence Schwab, Oscar Hammerstein II., and Sigmund Romberg, all of whom had been associated with "The Desert Song," a success of the previous year. Schwab and Mandel as producers and co-authors, Hammerstein as lyricist and chief librettist, and Romberg as composer held monthly, then weekly, and finally daily conferences, attempting to develop a germinal idea into a full-fledged show. When the main features of song and story had been decided upon, long lists of actors and actresses were mulled over to find suitable players. The designing of the costumes and scenery was assigned to such veterans as Charles Le Maire and Donald Oenslager, and the experienced Bobby Connolly was hired to stage the dances.

Thomas L. Thomas

Robert Halliday, star of "The Desert Song," was engaged as a safe bet to sing the lead in "The New Moon." Upon the assemblage of a supporting cast and the necessary technicians, the desperate task of rehearsing got under way. Then began that long nightmare in which authors and composer wrote and rewrote material that was more likely to be discarded than used.

The final rehearsals before "The New Moon" opened in Philadelphia on Dec. 22, 1927, were a wild scramble. Three prima donnas had been tried and found wanting, and the latest engaged was none too sure of her part. Local union rules had made it necessary for a different stage crew to handle the opening night performance than had been used in rehearsal, and their lack of routine caused many a blunder in full view of the audience. Despite all this, the Quaker City critics were disposed to like the new show, suggesting changes in the script and casting.

Schwab and Mandel were far from sure that they had a production worth risking on Gotham's main stem, so they disbanded the company at the end of its Philadelphia engagement. So far the show was $100,000 in the red. The producers and authors, having finished their work on other projects, fled to such diverse spots as Paris and the West Indies. Back they came in April, refreshed and ready to rewrite some more. Exactly two numbers, "Stout Hearted Men" and "Try Her Out at Dancing," were kept from the first version, and among the leading players only Halliday was reëngaged.

Another $75,000 was spent on new scenery and costumes and additional rehearsals before "The New Moon" opened once again in Cleveland on Aug. 27, 1928. A first-rate heroine was found in the person of Evelyn Herbert, while Marie Callahan and Gus Shy were the newly hired comedians. Things were finally set for a gala opening at New York's Imperial theater on Sept. 19. Open it did, and to enough enthusiasm to keep it going for more than a year.

A second company was sent out the following season, coming into Chicago's Great Northern theater on Sept. 2, 1929, with George Houston and Charlotte Lansing as the romantic lovers and Madeline McMahon and Roscoe Ails as the comic pair.

The success of this so-called musical romance was due in part to its lavish and colorful staging, some excellent dancing, a good male chorus, and a perfectly satisfactory book with better than average comedy.

Most of all it was due, as in so many other Romberg musicals, to the fine songs provided for the principals and chorus by the composer. Those who saw "The New Moon" well remember its beautiful tango, "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise"; the aforementioned "Stout Hearted Men"; "Lover, Come Back to Me," still popular, and two other romantic melodies, "One Kiss" and "Wanting You." These five hit songs raised the score to a level with such other notable Romberg works as "Maytime," "Blossom Time," "The Student Prince," and "The Desert Song."

"The New Moon" has twice been filmed—in 1931 with Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett (and a totally different story), and in 1940 with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

MODEL COEDS—COED MODELS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

HOLIDAY parties and family and fireside aren't the only pleasures of the coed home from the educational battle front at Christmas. She seizes every chance she gets during that break in the school year to look into the college clothes situation, with a particularly sharp eye on glamor gowns for the formal dances, sports costumes for the winter activities popular at her school, and bright prints to be worn right now under her fur coat as a perky reminder that spring isn't so far away.

The coed steals away from the family hearth to snoop and to shop. Maybe she even models in a college girl fashion show so that she may get a closer look at the newest things—and earn a little money to spend on them.

Campus beauties from schools all over the country modeled in one fashion show in Chicago during Christmas vacation, while hundreds of others looked hungrily on. Of the models, Marijane Hurja of Northwestern caused the greatest stir, possibly motivated by envy. Marijane, a senior and a Gamma Phi Beta, was about to leave for Florida, a trip awarded her by Purple Parrot for her election as most popular girl on the campus. Marijane, tall, dark-haired, and poised, has a serene kind of charm that would-be campus queens might emulate. One gown she modeled, a fuchsia and purple print on white, went to Florida with her.

Lawrence college was represented in the lineup by Jean Altis, on whom McClelland Barclay recently bestowed the accolade of beauty queen and who is as brainy as she's stunning. Jean, a junior, is editor of Ariel, the college yearbook.

The University of Chicago had not one but two beauties in the show — Jean Roff, last year's freshman queen, and Jane Moran, Cap and Gown beauty in '41. Carey Ellen Boone of La Grange starred for Wellesley, where she is a sophomore, in a celestial evening dress of champagne marquisette with gold sequin straps. Lucille Maloney of Rosary college, who has creamy skin and Titian hair, proved again that soft gray is one of the most beguiling of all evening colors when she modeled a bouffant-skirted gown of it in net, with fuchsia paillette butterflies fluttering in a diagonal line from bodice to hem.

Sally Turner of the University of Illinois modeled a sports costume—white knitted cap, green knit jacket with white embroidered vest, and green skirt lined in scarlet taffeta. Sally, a junior and a Kappa, is one of the three smart girls at Illinois who make their way thru school by operating The Heather, a popular and well patronized sportswear shop.

Laurie Brewster, home from Monticello, not only modeled but entertained the onlookers, all collegiennes, with some excellent singing. Katherine Wheeler of Rockford college showed some slimming slacks; Joan Sebastian of the University of Wisconsin wore a ski suit that would be useful around Lake Mendota these days, windproof and water-repellent gabardine in navy, worn over a red turtleneck sweater and accompanied by red mittens.

A WONDER! Here we are wondering how long we'll have our pretty sheer silk stockings . . . so slimming and flattering. And here are Ivory Flakes with their easy way to help the precious pairs we have last longer!

MY, HOW IT PAYS to wash your stockings with new Ivory Flakes promptly after every wearing! Not a chance then for perspiration and soil to weaken stocking fibers. Look at the wear records of Mildred Kelly, Mrs. Magill, Margaret MacNair!

THEN TAKE YOUR STOCKINGS in hand! Do as they did! Wash your stockings with new Ivory Flakes after every wearing. Start your stockings on Ivory Flakes care right away!

205 HOURS' WEAR FROM ONE PAIR for Mildred Kelly, waitress. "I wore the same pair day after day — washed them each night with Ivory Flakes." It pays!

243 HOURS' WEAR FOR CASHIER, Margaret MacNair. "This test has done me a good turn. It's taught me I was wrong saving up 3 or 4 pairs of soiled stockings to do at one time. Now, I wash my stockings every night with Ivory Flakes to help them wear!"

Try these Ivory Flakes rules for longer wear!

1. Wash stockings with pure Ivory Flakes after every wearing. Perspiration and soil may be injurious.
2. Use lukewarm Ivory Flakes suds. (Do not use strong soaps and hot water.)
3. Don't rub. Gently squeeze through pure Ivory Flakes suds. Dry away from heat and sunlight.
4. Always let Ivory Flakes constant care help your stockings wear longer. (A pure, gentle soap is kind to hosiery threads and colors.)

TO A WOMAN, we know now that physical endurance is no longer merely an enjoyment. It's a necessity and a duty, and we are going to thank our lucky stars as time goes on that we have the health it takes to stand up to this new life.

Many of us, honestly, haven't got down to a good muscle-strengthening exercise in ages. We may have curtsied to a pleasing diet now and then for the sake of a dress appearance. We may for a sadly brief stretch have taken on a sham bout with an exercise program. But we wearied quickly and put our faith in bread-and-butterless, sugar-and-creamless, and potatoless meals for a spell.

But that all has gone by the board now. That body over which we have control is in for a new influence, motivated not by fashion news nor Hollywood diets but by sheer, desperate need for efficiency. It has to function at its supreme best.

We must go at this thing of retoning and reshaping with intelligence. If we have not exercised for years, then the intelligent thing for us to do is to adopt one, two, or three exercises for morning and nightly execution until we have attuned our bodies to a change in action.

• • •

If we women need still a "kick" from a fashion angle to get going—and some of us assuredly will need just such an impetus—be reminded that the good old figure molders, the corsets, the girdles, the bras, are in for a time of it in defense shortages. Rubber, stainless steel, zipper metal, and other materials that go into their making are called to defense duty. So it would seem only sane and dutiful for us women to make our own corsets out of brawn and muscle. This calls for exercise. Diet alone won't do it. Exercise you must to firm the abdominal muscles.

There's nothing complicated, nothing brilliant, nothing particularly exciting about the illustrated exercises, except that they're good, and especially good for the woman long out of exercise practice. We suggest their repetition many times at each performance, for therein lies success.

No. 1—This is merely to warm up, get moving. Just stretch your entire body by bending down and shaking yourself free of all tension.

No. 2—Keep your left knee and leg straight, the right crooked, and see how close to the floor near left leg you can bring the left hand. Do 10 times. Then try it on the other side of the body.

No. 3—From tall standing position swing both arms and hands forward and down to touch floor in front of your feet with fingertips. You can keep at this one until you can touch the floor with both hands flat, but that's not necessary for you beginners. Repeat 10 times.

No. 4—From arms overhead position with palms out, while you stand tall and stretched from toe tips, swing arms out and down toward back. Keep at this until you can make the hands touch in back. Repeat 10 times.

GIRL DETECTIVE

up any possible sounds from Jamies installing the microphone. She went to the faucet and drew some water. But she did not include morphine when she filled the syringe. Duke gratefully bared his arm for the needle. "You're a girl in a million!" he exclaimed.

"You should have blown when you bumped that guy," Mona said casually as she stabbed the needle into his arm.

Duke started, but under the soothing sensation of fluid forced into his vein he quickly relaxed. "Yeah," he said. "Yeah. I was piped up or I would have. But I got him clean. It was a frame that can't miss—can it?"

"Course it can't, you're too smart," Mona assured him.

Duke sat back, waiting for the effect of the drug. "How'd you know, anyway?" he asked mildly.

"I saw it," said Mona. "It was neat. That's why I wanted t' meet you. I go for a guy with nerve like you got."

Few women detectives are as young and beautiful as Mona. One in Chicago is a white-haired grandmother. How she outwitted another woman detective and saved the life of an innocent man charged with murder will be told next week.

"Aw, th' lug deserved t' get it. Hate t' see that kid get th' rap, but—say!" Duke put his hands to his head. He stared at his arm. He was pallid and his eyes were popping with pain. He leaned back and closed his eyes and clutched nervously at the arms of his chair. Then he jerked up rigidly, his eyes wide with terror. "What th' hell you put in that needle?" he demanded. "What you put in that needle?"

"I put water in it, Duke."

With a howl he leaped at her. Mona avoided his lunge, caught him and pushed him back into the chair. "You hellcat!" he raged. "What you doing to me? I got to have it, you hear? I got——"

Mona seized his arms and called for help. Jamies and the police detective were already thru the door. Duke shrieked, beside himself. But before he received a calming shot of morphine he had told the story of the murder.

• • •

"You see," Mona told the newspaper man, "we have to play into a lot of luck. But sooner or later I'd run into somebody who would talk, unless I was just plain unlucky. Men seem to let down their guard when they're around women. That bartender knew what was going on. He knew enough to be afraid to talk. But if it hadn't happened that Duke was a drug addict and played into my hands I could have matched one off against the other until I learned something useful.

"The syndicate missed when they didn't make provision for getting their killer out of town immediately. But criminals always miss sooner or later, and that's where the detectives come in. From then on there's not much master-minding involved. We're simply extremely thoro; we try to know people, to understand how they will react under certain circumstances, to gain their confidence. There are some types of jobs a woman detective can do and a man can't. Then, too, a woman is more patient. That's why women are often used for wire work; they'll take down everything, regardless of how trivial it may seem."

Thousands of Chicagoans might recognize Mona if they saw her, for only a few years ago she was a popular model and her pictures were frequently in the newspapers and magazines. A few score café patrons may know her personally, for she is seen often about the night clubs. But only the men who employ her and work with her know how she earns her livelihood.

"I don't even know other women detectives," Mona said. "We make it a point not to know each other, for you can never be sure that the woman who is your friend one day may not be working against you the next. Also there is considerable jealousy among woman detectives, and if two work a case together they are likely to trip each other up."

Mona's modeling led her into detective work. A lawyer who watched her work in a fashion show introduced himself and asked if she would obtain some evidence for him in a divorce case. After that she worked for an agency, first checking bartenders, then reporting on "26" games.

It is not generally known that when many respectable business firms lease space to taverns they take a percentage of the "26" gambling game as part of the rent. Such income is all cash, and there is only one way for the lessor to learn whether he is getting all the money due him. He hires a girl detective to find employment as a "26" girl in the tavern, and she makes daily reports on the amount taken in.

Mona proved her ability and received better assignments. She has become an expert now, and her fees are high. Ordinarily a woman detective receives $5 to $8 a day, plus all expenses and $5 a day extra if she uses her own car. The feminine sleuth works 12 hours a day, seven days a week if necessary, but if she works five minutes overtime she is paid for an extra day.

Many attorneys keep women detectives permanently on their staffs, paying them a regular weekly wage. Such women work only about 25 or 26 weeks a year. Some detective agencies refuse to employ women at all, holding they are not as capable as men. It is impossible to estimate accurately the number of girl detectives employed in Chicago exclusive of policewomen and operatives who watch for shoplifters, but the number is probably close to 200, of whom about 50 work steadily.

Girl detectives do not carry guns unless they receive a special permit for a particular case. Their work is always delicate, often dangerous. They are frequently in compromising situations in the line of duty and must use their wits to extricate themselves. They have a horror of being confused with women who will, for a fee, permit themselves to be compromised to obtain evidence for a divorce case. Such women, of course, are merely disreputables engaging in a form of blackmail, and the practice has virtually been stopped.

YOUR BEAUTY can smile at Winter!

Despite wind and cold
YOUR SKIN CAN BE LOVELIER
4 BEAUTY TIPS FOR WINTER

1. Use a super-mild soap. New "Velvet-Suds" Ivory is the mildest Ivory ever to touch your skin—actually milder than 10 leading toilet soaps! And notice: No dyes, medication, or strong perfumes that might be irritating!
2. Don't use hot water on your face. It has a drying effect. And you don't need it with gentle New Ivory's thorough-cleansing, quick lather. Lukewarm velvet suds are best for a true beauty-cleansing. And no icy rinses, unless your skin is oily.
3. Protect your skin when you go out with powder-base cream or lotion. But use them only on a "baby-clean" face—cleansed with baby's beauty soap—gentle Ivory!
4. For winter-dried faces, massage lightly with a lukewarm lather of gentle New "Velvet-Suds" Ivory, using finger-tips only. Rinse well. Pat dry. Since your skin lacks sufficient oil, apply lightly a little cold cream.

Do as Doctors advise:
Give your skin "baby-care"

118 CHILDREN MEET DEATH IN '41 FROM AUTOS

Fatalities in County Show Increase.

An analysis of circumstances which brought death to 118 children under 19 years old in traffic accidents in Cook county during 1941, revealed that 38 fatalities or nearly one-third occurred in midblock accidents. The figures, compiled from case histories in the coroner's office files by Chicago Motor club safety engineers, showed that the fatalities included 84 boys and 34 girls.

The survey revealed an increase over the 106 fatalities recorded during 1940. Midblock accidents during 1940 accounted for 41 deaths. Altho there was a small decline in midblock accidents during 1941, the largest percentage of fatalities occurred in this manner. Fifteen children were killed crossing between intersections; eleven lost their lives by running suddenly into the street from the sidewalk; eight were killed when they darted from between parked cars into the path of a car, and four were killed while playing in the street.

Few Killed During School Day.

Safety engineers pointed out that only 11 children were killed on a school day during school hours. This was an appreciable decline from 1940 when 32 children were killed during school hours. The decrease was credited partly to the motor club plan called "The Safest Route to School." By this system children are trained to take a route approved by teachers and the patrol boys between their homes and school in order to minimize exposure to traffic hazards.

The danger of crossing at unguarded intersections was revealed in the files which showed 20 deaths occurred at intersections without signals or traffic guards. This was an increase of 9 per cent over 1940. Failure of children to judge the speed of vehicles accurately, hurry and carelessness were cited by the safety engineers as causes of these deaths. Five children, however, were killed at signalized intersections during 1941 compared to a perfect record in 1940 when no fatalities were reported at guarded intersections.

The figures also revealed an increase last year in the number of children killed in automobiles. Nineteen children lost their lives while riding as passengers compared to 13 during 1940. Nine youngsters lost their lives while driving cars compared to three during the previous year.

Southwest Most Hazardous.

As in 1940, the southwest section of Chicago and Cook county was the most dangerous area, with 36 children killed. The west and northwest sides were the second most dangerous sections, with 27 fatalities each. Sixteen children met death on the south side and 12 were killed on the north side.

Of the various age groups, the fatality rate was greatest among the 6 year olds, with 14 children of that age losing their lives. Eleven youngsters 16 years old were killed and ten 3 year olds were fatally injured. There were 22 fatalities in the preschool age—under four years of age; 59 of elementary school age—5 to 13 years old, and 13 high school students—14 to 19.

Fourteen children were killed riding bicycles in the street and three lost their lives while hitching rides on automobiles and trucks. Cars backing out of driveways and alleys, falls from moving cars, and other miscellaneous accidents claimed ten lives.

Urges Safety Habits.

"Children cannot be cautioned too frequently about street dangers," Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out in urging parents, teachers, and all adults who have contect with youngsters, to impress upon them the importance of good safety habits. "The government has urged that safety be given more serious consideration than ever before because of its vital effect on national defense. There can be no more fertile place to institute safety than in the minds of those who will be the nation's leaders tomorrow."

Following are four rules compiled by the motor club for parents to impress upon their children:

1. Cross only at intersections and if possible where there are traffic signals or policemen.
2. Wait for traffic to clear before crossing.
3. Do not play in the streets.
4. Ride bicycles with extreme care.

CAPT. MULHERN HEEDS HIS LAST ALARM OF FIRE

Capt. James Mulhern, 8121 South Winchester avenue, last week responded to his last alarm of fire, ending 40 years of fire service—years scorched with flame and heroism. His retirement occurred on his 63d birthday, as required by city law.

At the time of his retirement, Capt. Mulhern was stationed at Engine company 73, 8630 Emerald avenue, where he had been assigned for the last four years.

He joined the department New Year's day, 1902. His promotion to a lieutenancy followed in 1914, and he was named a captain in 1919.

Twice during his career, which harks back to the days of the horse drawn engines, Capt. Mulhern was cited for meritorious service. The first of these occurred on a cold day in November, 1915, when he, then with Engine company 28, and his fellow fighters rescued an unconscious man from the balcony of a blazing assembly hall at 3201 Wall street.

He was commended again, together with the other members of Engine company 84, for the rescue of an exhausted man, whose first floor apartment at 844 West 51st street, was framed in flame. This was in February, 1925.

Born in Ireland, the captain has resided on the southwest side for the last quarter of a century. Future plans call for active participation in civilian defense, and after that quiet days in his cottage at Hudson Lake, Ind.

Endemanns Observe 62d Wedding Date

A little lady of 81, proudly wearing her first orchid, and her 91 year old husband, with whom the years have dealt lightly, began their 63d year of wedded life one cold day recently in Bridgeport.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Endemann, 3051 Broad street, both Bridgeport residents of 70 years standing. They grew up as neighbors in the vicinity of Broad street, in the shadows of blast furnaces of the once booming Union Works of the old Illinois Steel company, now long dismantled.

Meet First on Wharf.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Endemann were born in Germany. Mr. Endemann caught his first glimpse of Annie Burger, the girl who later became his bride, on a German wharf overlooking the Rhine. Their first encounter was brief. After a mutual exchange of glances, Mr. Endemann caught a boat which carried him to Rotterdam and Liverpool and America and Annie Burger, accompanied by her parents and younger brothers and sisters, traveled to Hamburg by train to embark for the United States.

Fate was kind, however, for a short time later and thousands of miles distant from their first meeting place, Charles Endemann and Annie Burger met again, this time on Broad street in Chicago. In no time at all, it seemed, Annie was a young lady of 17, and the acquaintanceship became romance. During the day Charlie and Annie's father worked together in the rolling mill. In the evening Charlie and Annie might be seen strolling down the plank sidewalks of Bridgeport, or on Sundays attending church or visiting old Brighton park, now McKinley park. After a year, they were married in old St. Anthony's church at 24th and Canal streets. The bride wore a plum colored cashmere gown, a wreath and a veil.

47 Years in Home.

A reception in a Bridgeport hall followed the ceremony. On their recent 62d anniversary, a dinner, reminiscent of that served on their wedding day, was set. Highlights were German potato salad and ham.

After their marriage, the Endemanns settled in Bridgeport. They moved to their present home 47 years ago, and here they reared 8 of 13 children to adulthood. They rented their eight room cottage home for 25 years then the rolling mill shut down and with it came bleak depression and the real estate office announcement that it intended disposing of the Broad street cottage the Endemanns were renting.

Both sentimentalists, this news was little short of disaster to the couple. Neither wanted to leave the home in which they had spent most of their lives and in which their children had been reared and educated.

Help Found Church.

Mr. Endemann had an offer of a job in the steel mills of South Chicago, but he didn't want to leave Bridgeport and Broad street and Immaculate Conception church which he had helped found and in which he had always served as an usher. Mrs. Endemann felt the same way, so they purchased the eight room cottage and relaxed. Steel mill men in that whilom era made good money and Mr. Endemann, a first ladleman, had wisely provided for the inevitable rainy day.

For a time he operated a tavern on "Archy road." When the glue and soap works began to function, however, he closed his tavern and went

HOW KINGSBURY AREA IS SOLVING VAST PROBLEM

Homes, Schools to Rise for Workers.

BY PAUL HEALY.

The Kingsbury ordnance plant, a backstage Colossus vital to modern warfare, is quietly but steadily altering the looks of some of northern Indiana's most rustic farmlands. The giant shell loading plant covers 20 square miles as it sprawls thru the center of La Porte county.

Within the next half year the plant is expected to have caused the immigration of thousands of workers, the construction of three new schools and thousands of homes, the birth of a new village, and a commercial boom in the towns of Kingsbury, La Porte, Walkerton, and Knox.

Construction of the plant, which cost 37 million dollars, was begun a little over a year ago. Now 95 per cent complete, it employs about 10,000 workers and has been turning out shells since last August. Many, many more workers will be needed when the plant is under full capacity, officials say. Because of the nature of the work nearly half of the workers probably will be women.

Housing Major Problem.

Housing is considered the most important problem, inasmuch as the majority of the workers have families, and officials want workers to live close to the plant. Since there is a housing shortage in surrounding towns many employés currently are motoring from South Bend, Gary, Chicago, and other distant cities. Besides adding mileage to tires the trips tend to reduce efficiency at the plant, where alertness is of paramount importance.

To solve the dilemma 800 homes are being built at La Porte, Knox, and Walkerton under the Federal Works agency, 249 trailers will soon be brought to Knox by the Farm Security administration, and 500 dormitory units will be put up at Knox and Walkerton by the same bureau.

Later 3,100 homes probably will be built by some other government agency somewhere in the neighborhood of the plant.

A total of $582,500 has been allotted from the community facilities appropriation for the construction of township schools in La Porte, Kingsbury, and Walkerton, and $188,000 from the same fund will be used to enlarge the Fairview hospital in La Porte.

Methodists Build Church.

A scattering of other homes are being built by private capital and one church, the Tracy Methodist, has been built just outside the plant. Catholic churches in surrounding towns are adding masses to their normal schedule.

"Aside from housing we haven't had the problems we anticipated," says Martin H. Ray, vice president of Todd & Brown, Inc., designers and operators of the plant. "Because of the efficiency of the state and county police and the good sense of the residents of this region, who are alive to their responsibility, we are relatively free of the evils which usually crop up in a boom area.

"This is also partly due to the type of workers we are hiring. They must be loyal, alert American citizens who can pass strict physical examinations. I notice most of them respond enthusiastically to the many sided recreational program we are encouraging here."

How They Pass Leisure.

The leisure time activities, some of which go on inside the plant grounds, include groups which have organized competition in archery, baseball, basketball, bowling, gymnastics, handball, horseshoes, skeet shooting, softball, swimming, volleyball, tennis, art, checkers, chess, coin collecting, conservation, drama, first aid, gardening, nature studies, painting, home movies, and drum and bugle playing. Numerous meeting places in surrounding towns have been made available for the recreational activities.

The largest single diversion is the bowling league, which includes 60 teams. To aid the program the United Service organization has opened headquarters in Walkerton. There are seven motion picture theaters in La Porte, Knox, and Walkerton with a combined seating capacity of 4,100.

Tho many of the plant's employés are migratory workers, there is no predominant national descent or background. Some of them, in fact, are farmers who are taking advantage of the situation to increase their income. All the operating workers must be trained from the ground up, officials say, since none ever has had experience in this type of plant before. Commanding officer of the plant is Maj. Edward J. Thomas.

Rent Starts at $27.50.

Workers who move into the FWA homes will be furnished with heat, hot water, a gas range, kitchen cabinet, curtain rods and shades, and electricity. They will pay $27.50, $30, or $32.50 a month, depending on whether they want one, two, or three bedrooms.

Four hundred of these are under construction just south of La Porte, 200 will be built at Knox, which is 19 miles south of the main gate, and 200 will be put up at Walkerton, which is 15 miles southeast of the main

SPRING PRIMARY FALLS ON LATEST POSSIBLE DATE

Second Tuesday in April Will Be 14th.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Political candidates will have less time than usual this year between the April primary and the November election in which to wage their campaigns for office. This was pointed out last week by John F. Tyrrell, vice chairman of the Republican state central committee, an attorney who has become known as an election law expert.

The 1942 primary will take place April 14, latest possible date under the state primary law formula which specifies that the primary shall be held on the second Tuesday in April in even numbered years

Not since the state primary was switched from September to April in 1917 has it been held so late as April 14. This late a primary will not occur again until 1964, unless the law is changed meanwhile.

Election Is Early.

The election this year will be held on Nov. 3. This is only one day beyond the earliest possible date for a general election, which under the state election law must be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in even numbered years. There has been no Nov. 2 election since 1930, and there will not be another until 1952.

This year's loss of campaigning time is not likely to cause great consternation, Tyrrell indicated, inasmuch as criticism has frequently been raised that the April primary leaves too great an interval between the nomination and the election of candidates.

Candidates Object to Early Date.

The candidates themselves dislike the early primary, principally because it exposes them all summer long to the interminable line of solicitors for program advertising, political picnics, organization doings and other schemes for separating the vote seeking politician from his campaign cash.

The September primary was free from this objection. However, it had the disadvantage that vote contests arising in the primary could not in all cases be disposed of in time for the election. The time interval was too short for the ponderous machinery of the law to function.

Occasionally it is suggested that a return be made to the September primary, but thus far such proposals have found insufficient support. The late primary is favored by many downstaters because the spring primary comes at a time when the farmer is busy in the fields and so has scant time to vote or to listen to the oratory of prospective nominees. Proponents of the April primary point out that it includes the election of delegates to the national party conventions, held in June or July.

Sought Primary in June.

An effort was made this year to postpone the primary to June 1, and to hold it in conjunction with Supreme court judicial elections on that date in five of the seven judicial districts in the state. This would have saved expense.

Both the Cook county board and the Chicago city council passed resolutions asking Gov. Green to move for the change. The governor, however, omitted the subject from his call for the first special session of the legislature, and so it could not come up for consideration. Gov. Green has declined to say whether the matter will be included in his call for a second special session.

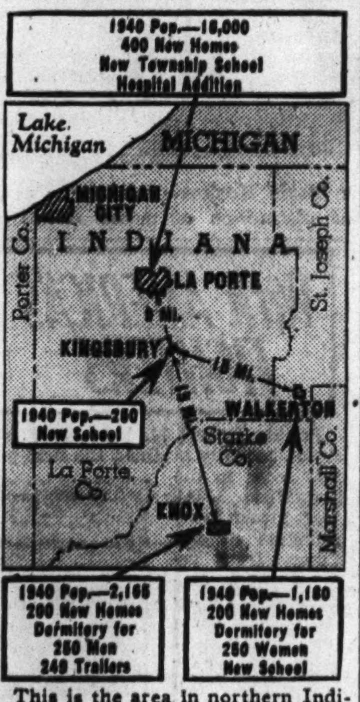
Arms Plant Effect



This is the area in northern Indiana which is most influenced by the presence of the giant Kingsbury ordnance plant which was built during the last year. Now 95 per cent complete, the plant requires 10,000 workers. Because no site has been chosen, a new village of 3,100 homes the government proposes to build cannot be designated on the map.

BIG ARMS PLANT BOOMS NORTHERN INDIANA TOWNS

gate. In the latter two towns the homes will be of the prefabricated type.

Workers who are unmarried or have left their families at their distant homes may live in a dormitory, which will cost $3.50 a week for a double room and $5 for a single room. This includes furnishings, linen, blankets, and hotel services. There will be 250 dormitory units for womenat Walkerton and 250 dormitory units for men at Knox.

At least 249 trailers also will be available later this year at Knox. These will cost $6 a week, which will include everything but linen, dishes, silver, blankets, and fuel for heating and cooking.

The site has not yet been chosen for the other 3,100 homes by the government, but their construction is expected to create a new village somewhere in the area, complete with a school, stores, and shops.

All of the homes, however, will not be within walking distance of the plant and this is expected to cause problems of transportation, if tire rationing continues. Buses are being added to routes in the district, but La Porte county has been granted comparatively few tires in the ration program.

KROCANE PLAYS PART IN GOLDEN WEDDING FEAST

Bohemian for Turkey Served at Event.

Over Knedliky, zeli, and krocane—the Bohemian equivalent of sauerkraut, dumplings, and turkey—Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hromadka, 5200 South Kedzie avenue, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last week.

The observance was marked at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Cech, 5000 Chicago avenue, where 50 friends and relatives gathered to commenorate the event.

Have Mementoes of Rites.

Mementoes of the wedding are a yellowed scrap of the bride's veil, and a piece of the bridegroom's lapel, encased in the frame of the couple's wedding portrait.

Both were born in Bohemia, but their romance began in Baltimore. A brother of Mrs. Hromadka enacted the rôle of cupid when he introduced Mr. Hromadka, his friend, to his young sister. Later, when her family moved to Chicago, he followed.

Owned Chain of Shoe Stores.

Now 72 years old, Mr. Hromadka is a retired shoe merchant, formerly the owner of a chain of stores on the south and southwest sides. His wife is 69 years old.

They have made their home for the last 24 years in the Town of Lake neighborhood. Besides their daughter, they have a son, George, employed by a defense firm. Three grandchildren, Peter and Maryann Cech, and George Hromadka, are an important element in the family circle.

Last week's celebration started with a grand march around the house, after which dinner was served. An important part of the dinner was the serving of kolacky, a traditional Bohemian good luck bread.

Union Veterans' Daughters Install New Officers

New officers of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War were installed recently at GAR hall, 6236 Princeton avenue. Mrs. Florence Cheadle, 76 East 100th place, assumed the office of president.

THE ENDEMANNS OBSERVE 62D WEDDING DATE

to work as a millwright, a job he kept until his retirement at the age of 72.

In the quiet afternoons now, Mr. Endemann stays at home, listens to the wail of the factory whistle sending workers to and from their day's labors, plays solitaire or reads. Every afternoon he walks to the corner of Archer avenue to the tavern of his son, Jake. There he may drink a few steins of beer, kibitz over an impromptu neighborhood card game, or delight more recent Bridgeport residents with tales of a community that was primitive and colorful.

Robust Defiance of Zero.

Nothing bothers Mr. Endemann very much, even the recent subzero weather. Thruout that period, and others like it, he spurned an overcoat or topcoat, exposing himself to the winds without any obvious negative results. This idiosyncrasy distresses his family no end.

He's a positive man, with certain ideas and ideals that neither time nor person can alter. For instance, he has no use for the movies as an entertainment medium and thinks them strictly a waste of money and time. Too, he has a stalwart contempt for religionists who utilize the seats in churches for the purpose for which they were intended. He, a regular attendant at mass on Sunday mornings, kneels straight thru the service.

Mrs. Endemann, on the other hand, has been ailing for several years, and alternates between bed and her favorite rocking chair.

Sharing portions of the roomy cottage and the downstairs apartment are three children and their families: Mrs. Margaret Nakelsky, Joseph Endemann, a carpenter, and Mrs. Gertrude Mazer. Next door at 3053 reside another daughter, Mrs. Mamie Wills, and a son, William Endemann, who is a street car conductor. Another daughter, Mrs. Anna O'Donnell resides across the street at 3058, while Jake, a third son, has his tavern at the corner, 3031 Archer avenue. A fourth son, Charles Jr., who is a driver for a brewery, resides at 3523 South Wood street.

Their ages range between 60 years and 40 years. Fourteen grandchildren and five great-grandchildren complete the family circle.

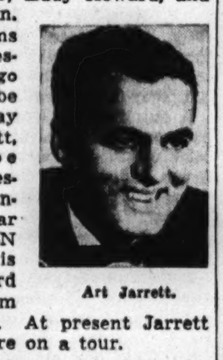
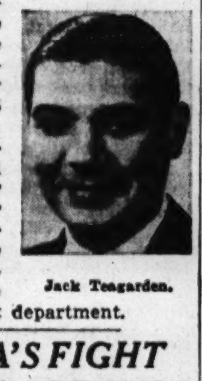
CHICAGO BANDS IN SPOTLIGHT ON W-G-N THIS WEEK

Les Brown.



Art Jarrett.

Eddy Howard.



Jack Teagarden.

Spotlight Bands, W-G-N-Mutual's week night parade of leading dance orchestras, will be aired from Chicago for the first time this week. For the first four weekdays, starting tomorrow, Spotlight bands will be aired from the Civic theater in the opera house. Les Brown and his orchestra, who have just closed an engagement at the Blackhawk restaurant during which he was heard on W-G-N, heads the Spotlight Band parade at 9:15 o'clock tomorrow evening. Brown is soon to open at the Chicago theater.

Then, on successive nights will follow Art Jarrett; Eddy Howard, and Jack Teagarden. Griff Williams and his orchestra, long Chicago favorites, will be heard on Friday evening. Jarrett, who will be heard on Tuesday night, is another familiar name to W-G-N listeners as his band was heard last summer from the Blackhawk. At present Jarrett and his band are on a tour.

Eddy Howard is remembered as the former vocalist with Dick Jurgens and has been heard on W-G-N broadcasting rom the Aragon. Teagarden, a swing veteran, will visit Chicago for the one night appearance on the Spotlight show. His band is currently touring the midwest. "Spotlight Bands" cover the country presenting the best recording orchestras every Monday thru Friday.

On Saturdays the program puts the spotlight on the band that has sold the most recordings of any one disc during the week in a special half hour show from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m.

A limited number of tickets will be available for the Civic theater broadcasts. Requests should be addressed by letter or phone to the W-G-N ticket department.

AMERICA'S FIGHT FOR HEALTH IS THEME ON W-G-N

The story of the United States' fight against disease and physical suffering will be the theme of the "Americans at the Ramparts" program on W-G-N and the Mutual network from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Thursday. Usually the "Americans at the Ramparts" program salutes our country's military establishment, but Thursday's tribute will be paid to the campaign against infantile paralysis—one of America's health ramparts.

Key officials of the campaign against infantile paralysis will speak on Thursday's program. Keith Morgan, national chairman of the committee raising fund for the national infantile paralysis foundation, will speak from New York. Herbert J. Lorber, Cook county chief of the drive, will speak from the W-G-N studios.

Producer Blair Walliser is assembling a cast of stage and screen favorites for the comedy and variety to be woven into the show.

Morton Downey, now appearing at the Chicago's Chez Paree, will sing. Arthur Treacher, the serious butler of the movies who is now starring in "Panama Hattie" at the Erlanger theater, will take over the comedy department. James Dunn, also from the "Panama Hattie" cast, will be master of ceremonies.

Musical settings will be provided by Bob Trendler and the W-G-N dance orchestra.

OAK PARK HOME GIVEN THORO JOB OF REMODELING

Couple Lets Living Room Wait Until Last.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Contrary to the procedure many people would have followed, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist of 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park, left the finishing of their living room and dining room until the last when remodeling their 70 year old house.

These two rooms were only completed recently. But they felt that the large library bay which adjoins the dining room and which they fitted out beautifully with built-in shelves and cases, weather tight windows, and chairs, radio, and couch could be made to meet their needs until time came when they could turn their attention to living room and dining room.

Mrs. Bornquist preferred a blue kitchen, but every one advised against it since the room had a north exposure. In the end it emerged according to her preference. The ceiling is a delft blue, the walls a lighter shade of blue blended with a phantom gray.

Radiator Is Horizontal.

"We mixed our own colors, and mixed and mixed," Mrs. Bornquist pointed out. It took us days to experiment and get the colors we really wanted."

A new radiator heating system was installed, and when it came to installing a radiator in the kitchen there seemed no wall space for it. So Mr. Bornquist decided to have it placed horizontally instead of vertically and at right angles to the outside wall. Then he built a shelf over it and small shelves down one end, covered them with blue linoleum of the same shade as the working surfaces of kitchen and fastened chrome towel racks parallel with the top shelf. Now this ingenious unit not only provides heat but serves as a swanky little breakfast counter.

Mr. Bornquist had wanted a circular breakfast nook but there was no room for this so he built a semi-circular table, placed it against a wall, and included as part of its permanent equipment, swing out chairs. The knobs on the chairs are Mrs. Bornquist's initials, and the wall overhead is papered, a fetching patterned paper with a yellow background.

Uses Salvaged Window.

Equipment is all new and streamlined and over the sink there's a smart window which looks for all the world like one of the new horizontal sliding windows. It happens to be merely a window which Mr. Bornquist salvaged from an old garage. He took the upper part of it and installed it horizontally instead of vertically.

Adjacent to this kitchen is a sizable room which for the present is used for storage purposes. Some day it will be a modern bedroom or den. Its ultimate rôle in life is still unsettled.

The bathroom, of course, was compleely transformed. The "Queen Anne bath tub," as the Bornquists called their old tub on legs, disappeared and a new built-in model appeared, with overhead shower and curtains. The wainscot is a pale yellow, the walls and ceiling a deep blue. The linoleum on the floor is coral shade and matches the small fish which are glimpsed in the wall paper pattern.

Plywood on Doors.

The doors thruout the whole house have been covered with plywood and painted white. On the second floor new hardwood floors were laid over the soft wood floors. Downstairs the hardwood floors are to be stained a dark shade shortly. The woodwork thruout is also white like the doors.

If you have wondered what to do with a narrow, boxed-in stairway to give it a slightly different and lively mien, there's an idea for you in what the Bornquists did.

The original stairhall was open at the top but they closed this in and left a small hallway at the head of the stairs from which opens the master bedroom and the guestroom. They then painted the stairwalls light and ran a band of deep colored paint a foot and a half wide down each wall. They use this band as a guest book and give each guest a white crayon to write on the band the name and date of the visit.

DR. REINHOLD NEIBUHR SPEAKS TONIGHT AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr.

Mrs. Ida B. W. Smith.

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr of Union Theological seminary, New York City, will speak at the 8 o'clock meeting of the Chicago Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, tonight on the subject, "The Wheat and the Tares." Clifford W. Barnes, founder and president of the club, will preside.

Dr. Neibuhr's book, "The Nature of the Destiny of Man," selected as the religious book of the year in 1941, grew out of an address he made at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, during that city's first air raid.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Evanston, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, will speak at the 7 o'clock meeting.

Music will be provided by the club's choir and the visiting chapel choir of Elmhurst college.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Jan. 19.

As stated before, this is the time to make the plan for a war garden, so called because under the present emergency every effort must be made to grow more produce to aid defense. Organize your neighborhood, arrange to have as large a garden as can be well taken care of. Make a list of the seeds needed and order them. It is imperative that the order be sent to the seedsman as early as possible for some stocks are very low and the demand will be great.

Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Many fruit trees are grossly neglected with the result that they never produce the crop of which they are capable. Now is the time to get these trees in proper condition, but if in doubt as to how to go about it, it is wise to engage the services of an experienced man who will also take care of spraying operations at the proper time. Pruning is beneficial when properly done but it may be injurious if undertaken by the inexperienced.

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Do you know that many kinds of shrubs can be easily propagated from dormant wood of the previous season's growth? Examples are: Cornus, spirea van houttei, snowberry, weigelia, privet, forsythia, hydrangea paniculata, kerria japonica, ninebark, lonicera or honeysuckle. Make the cuttings 6 to 8 inches long and bury in a sandy or well drained spot during the winter and by spring each cutting will form a callus and be ready to line out for rooting in the garden.

Thursday, Jan. 22.

Home gardeners who have the space should certainly investigate the possibilities of the hotbed for it is one of the finest accessories to the garden that can be installed. Now is the time to build one altho knocked down frames, ready to install, are available and at a reasonable price. Ready glazed sash is also available.

Friday, Jan. 23.

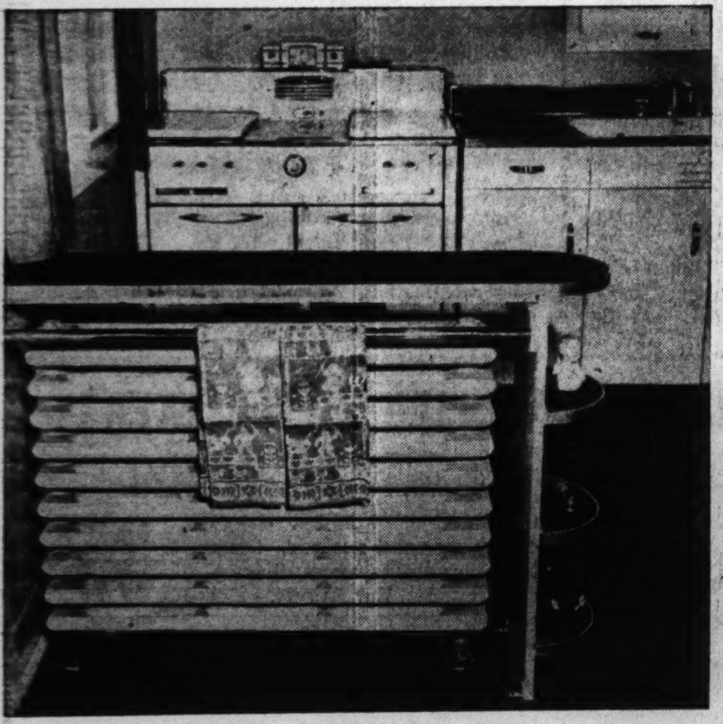
Frequently the asparagus fern or asparagus sprengeri will be rejuvenated if it it cut down and repotted in spring. Both kinds require a fairly rich soil and they are excellent house plants.

One of the finest house plants for the person who will give them proper care is the beautiful Norfolk Island pine. It costs more than many other kinds but for the discriminating gardener it is a choice plant. It is an evergreen from Australia.

Saturday, Jan. 24.

How about the begonia that rots off near the surface of the soil? This is caused from too much water. Place the plant in the window where it will receive more light and be more careful not to overwater. Worms in the soil do little damage beyond stopping up the drainage hole, causing the soil to become saturated with possible subsequent injury from over watering.

Breakfast Bar Over Radiator



Rather than sacrifice kitchen space to a radiator, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist utilized this method in the modernization of their home at 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park. Now the top serves as a breakfast bar, while towel racks extend underneath.

118 CHILDREN MEET DEATH IN '41 FROM AUTOS

Fatalities in County Show Increase.

An analysis of circumstances which brought death to 118 children under 19 years old in traffic accidents in Cook county during 1941, revealed that 38 fatalities or nearly one-third occurred in midblock accidents. The figures, compiled from case histories in the coroner's office files by Chicago Motor club safety engineers, showed that the fatalities included 84 boys and 34 girls.

The survey revealed an increase over the 106 fatalities recorded during 1940. Midblock accidents during 1940 accounted for 41 deaths. Altho there was a small decline in midblock accidents during 1941, the largest percentage of fatalities occurred in this manner. Fifteen children were killed crossing between intersections; eleven lost their lives by running suddenly into the street from the sidewalk; eight were killed when they darted from between parked cars into the path of a car, and four were killed while playing in the street.

Few Killed During School Day.

Safety engineers pointed out that only 11 children were killed on a school day during school hours. This was an appreciable decline from 1940 when 32 children were killed during school hours. The decrease was credited partly to the motor club plan called "The Safest Route to School." By this system children are trained to take a route approved by teachers and the patrol boys between their homes and school in order to minimize exposure to traffic hazards.

The danger of crossing at unguarded intersections was revealed in the files which showed 20 deaths occurred at intersections without signals or traffic guards. This was an increase of 9 per cent over 1940. Failure of children to judge the speed of vehicles accurately, hurry and carelessness were cited by the safety engineers as causes of these deaths. Five children, however, were killed at signalized intersections during 1941 compared to a perfect record in 1940 when no fatalities were reported at guarded intersections.

The figures also revealed an increase last year in the number of children killed in automobiles. Nineteen children lost their lives while riding as passengers compared to 13 during 1940. Nine youngsters lost their lives while driving cars compared to three during the previous year.

Southwest Most Hazardous.

As in 1940, the southwest section of Chicago and Cook county was the most dangerous area, with 36 children killed. The west and northwest sides were the second most dangerous sections, with 27 fatalities each. Sixteen children met death on the south side and 12 were killed on the north side.

Of the various age groups, the fatality rate was greatest among the 6 year olds, with 14 children of that age losing their lives. Eleven youngsters 16 years old were killed and ten 3 year olds were fatally injured. There were 22 fatalities in the preschool age—under four years of age; 59 of elementary school age—5 to 13 years old, and 13 high school students —14 to 19.

Fourteen children were killed riding bicycles in the street and three lost their lives while hitching rides on automobiles and trucks. Cars backing out of driveways and alleys, falls from moving cars, and other miscellaneous accidents claimed ten lives.

Urges Safety Habits.

"Children cannot be cautioned too frequently about street dangers," Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out in urging parents, teachers, and all adults who have contect with youngsters, to impress upon them the importance of good safety habits. "The government has urged that safety be given more serious consideration than ever before because of its vital effect on national defense. There can be no more fertile place to institute safety than in the minds of those who will be the nation's leaders tomorrow."

Following are four rules complied by the motor club for parents to impress upon their children:

1. Cross only at intersections and if possible where there are traffic signals or policemen.
2. Wait for traffic to clear before crossing.
3. Do not play in the streets.
4. Ride bicycles with extreme care.

'PENNY WISE' IS THIRD OFFERING OF PLAY PARADE

"Penny Wise," a farce by Jean Ferguson Black, has been chosen as the third offering of a new Chicago little theater group, Play Parade, to be presented next Sunday evening in Curtiss hall, the Fine Arts building, 410 South Michigan avenue.

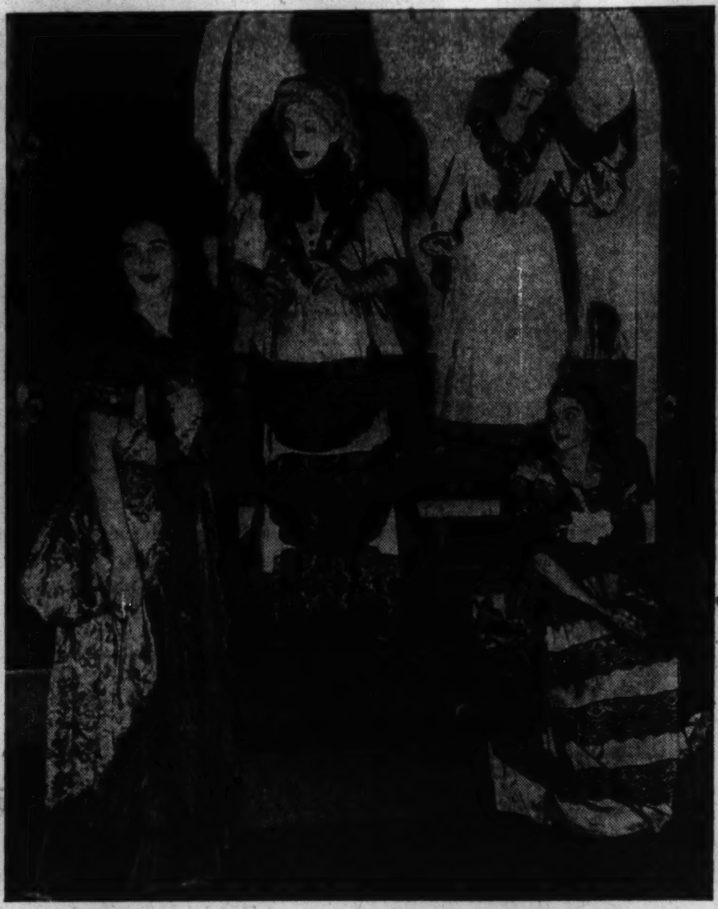
Two south side residents will make their dramatic debut in "Penny Wise." Angela Kreuser, 4932 Lake Park avenue, will take one of the leading rôles, Tina, and Jay Wasserman, 5059 Ellis avenue, will be introduced as Gordon Chase.

Adelyn Wippman, 5432 South Greenwood avenue, will be in charge of tickets and box office.

Church Choirs to Give Operetta of Colonial Era in New Orleans

Larry Lynch, as Eugene De Lorme, aide to the French governor of New Orleans, and Miss Florence Fisher, as a "cassette," will look like this Thursday, Friday, and next Sunday evenings when the combined junior and senior choirs of St. Clara's church present "The Mocking Bird," an operetta. A "cassette" in the 18th century was a peasant girl shipped from France to New Orleans as a potential wife for one of the colonists.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]



Portraying four 18th century ladies of New Orleans will be (left to right) Miss Shirley Marshall, Miss Janice Read, Miss Clarice McGinnis, and Miss Modeste McKenna. Miss McGinnis is attired more simply because she is a mere "cassette," while the others are fashionable colonials. The show will be given in the parish hall, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue.

State Primary Falls on Latest Possible Date

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Political candidates will have less time than usual this year between the April primary and the November election in which to wage their campaigns for office. This was pointed out last week by John F. Tyrrell, vice chairman of the Republican state central committee, an attorney who has become known as an election law expert.

The 1942 primary will take place April 14, latest possible date under the state primary law formula which specifies that the primary shall be held on the second Tuesday in April in even numbered years

Not since the state primary was switched from September to April in 1917 has it been held so late as April 14. This late a primary will not occur again until 1964, unless the law is changed meanwhile.

Election Is Early.

The election this year will be held on Nov. 3. This is only one day beyond the earliest possible date for a general election, which under the state election law must be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in even numbered years. There has been no Nov. 2 election since 1930, and there will not be another until 1952.

This year's loss of campaigning time is not likely to cause great consternation, Tyrrell indicated, inasmuch as criticism has frequently been raised that the April primary leaves too great an interval between the nomination and the election of candidates.

Candidates Object to Early Date.

The candidates themselves dislike the early primary, principally because it exposes them all summer long to the interminable line of solicitors for program advertising, political picnics, organization doings and other schemes for separating the vote seeking politician from his campaign cash.

The September primary was free from this objection. However, it had the disadvantage that vote contests arising in the primary could not in all cases be disposed of in time for the election. The time interval was too short for the ponderous machinery of the law to function.

Occasionally it is suggested that a return be made to the September primary, but thus far such proposals have found insufficient support. The late primary is favored by many downstaters because the spring primary comes at a time when the farmer is busy in the fields and so has scant time to vote or to listen to the oratory of prospective nominees. Proponents of the April primary point out that it includes the election of delegates to the national party conventions, held in June or July.

Sought Primary in June.

An effort was made this year to postpone the primary to June 1, and to hold it in conjunction with Supreme court judicial elections on that date in five of the seven judicial districts in the state. This would have saved expense.

Both the Cook county board and the Chicago city council passed resolutions asking Gov. Green to move for the change. The governor, however, omitted the subject from his call for the first special session of the legislature, and so it could not come up for consideration.

LEO SCHOOL MOTHERS GIVING ANNUAL CARD PARTY FRIDAY NIGHT

The Mothers' club of Leo High school, 79th street and Peoria avenue, will give its annual card party Friday evening in the Mural room of the Morrison hotel. HOW KINGSBURY AREA IS SOLVING VAST PROBLEM

Homes, Schools to Rise for Workers.

BY PAUL HEALY.

The Kingsbury ordnance plant, a backstage Colossus vital to modern warfare, is quietly but steadily altering the looks of some of northern Indiana's most rustic farmlands. The giant shell loading plant covers 20 square miles as it sprawls thru the center of La Porte county.

Within the next half year the plant is expected to have caused the immigration of thousands of workers, the construction of three new schools and thousands of homes, the birth of a new village, and a commercial boom in the towns of Kingsbury, La Porte, Walkerton, and Knox.

Construction of the plant, which cost 37 million dollars, was begun a little over a year ago. Now 95 per cent complete, it employs about 10,000 workers and has been turning out shells since last August. Many, many more workers will be needed when the plant is under full capacity, officials say. Because of the nature of the work nearly half of the workers probably will be women.

Housing Major Problem.

Housing is considered the most important problem, inasmuch as the majority of the workers have families, and officials want workers to live close to the plant. Since there is a housing shortage in surrounding towns many employés currently are motoring from South Bend, Gary, Chicago, and other distant cities. Besides adding mileage to tires the trips tend to reduce efficiency at the plant, where alertness is of paramount importance.

To solve the dilemma 800 homes are being built at La Porte, Knox, and Walkerton under the Federal Works agency, 249 trailers will soon be brought to Knox by the Farm Security administration, and 500 dormitory units will be put up at Knox and Walkerton by the same bureau.

Later 3,100 homes probably will be built by some other government agency somewhere in the neighborhood of the plant.

A total of $582,500 has been allotted from the community facilities appropriation for the construction of township schools in La Porte, Kingsbury, and Walkerton, and $188,000 from the same fund will be used to enlarge the Fairview hospital in La Porte.

Methodists Build Church.

A scattering of other homes are being built by private capital and one church, the Tracy Methodist, has been built just outside the plant. Catholic churches in surrounding towns are adding masses to their normal schedule.

"Aside from housing we haven't had the problems we anticipated," says Martin H. Ray, vice president of Todd & Brown, Inc., designers and operators of the plant. "Because of the efficiency of the state and county police and the good sense of the residents of this region, who are alive to their responsibility, we are relatively free of the evils which usually crop up in a boom area.

"This is also partly due to the type of workers we are hiring. They must be loyal, alert American citizens who can pass strict physical examinations. I notice most of them respond enthusiastically to the many sided recreational program we are encouraging here."

How They Pass Leisure.

The leisure time activities, some of which go on inside the plant grounds, include groups which have organized competition in archery, baseball, basketball, bowling, gymnastics, handball, horseshoes, skeet shooting, softball, swimming, volleyball, tennis, art, checkers, chess, coin collecting, conservation, drama, first aid, gardening, nature studies, painting, home movies, and drum and bugle playing. Numerous meeting places in surrounding towns have been made available for the recreational activities.

The largest single diversion is the bowling league, which includes 60 teams. To aid the program the United Service organization has opened headquarters in Walkerton. There are seven motion picture theaters in La Porte, Knox, and Walkerton with a combined seating capacity of 4,100.

Tho many of the plant's employés are migratory workers, there is no predominant national descent or background. Some of them, in fact, are farmers who are taking advantage of the situation to increase their income. All the operating workers must be trained from the ground up, officials say, since none ever has had experience in this type of plant before. Commanding officer of the plant is Maj. Edward J. Thomas.

Rent Starts at $27.50.

Workers who move into the FWA homes will be furnished with heat, hot water, a gas range, kitchen cabinet, curtain rods and shades, and electricity. They will pay $27.50, $30, or $32.50 a month, depending on whether they want one, two, or three bedrooms.

Four hundred of these are under construction just south of La Porte, 200 will be built at Knox, which is 19 miles south of the main gate, and 200 will be put up at Walkerton, which is 15 miles southeast of the main

HYDE PARK YMCA OPENS DRIVE FOR $14,500 FRIDAY

Fund Provides Facilities for Boys and Girls.

The Hyde Park YMCA's 47th annual finance campaign will start Friday and continue until Monday, Feb. 9. Dr. Carl O. Molander, head of the department of physical therapy at Michael Reese hospital and chairman of the women's department committee of the Hyde Park YMCA, has been elected head of the board for the drive.

The goal of $14,500 will make it possible for the Y to continue its services for the boys and girls of the Oakland, Kenwood, Hyde Park, and Woodlawn districts. All other services are self-supporting.

Programs for boys include physical education, handicraft, social activities, swimming, basketball, life saving, boxing, baseball, soccer, gym hockey, and gymnasium games. The handicraft and social program teaches wood carving, archery, leather craft, glass painting, puppet making, model airplane, and boat building, ping pong, checkers, billiards, and parties. Educational movies, trips and lectures are other features.

Girls Have Many Activities.

The girls' program consists of swimming, life saving, sewing, painting, dramatics, and social and tap dancing. Co-ed activities and frequent parties in which mothers and daughters participate are regular events.

Men in service uniform are given complimentary use of all recreational facilities. In addition, social events are planned for them.

Assisting Dr. Molander in the drive are the following as division majors: Arthur W. May, Willis Van Pelt, J. D. Levin, Louis Spear, Mrs. Mandel Herman, and L. H. Mauseth.

Workers Are Listed.

Working under them as captains are Basil T. Cook, Michael Chinn, Bob Stapleton, Doren Trump, Clinton Rich, L. C. Smith, Howard Williams, Fred Webdnagle, Harold Unger, O. C. Silvers, E. L. Lindholm, Dr. H. L. Collins, J. N. Murray, Maurice Greiman, Charles Larson, E. M. Rettig, Dave Zisook, C. L. Leindecker, and Oscar H. Boenecke.

The newest addition to the program for boys and girls is community extension work. It provides supervised activity on play areas for juveniles in the residential district bordering on the business zone of the neighborhood. Funds for this will come from the finance campaign.

The Hyde Park Y has occupied the present building since 1906. It was organized 47 years ago in the home of John J. Pershing, a young resident of Hyde Park who was distined for fame as leader of the AEF in the first World war. Its first quarters were a rented house at 53d street and Kenwood avenue.

BIG ARMS PLANT BOOMS NORTHERN INDIANA TOWNS

How Area Is Solving Myriad Problems.

gate. In the latter two towns the homes will be of the prefabricated type.

Workers who are unmarried or have left their families at their distant homes may live in a dormitory, which will cost $3.50 a week for a double room and $5 for a single room. This includes furnishings, linen, blankets, and hotel services. There will be 250 dormitory units for women at Walkerton and 250 dormitory units for men at Knox.

249 Trailers at Knox.

At least 249 trailers also will be available later this year at Knox. These will cost $6 a week, which will include everything but linen, dishes, silver, blankets, and fuel for heating and cooking.

The site has not yet been chosen for the other 3,100 homes by the government, but their construction is expected to create a new village somewhere in the area, complete with a school, stores, and shops.

All of the homes, however, will not be within walking distance of the plant and this is expected to cause problems of transportation, if tire rationing continues. Buses are being added to routes in the district, but La Porte county has been granted comparatively few tires in the ration program.

Thirteen Bureaus Aiding.

Thirteen federal bureaus are coöperating in protecting the plant's welfare and aiding its personnel in their problems. The United States Public Health service, for example, is helping state and county health officers in trying to prevent sickness and disease among the workers and the United States department of labor is studying such problems as labor supply, migrations, and facilities for women.

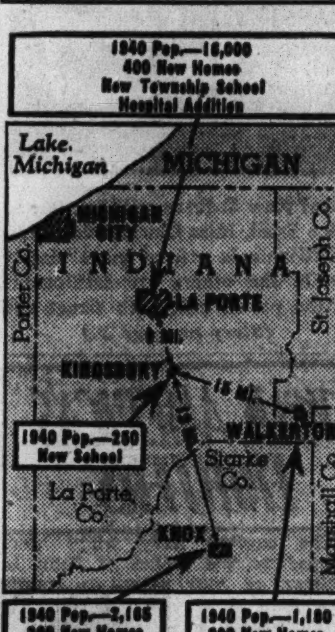
Other federal agencies represented are the Division of Defense Housing Coördination, Office of Production Management, Office of Emergency Management, Federal Security agency, Federal Works agency, Farm Security administration, Defense Public Works agency, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Federal Housing administration, Public Buildings administration, and Home Owners Loan corporation.

According to the 1940 census the city of La Porte had a population of 16,000, Walkerton had 1,180, Knox had 2,165, and Kingsbury had 250. The present populations are approximately double the 1940 figures and still growing.

K. of C. Speaker.

Gael Sullivan, director of the Illinois FHA, will address members and friends of St. Philip Neri council, Knights of Columbus, Tuesday evening in their Caravel clubhouse, 7515 Yates avenue. The meeting will be called to order at 8:30 o'clock.

Arms Plant Effect



This is the area in northern Indiana which is most influenced by the presence of the giant Kingsbury ordnance plant which was built during the last year. Now 95 per cent complete, the plant requires 10,000 workers. Because no site has been chosen, a new village of 3,100 homes the government proposes to build cannot be designated on the map.

SONS OF LEGION EXPAND COUNTY DEFENSE PATROL

2,700 Youths to Study Emergency Work.

More than 2,700 young men in Cook county will be needed in the Sons of the American Legion program to expand the United States emergency patrol, it was announced today by Joseph R. Dorfman, detachment commander, who termed the expansion the Sons' contribution to national defense in the Chicago area.

Between 300 and 400 will be chosen in each of the nine American Legion districts in Cook county, Dorfman said. The districts in turn will be called American Legion emergency patrol battalions.

ROTC Leadership Needed.

Twenty-five Sons are now being selected from each district to begin training in the emergency patrol school. To be eligible candidates must be 14 or over; possess SAL membership; have record as ROTC officers; and agree to be typed as emergency blood transfusion donors.

Candidates at the school will receive intensive training in federal and local law enforcement, military drill regulations, first aid, coroners' functions, fire prevention, marksmanship, and civics.

Started in 1939.

The emergency patrol was originated in the Illinois detachment of Sons of the American Legion early in 1939. Emergency patrol units have been active downstate.

ARIOSO WOMAN'S CHORUS TO GIVE SACRED CONCERT

The Arioso Woman's chorus will present its first concert of the year Thursday evening at the First Reformed Church of Roseland, 107th street and Michigan avenue.

The chorus of 170 voices will be supplemented by Max E. Wilson and Nena Sasuta, soloists. Miss Ruth Van Der Mey will preside at the organ. Miss Frances Van Rosendale, violinist, and Mrs. Dorothy Tissing Boersma, pianist, will assist.

The concert will be one of sacred music. The outstanding number will be Bizet's Agnus Dei, featuring Mr. Wilson as soloist, with violin, organ, and piano accompaniment. Richard Wesselius is director of the chorus.

CURVE ON LAKE COUNTY ROAD IS CALLED HAZARD

Eliminating the dangerous curve in the Crown Point-Cedar Lake road at the Crown Point fairgrounds was placed on the list of projects of the Lake County Area council of the Chicago Motor club at its meeting last week in Hammond.

The council will ask Lake county commissioners to investigate this place, which has been the scene of several recent accidents, and make the necessary improvements.

Another hazard discussed was Dicky road between Front street in Whiting and the border of East Chicago. Since this stretch of road runs parallel to the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, smoke often blinds motorists, resulting in many serious accidents.

CHICAGO BANDS IN SPOTLIGHT ON W-G-N THIS WEEK

Brown, Jarrett, Howard, Teagarden Slated.

Spotlight Bands, W-G-N-Mutual's week night parade of leading dance orchestras, will be aired from Chicago for the first time this week. Then, on successive nights will follow Art Jarrett; Eddy Howard, and Jack Teagarden. Griff Williams and his orchestra, long Chicago favorites, will be heard on Friday evening. The story will have to do with the tale of a young girl who pays large sums to a medium with the belief he is bringing her father back to earth for weekly conversations. Mike Trent exposes the medium's methods of obtaining "Easy Money."

AMERICA'S FIGHT FOR HEALTH IS THEME ON W-G-N

The story of the United States' fight against disease and physical suffering will be the theme of the "Americans at the Ramparts" program on W-G-N and the Mutual network from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Key officials of the campaign against infantile paralysis will speak on Thursday's program. Keith Morgan, national chairman of the committee raising fund for the national infantile paralysis foundation, will speak from New York. Herbert J. Lorber, Cook county chief of the drive, will speak from the W-G-N studios.

Producer Blair Walliser is assembling a cast of stage and screen favorites for the comedy and variety to be woven into the show.

Morton Downey, now appearing at the Chicago's Chez Paree, will sing. Arthur Treacher, the serious butler of the movies who is now starring in "Panama Hattie" at the Erlanger theater, will take over the comedy department. James Dunn, also from the "Panama Hattie" cast, will be master of ceremonies.

Musical settings will be provided by Bob Trendler and the W-G-N dance orchestra.

Presenting a program that includes comparatively unfamiliar compositions by Verdi, Dvorak, and Mozart, Fritz Busch will conduct the New York Philharmonic-Symphony in his first appearance in that organization's broadcast series over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today. Busch has selected a program consisting of the "Luisa Miller" Overture by Verdi; Hayden's G major Symphony, No. 13; "Alborada del Gracioso" by Ravel; Six German Dances, K. 571, by Mozart, and the Symphonic poem, "Heldenlied," Opus 111, by Dvorak.

Radio City Music Hall Will Present Four Guests

Story of a Chinese Vase on Great Artists Hour

The part of a Chinese vase, one closely resembling pottery now exhibited in Chicago's Art institute, played in the murder of an emperor of ancient China, will be portrayed in drama on W-G-N's "Great Artists" program Tuesday from 4:15 to 4:30 p. m.

OAK PARK HOME GIVEN THORO JOB OF REMODELING

Couple Lets Living Room Wait Until Last.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Contrary to the procedure many people would have followed, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist of 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park, left the finishing of their living room and dining room until the last when remodeling their 70 year old house.

These two rooms were only completed recently. But they felt that the large library bay which adjoins the dining room and which they fitted out beautifully with built-in shelves and cases, weather tight windows, and chairs, radio, and couch could be made to meet their needs until time came when they could turn their attention to living room and dining room.

Mrs. Bornquist preferred a blue kitchen, but every one advised against it since the room had a north exposure. In the end it emerged according to her preference. The ceiling is a delft blue, the walls a lighter shade of blue blended with a phantom gray.

Radiator Is Horizontal.

"We mixed our own colors, and mixed and mixed," Mrs. Bornquist pointed out. It took us days to experiment and get the colors we really wanted."

A new radiator heating system was installed, and when it came to installing a radiator in the kitchen there seemed no wall space for it. So Mr. Bornquist decided to have it placed horizontally instead of vertically and at right angles to the outside wall. Then he built a shelf over it and small shelves down one end, covered them with blue linoleum of the same shade as the working surfaces of kitchen and fastened chrome towel racks parallel with the top shelf. Now this ingenious unit not only provides heat but serves as a swanky little breakfast counter.

Mr. Bornquist had wanted a circular breakfast nook but there was no room for this so he built a semi-circular table, placed it against a wall, and included as part of its permanent equipment, swing out chairs. The knobs on the chairs are Mrs. Bornquist's initials, and the wall overhead is papered, a fetching patterned paper with a yellow background.

Uses Salvaged Window.

Equipment is all new and streamlined and over the sink there's a smart window which looks for all the world like one of the new horizontal sliding windows. It happens to be merely a window which Mr. Bornquist salvaged from an old garage. He took the upper part of it and installed it horizontally instead of vertically.

Adjacent to this kitchen is a sizable room which for the present is used for storage purposes. Some day it will be a modern bedroom or den. Its ultimate rôle in life is still unsettled.

The bathroom, of course, was completely transformed. The "Queen Anne bath tub," as the Bornquists called their old tub on legs, disappeared and a new built-in model appeared, with overhead shower and curtains. The wainscot is a pale yellow, the walls and ceiling a deep blue. The linoleum on the floor is coral shade and matches the small fish which are glimpsed in the wall paper pattern.

Plywood on Doors.

The doors thruout the whole house have been covered with plywood and painted white. On the second floor new hardwood floors were laid over the soft wood floors. Downstairs the hardwood floors are to be stained a dark shade shortly. The woodwork thruout is also white like the doors.

If you have wondered what to do with a narrow, boxed-in stairway to give it a slightly different and lively mien, there's an idea for you in what the Bornquists did.

The original stairhall was open at the top but they closed this in and left a small hallway at the head of the stairs from which opens the master bedroom and the guestroom. They then painted the stairwalls light and ran a band of deep colored paint a foot and a half wide down each wall. They use this band as a guest book and give each guest a white crayon to write on the band the name and date of the visit.

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr.

Mrs. Ida B. W. Smith.

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr of Union Theological seminary, New York City, will speak at the 8 o'clock meeting of the Chicago Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, tonight on the subject, "The Wheat and the Tares." Clifford W. Barnes, founder and president of the club, will preside.

Dr. Neibuhr's book, "The Nature of the Destiny of Man," selected as the religious book of the year in 1941, grew out of an address he made at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, during that city's first air raid.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Evanston, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, will speak at the 7 o'clock meeting.

Music will be provided by the club's choir and the visiting chapel choir of Elmhurst college.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Jan. 19.

As stated before, this is the time to make the plan for a war garden, so called because under the present emergency every effort must be made to grow more produce to aid defense. Organize your neighborhood, arrange to have as large a garden as can be well taken care of. Make a list of the seeds needed and order them. It is imperative that the order be sent to the seedsman as early as possible for some stocks are very low and the demand will be great.

Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Many fruit trees are grossly neglected with the result that they never produce the crop of which they are capable. Now is the time to get these trees in proper condition, but if in doubt as to how to go about it, it is wise to engage the services of an experienced man who will also take care of spraying operations at the proper time. Pruning is beneficial when properly done but it may be injurious if undertaken by the inexperienced.

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Do you know that many kinds of shrubs can be easily propagated from dormant wood of the previous season's growth? Examples are: Cornus, spirea van houttei, snowberry, weigelia, privet, forsythia, hydrangea paniculata, kerria japonica, ninebark, lonicera or honeysuckle. Make the cuttings 6 to 8 inches long and bury in a sandy or well drained spot during the winter and by spring each cutting will form a callus and be ready to line out for rooting in the garden.

Thursday, Jan. 22.

Home gardeners who have the space should certainly investigate the possibilities of the hotbed for it is one of the finest accessories to the garden that can be installed. Now is the time to build one altho knocked down frames, ready to install, are available and at a reasonable price. Ready glazed sash is also available.

Friday, Jan. 23.

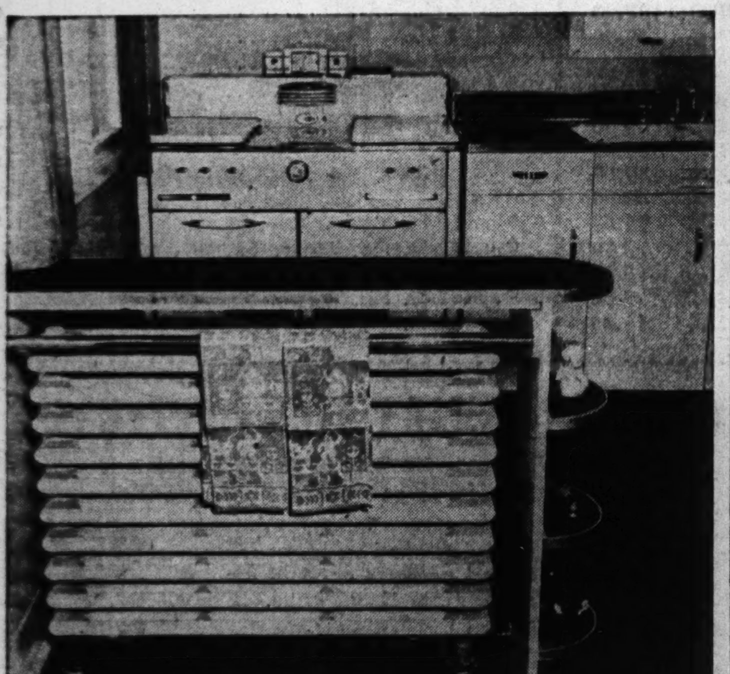
Frequently the asparagus fern or asparagus sprengeri will be rejuvenated if it it cut down and repotted in spring. Both kinds require a fairly rich soil and they are excellent house plants.

One of the finest house plants for the person who will give them proper care is the beautiful Norfolk Island pine. It costs more than many other kinds but for the discriminating gardener it is a choice plant. It is an evergreen from Australia.

Saturday, Jan. 24.

How about the begonia that rots off near the surface of the soil? This is caused from too much water. Place the plant in the window where it will receive more light and be more careful not to overwater. Worms in the soil do little damage beyond stopping up the drainage hole, causing the soil to become saturated with possible subsequent injury from over watering.

Breakfast Bar Over Radiator



Rather than sacrifice kitchen space to a radiator, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist utilized this method in the modernization of their home at 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park. Now the top serves as a breakfast bar, while towel racks extend underneath.

DRAFT BOARD OFFICE SYMBOL OF U. S. SPIRIT

Enact Quiet Drama as Army Forms.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

"Having submitted yourself to a local board composed of your neighbors for the purpose of determining your availability for training and service in the armed forces of the United States, you are hereby notified that you have now been selected to report for physical examination."

So reads the dull type of an order from Cook County Selective Service board No. 15 with headquarters at 11 Quincy road, Riverside. In the office of a store building, formerly occupied by a chain store but now converted into an American Legion hall, there is prosaic equipment that includes a filing system. On the wall is an American flag, and there is a calendar with its illustration of the Liberty Bell.

In this war in which the nation again finds itself fighting for existence, there is little of the traditional drama associated with the scene of young manhood springing to arms. No Paul Revere has ridden by night. No uniformed companies, locally enlisted, have drilled on the streets. Yet the businesslike office of Board No. 15, typical of countless places of its kind thruout the country, is charged with an atmosphere symbolic of the spirit in which the world's most powerful nation meets the challenge of modern war.

Embraces Five Towns.

Since Oct. 26, 1940, the Riverside office has sent forth its quotas from the area that includes Riverside, North Riverside, Lyons, Hollywood, and 80 per cent of Brookfield. In the first contingent were two volunteers. Now, taken at intervals, hundreds have gone. They have arrived at the office in shirt sleeves, in leather jackets, and sweaters that later were to be transformed into uniforms of men who fight for their country on land and sea and in the air.

Cards in the filing system reveal that a majority of the boys possessed high school education and a high percentage of them were college trained. As, by groups, they left the office for the Burlington railroad station, a leader was appointed to guarantee their appearance at the induction office in Chicago. They left subtly and with little fanfare.

On occasions when there were large groups the drum and bugle corps played and there were speeches by local leaders. Once or twice the "Q" was obliged to put on a special car. Since they have gone, the Selective Service board office has taken on the atmosphere of a clearing house for their cards and letters and photographs received from far-flung camps. The boys have visited the office when they have come home on furlough.

Groups Are Photographed.

Herbert J. Bassman has taken a photograph of each group as it left the Burlington station, and these pictures have been given a place of honor on the office walls.

"It has been an inspiring experience," said E. J. Quinn, chairman of Board No. 15, "and, thruout, the morale of the young men from the area has been high.

Reference of the local board as being "composed of neighbors" means that in such a community as Riverside, the examiners are personally acquainted with many of the boys who come before them. The board members, except for the chief clerk and stenographer, donate their services. Professional men have contributed long hours away from their practice to make the service efficient.

R. N. Wycoff First Chairman.

The first chairman of the board was Roderick N. Wycoff who served until last July, when Mr. Quinn, who had previously been secretary, took charge. F. J. Wood is now secretary, and A. J. Hudec is the other local board member. R. L. Gustafson is chief clerk, and Mrs. Clayton Zimmerman is clerk-stenographer.

The lawyer members of the advisory board who alternate their services in assisting registrants to fill out questionnaires are Francis J. Benda, chairman; Osgood H. Dowell, James J. Kelly, Wendell H. Shanner, Ross O. Hinkle, and John M. Beverly. The appeal agents are Lawrence C. Mills, Michael J. Thuma, and Homer C. Dawson.

The examining board of doctors consists of Dr. G. A. Barnett, Dr. Merle J. Denker, Dr. Paul G. Peterson, Dr. Philip L. Peterson, Dr. William Davies, Dr. M. J. Chiasson, Dr. J. D. McCarthy, and Dr. E. F. Dombrowski. Dental examiners are Dr. B. R. Jones, Dr. B. F. Mowery, and Dr. F. A. Traeger.

Send Gift to Each Soldier.

Mr. Quinn is chairman of an American Legion committee which has started a movement to raise funds to send a kit to every boy who has left the community to serve with the colors.

In Riverside, as in other communities in the area, the functioning of the Selective Service board has continued from week to week providing those footnotes to history that do not find their way into the big type of the printed chronicle of a period in American life. As elsewhere the restrained drama is just beneath the surface.

State Primary Falls on Latest Possible Date

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Political candidates will have less time than usual this year between the April primary and the November election in which to wage their campaigns for office. This was pointed out last week by John F. Tyrrell, vice chairman of the Republican state central committee, an attorney who has become known as an election law expert.

The 1942 primary will take place April 14, latest possible date under the state primary law formula which specifies that the primary shall be held on the second Tuesday in April in even numbered years

Not since the state primary was switched from September to April in 1917 has it been held so late as April 14. This late a primary will not occur again until 1964, unless the law is changed meanwhile.

Election Is Early.

The election this year will be held on Nov. 3. This is only one day beyond the earliest possible date for a general election, which under the state election law must be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in even numbered years. There has been no Nov. 2 election since 1930, and there will not be another until 1952.

This year's loss of campaigning time is not likely to cause great consternation, Tyrrell indicated, inasmuch as criticism has frequently been raised that the April primary leaves too great an interval between the nomination and the election of candidates.

Candidates Object to Early Date.

The candidates themselves dislike the early primary, principally because it exposes them all summer long to the interminable line of solicitors for program advertising, political picnics, organization doings and other schemes for separating the vote seeking politician from his campaign cash.

The September primary was free from this objection. However, it had the disadvantage that vote contests arising in the primary could not in all cases be disposed of in time for the election. The time interval was too short for the ponderous machinery of the law to function.

Occasionally it is suggested that a return be made to the September primary, but thus far such proposals have found insufficient support. The late primary is favored by many downstaters because the spring primary comes at a time when the farmer is busy in the fields and so has scant time to vote or to listen to the oratory of prospective nominees. Proponents of the April primary point out that it includes the election of delegates to the national party conventions, held in June or July.

Sought Primary in June.

An effort was made this year to postpone the primary to June 1, and to hold it in conjunction with Supreme court judicial elections on that date in five of the seven judicial districts in the state. This would have saved expense.

Both the Cook county board and the Chicago city council passed resolutions asking Gov. Green to move for the change. The governor, however, omitted the subject from his call for the first special session of the legislature, and so it could not come up for consideration.

Illinois has functioned under the primary system since the first compulsory primary act was adopted May 18, 1905. Prior to that, primaries were optional under an act passed in 1885.

Law Declared Illegal.

The 1905 law was declared unconstitutional, as were four other attempts to frame a statute satisfactory to the state supreme court.

Not until July 6, 1927, was such a statute enacted. That act, with subsequent amendments, is the one under which primaries are now held. Attorney Tyrrell sat in on the star chamber conferences with Gov. Len Small that brought forth the sixth and successful draft. Another who took part was Werner W. Schroeder, then confidential adviser to the governor.

EXHIBIT OF 400 ORCHIDS OPENS IN LINCOLN PARK

More than 400 orchids are being shown in the second annual orchid exhibition of the park district which opened yesterday in the fernery of Lincoln park conservatory, it was announced by William Blaesing, acting chief horticulturist for the district. A smaller collection is on display near the entrance of the Garfield park conservatory. The exhibits will be open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily and from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Sundays until about the middle of next month, Blaesing said.

Lunch Is a Highlight of Day at Beacon House Kindergarten

Lunch is the high point in the day for the children of the kindergarten class at Beacon House, Presbyterian settlement at 1444 South Ashland avenue.

Cleaning up that last spoonful of porridge is required before the dessert is passed around, but Judy Venema finds it no task at all.

David Van Huis is fascinated by the airplanes in the toy chest—possibly because his older brother is in aviation. Ronnie Venema watches as David demonstrates how the planes fly.

The tiny boarders at the Beacon House kindergarten offer a good example in table manners. From bottom to top are Buddy Mickley, David Van Huis, Joan Scholl, Patty Mickley, Ronnie Debber, and Alex Van Huis.

Wide eyed and serious, Patty Wilson sits watching her playmates in the kindergarten class. More often she is the center of the group.

NEW MUSICIANS SOUGHT BY HULL HOUSE SYMPHONY

Opportunity to play the music of the masters is open to music lovers and students at Hull House, under the direction of an experienced conductor. There are places for players of brass, woodwind and percussion instruments, and in some string sections of the Hull House Symphony orchestra.

The orchestra is made up of students in the Hull House music school, as well as amateur players from all parts of the city. It is under the direction of Arthur Zack, who has been a conductor of the Cincinnati Civic, the New Orleans Symphony, and the Oklahoma State orchestras.

Rehearsals are held each Monday evening at 7:30, and new members will be welcomed until the places are filled. Frequent concerts are planned, and for all members the intention will be to "make music for your own pleasure, and for the pleasure of others."

Postpone Du Page Meeting.

The seventh annual public meeting of the Du Page County Tuberculosis association, originally scheduled for next Wednesday, has been postponed until Jan. 28. The announcement is made by Gertrude K. Berls, R. N., executive secretary of the association.

HARRISON HONOR CADETS GO THRU 3 CEREMONIES

Honored cadets of Harrison High school had to work overtime Thursday morning to receive the medals in the ROTC presentation ceremonies. While most Chicago high school ROTC units go thru the medal ceremony one time only, the Harrison school, with an enrollment of 3,400, is too large for its assembly accommodations. Thus it is necessary that the semiannual award program at Harrison be held three times in order that the entire school might see outstanding cadets recognized.

RABBI-AUTHORS TO BE HONORED AT RECEPTION

The Chicago Rabbinical association will honor its members who recently published books at a reception to be held Wednesday evening at the Congress hotel.

To be honored are Rabbi Israel H. Weisfeld of the West Suburban Jewish center, author of "My Son"; Rabbi S. Felix Mendelsohn, of Temple Beth Israel, 4850 Bernard street, author of "Let Laughter Ring"; and Rabbi Jacob B. Agus of the Agudath Achim congregation, 5029 Kenmore avenue, author of "Modern Philosophies of Judaism."

Special recognition will be given Dr. Meyer Waxman of the Hebrew Theological college and the College of Jewish Studies, upon the completion of the fourth volume of his work on "A History of Jewish Literature."

Dining Is Art Even at This Kindergarten

Parents in the vicinity of Beacon house, Presbyterian settlement at 1444 South Ashland avenue, are finding themselves criticized these days for any laxity in table manners. The critics are none other than their own 3 and 5 year old sons and daughters.

The miniature editions of Emily Post who are dictating "no elbows on table" and "wait until everybody's served" are members of the kindergarten day school at Beacon house. From 2 year old Judy Venema to the sophisticated 5 year olds, the youngsters are learning lessons in table behavior.

The school was started seven years ago, by Mrs. Georgie Carey, matron of Beacon house since 1925. At first the youngsters came for only half a day, but this proved so successful that mothers requested the session take the entire day. Now the youngsters come at 8:30 o'clock each morning, have their lunch and stay until 3:30 in the afternoon.

Share Each Other's Toys.

Not all the lessons are in table manners. When the children arrive each morning, they begin playing with the assortment of toys in the big chests along the wall, or with the vast array of blocks from which a fascinating number of castles can be built. As their play progresses, they learn to share the toys, even give them up completely at times. Here there is little interference from Mrs. Carey. If any individual is selfishly cornering more than his share of toys, his playmates join forces, and the wrong is soon righted.

When the noon hour arrives, Mrs. Carey has only to mention that it's time for lunch, and the children hustle about, clearing the play tables, and putting toys away into their proper cupboards. Soon the playroom is neat and orderly, and Mrs. Carey lays the paper cloth on the long table, and arranges the chairs for lunch.

There is no mad scramble to see who shall be the first seated. The children stand quietly behind their chairs, and say grace with Mrs. Carey. Then they sit down, and each pair of freshly washed hands is kept sedately folded beneath the table until all are served. Then the real business at hand is attacked, with little haste and no confusion.

Plates of food or bowls of soup are cleaned up, with not a vestige remaining. Mrs. Carey has learned the capacities of each of her charges. Judy may get a larger bowl of food than Patty, but only because Judy will finish hers to the last, while Patty might dabble in her plate if given too much food.

Dessert if Plate Is Clean.

Clean plates mean that each child may have dessert. That treat may be only a cookie or a tiny piece of cake, but it is a sweet, and therefore much to be desired. If any absent minded youngster forgets to clean his plate, or slips up by letting his left hand lie on the table, or resting his elbow alongside his plate, he is apt to be reminded of his shortcomings with no little hesitance by his neighbor. Three-year-olds are stern critics.

After lunch, each child washes, and then crawls on a cot or couch for the afternoon nap. This, too, is just part of the routine. It is the

COUNTY DEATH TOLL MOUNTS, SURVEY SHOWS

Midblock Accidents Claim One-Third.

An analysis of circumstances which brought death to 118 children under 19 years old in traffic accidents in Cook county during 1941, revealed that 38 fatalities or nearly one-third occurred in midblock accidents. The figures, compiled from case histories in the coroner's office files by Chicago Motor club safety engineers, showed that the fatalities included 84 boys and 34 girls.

The survey revealed an increase over the 106 fatalities recorded during 1940. Midblock accidents during 1940 accounted for 41 deaths. Altho there was a small decline in midblock accidents during 1941, the largest percentage of fatalities occurred in this manner. Fifteen children were killed crossing between intersections; eleven lost their lives by running suddenly into the street from the sidewalk; eight were killed when they darted from between parked cars into the path of a car, and four were killed while playing in the street.

Few Killed During School Day.

Safety engineers pointed out that only 11 children were killed on a school day during school hours. This was an appreciable decline from 1940 when 32 children were killed during school hours. The decrease was credited partly to the motor club plan called "The Safest Route to School." By this system children are trained to take a route approved by teachers and the patrol boys between their homes and school in order to minimize exposure to traffic hazards.

The danger of crossing at unguarded intersections was revealed in the files which showed 20 deaths occurred at intersections without signals or traffic guards. This was an increase of 9 per cent over 1940. Failure of children to judge the speed of vehicles accurately, hurry and carelessness were cited by the safety engineers as causes of these deaths. Five children, however, were killed at signalized intersections during 1941 compared to a perfect record in 1940 when no fatalities were reported at guarded intersections.

The figures also revealed an increase last year in the number of children killed in automobiles. Nineteen children lost their lives while riding as passengers compared to 13 during 1940. Nine youngsters lost their lives while driving cars compared to three during the previous year.

Southwest Most Hazardous.

As in 1940, the southwest section of Chicago and Cook county was the most dangerous area, with 36 children killed. The west and northwest sides were the second most dangerous sections, with 27 fatalities each. Sixteen children met death on the south side and 12 were killed on the north side.

Of the various age groups, the fatality rate was greatest among the 6 year olds, with 14 children of that age losing their lives. Eleven youngsters 16 years old were killed and ten 3 year olds were fatally injured. There were 22 fatalities in the preschool age—under four years of age; 59 of elementary school age—5 to 13 years old, and 13 high school students —14 to 19.

Fourteen children were killed riding bicycles in the street and three lost their lives while hitching rides on automobiles and trucks. Cars backing out of driveways and alleys, falls from moving cars, and other miscellaneous accidents claimed ten lives.

Urges Safety Habits.

"Children cannot be cautioned too frequently about street dangers," Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out in urging parents, teachers, and all adults who have contect with youngsters, to impress upon them the importance of good safety habits.

Following are four rules complied by the motor club for parents to impress upon their children:

1. Cross only at intersections and if possible where there are traffic signals or policemen.
2. Wait for traffic to clear before crossing.
3. Do not play in the streets.
4. Ride bicycles with extreme care.

50 HOME WELLS RUN DRY AS NEW PLANT IS OPENED

Owners Protest as They Carry Their Water.

"You never miss the water till the well runs dry" is an adage the pertinence of which is being impressed upon some 50 home owners in the unincorporated area north of Melrose Park, between Mannheim road and Scott street.

Beginning last November wells in the community that borders the new Buick airplane engine plant on the north ceased supplying water for domestic needs. Neighbors related their troubles to one another. Some went to the Buick plant to protest that it was a new well being dug at the plant that caused the shortage. State and county health boards were contacted. There has been the appointment of a committee, and a petition for aid even has been sent President Roosevelt. As yet the dilemma remains unsolved.

Housewives Carry Water.

As an emergency measure housewives have carried their buckets to a pump in the vicinity of Grand avenue and Mannheim road. Others have brought water in their cars from Chicago.

Residents of the community, for which a name has not yet been chosen, are former Chicagoans who sought the quiet of pastoral life during the last two years. At the time of their settlement they did not envision a big industrial plant close by. Each householder had his own well and there was no thought that the future might bring on a water shortage. Expenditures that were large in proportion to individual incomes were made for water systems.

"We started to lose our water supply last November," said Frank J. Garr, spokesman for the committee made up of home owners with wells involved. "The trek to the community well began and continued into the subzero weather. Just before the first of the year most of the wells went completely dry. For three days the water came back and then left us again."

Plant Has Two Wells.

John Wealer, supervisor of Leyden township, in which the newly developed drouth area is located, said he had recently received a report of the well water shortage from Dr. E. A. Piszczek of the county health board. The communication stated that two deep wells at the Buick plant were being completed.

It may be possible, it was explained, that when these wells are cased the water may return. The report added, however, that conditions might grow worse and spread to other communities and that lack of water in the area would constitute a potential public health hazard.

Mr. Wealer was asked to review the reports and pass them on to the state defense council and other agencies that might aid in giving the area health and security and an adequate water supply. The state water survey and the state geological survey at Urbana also were sent copies of the report.

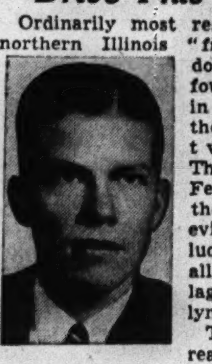
4 LEAF CLOVERS WILL BLOSSOM IN GLEN ELLYN

Symbols of Joint Fund Drive This Week.



Charles B. Weaver.
Moffett Photo.]

Ordinarily most northern Illinois residents of the "frostbite zone" don't find many four leaf clovers in midwinter, but the period between next Thursday and Feb. 1 will find these vegetative evidences of good luck blossoming all over the village of Glen Ellyn.

They won't be real specimens of Trifolium repens or Trifolium hybridum, but they'll unfold just the same—on posters and stickers in hundreds of village windows.

The four leaf clover has been adopted as the permanent symbol of the Glen Ellyn Joint Fund drive. Each petal will represent one of the four organizations coöperating in the drive to open next Thursday night. The four groups taking part in the campaign are the United Charities, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, and YMCA. Each will share in the proceeds of the fund.

Goal Set At $8,060.

Charles B. Weaver, 175 Forest avenue, chairman of the Joint Fund committee, said this week that the goal of $8,060 is the same as that attained last year by the four groups. At that time the Girl Scouts held a separate fund drive.

Other officers of the committee are Wayne Meigs, vice chairman; Freeland Leslie, secretary, and C. W. Whitlock, treasurer.

Charles L. Barr is chairman of the special gifts committee. The publicity and display committee is composed of C. Franklin Brown, F. E. Duggan, and Ben Markland. Mrs. Guy Trulock and Mrs. Charles Coffin, will be in charge of the dinner for fund workers to be held in Guild hall Thursday evening.

Name Area Leaders.

Mr. Weaver also announced the appointment of neighborhood commanders to organize the canvassing effort. They are Mrs. W. D. Dana for the business area; Kenneth Warren for the northwest district, J. Edgar Kelly for the southwest district, W. M. Hall for the southeast district, and Frank C. Bolwahnn Jr. for the northeast district.

Arthur Wanner, village president, this week lauded the Glen Ellyn Joint fund for its value to the community and its service organizations.

"The national emergency demands that all of us use our time to the best advantage," Mr. Wanner said. "The Joint Fund drive takes the place of four separate drives and thereby saves the time of service club officers and considerably reduces the campaign expenses.

Registered Nurses to Meet in Glen Ellyn Tomorrow

A general meeting of registered nurses will be held at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the junior high school in Glen Ellyn. The announcement is made by Mrs. Estelle Campbell, chairman of the Red Cross first aid class for registered nurses in Du Page county.

thing to be done, and no child ever thinks of questioning the procedure.

Time on end, mothers have brought their youngsters for enrollment in the classes, telling Mrs. Carey that "Johnny won't finish his lunch, I can promise you that!" or "I'm sure Betty won't nap with the others!" Mrs. Carey just waits. When lunch time comes, Johnny gobbles his food down to the last chopped vegetable, and at nap time Betty crawls up beside one of her playmates and is soon fast asleep.

Cat Is Mistress.

Undisputed ruler of the kindergarten class is Belle, the Beacon house calico cat. She has her own train, a small tin toy with a miniature locomotive which endlessly circles its tiny track. This the youngsters will wind up tirelessly, and laugh each time as if it were the first, to see Belle cavort over and around the train, trying to stop it with a lusty thwack of her paw.

Knowing she has such an appreciative audience, Belle will perform for hours at a time. Or she will chase balls and wooden beads from one end of the long linoleum floor to the other, skidding occasionally just to add variety to the routine. When nap time arrives, Belle is still a part of the scene. With her only display of partiality, she jumps up alongside of Judy and curls up to go to sleep.

Early orders for tables include one from the Riders of the Rambling Roads, of Chesterton, Ind. Another came from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walker, of White Pigeon, Mich. Individual reservations have been received from Wisconsin and Iowa, and from as far west as Wyoming.

Program Follows Dinner.

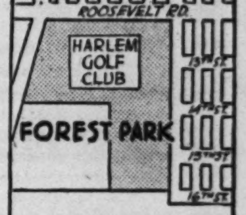
U. S. PLANT SITE ONCE ECHOED TO HORSES' HOOFS

Harlem Race Track Widely Known Generation Ago.



Announcement that the United States navy had taken title to 80 acres of the 118 acre Harlem golf course property for the establishment of a 10 million dollar torpedo plant revives memories of a period Harlem race track occupying the site was known far and wide for its exciting and colorful sporting activities.

The tract along Roosevelt road within the village limits of Forest Park took its name from the previous name of the suburb, Harlem. Originally, the farm acres on the prairie belonged to the pioneer Quill family. When John B. Condon bought the acreage for establishing the race course, the Quills retained the west portion for their home and hay field.

The race track was opened just after the Columbian exposition on May 29, 1894, and after 11 years of popularity, during which crowds were attracted from all parts of the country, was closed in 1905.

At the time of the closing the automobile was fast coming into vogue, and for a year or two auto races in which Barney Oldfield participated were held on the dirt track.

Became Golf Course.

With racing days over, the grounds were converted to golfing purposes, first with a nine hole course inside the old steeplechase track, and for the last 20 years into an 18 hole golf course.

The spacious wooden grandstand and clubhouse, with its restaurant and balcony for a band, was burned shortly after the track's opening, but was replaced within two weeks. A second fire on an Easter morning burned the barns. The rebuilt grandstand was torn down several years ago.

Reminiscent data concerning the famous track was supplied by Henry J. Mohr, pioneer coal dealer in Forest Park and for five terms president of the village, and by Police Chief Fred Licht and Fire Chief John Pries. Mr. Licht and Mr. Pries speak from boyhood memories, which are supplemented with two large photographs of the track in its heyday that hang on the firehouse halls.

The photographs are treasured not only because the present generation has but a vague impression of the glamour associated with the grassy open field around the turn of the century, but because historical data of the horse racing days in the area seems difficult to obtain.

Ran Special Trains.

Mr. Mohr, who was in the coal business 42 years ago and who, with his sons, continues in the same location at Maple and Harrison streets, recalls the special Chicago trains that passed his window to and from the race track. Harlém was chosen because of its topography and excellent transportation facilities. Besides the B. & O. and the Illinois Central railroads, there was the forerunner of the West Towns railway in the Cicero and Proviso street car, and the Lake street elevated.

"The grounds were beautifully landscaped," said Mr. Mohr, "and the track and its buildings were much finer than its rival at Hawthorne. Despite this rivalry, Mr. Condon showed his sportsmanship when the Hawthorne track burned by extending use of the Harlem track for Hawthorne's interrupted racing schedule."

"Cyclone" Billy Myers of Streator, Ill., who fought 100 rounds in the prize ring, is recalled as having been track superintendent.

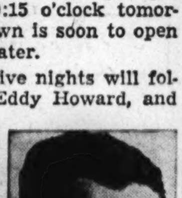
CHICAGO BANDS IN SPOTLIGHT ON W-G-N THIS WEEK

Brown, Jarrett, Howard, Teagarden Slated.

Spotlight Bands, W-G-N-Mutual's week night parade of leading dance orchestras, will be aired from Chicago for the first time this week. For the first four weekdays, starting tomorrow, Spotlight bands will be aired from the Civic theater in the opera house. Les Brown and his orchestra, who have just closed an engagement at the Blackhawk restaurant during which he was heard on W-G-N, heads the Spotlight Band parade at 9:15 o'clock tomorrow evening. Brown is soon to open at the Chicago theater.

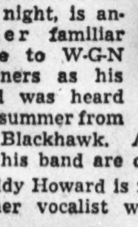
Les Brown.

Then, on successive nights will follow Art Jarrett; Eddy Howard, and Jack Teagarden. Griff Williams and his orchestra, long Chicago favorites, will be heard on Friday evening. Jarrett, who will be heard on Tuesday night, is another familiar name to W-G-N listeners as his band was heard last summer from the Blackhawk. At present Jarrett and his band are on a tour.



Art Jarrett.

Eddy Howard is remembered as the former vocalist with Dick Jurgens and has been heard on W-G-N broadcasting rom the Aragon. Teagarden, a swing veteran, will visit Chicago for the one night appearance on the Spotlight show. His band is currently touring the midwest. "Spotlight Bands" cover the country presenting the best recording orchestras every Monday thru Friday.



Eddy Howard.

On Saturdays the program puts the spotlight on the band that has sold the most recordings of any one disc during the week in a special half hour show from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m.

A limited number of tickets will be available for the Civic theater broadcasts. Requests should be addressed by letter or phone to the W-G-N ticket department.

Jack Teagarden.

MISS BERGNER GUEST ON KEEP 'EM ROLLING!

Elizabeth Bergner, stage and screen star, will make a guest appearance on W-G-N and Mutual at 9:30 p. m. tomorrow during the "Keep 'Em Rolling" broadcast. Miss Bergner will star in "Land of the Lemon Drop," a play written for radio by Bernard C. Schoenfeld, author of the Broadway success, "Johnny Appleseed."

On the program, too, will be Jean Sablon, French singer of romantic ballads. Sablon will sing two war compositions: "My Sister and I" and "The Last Time I Saw Paris." Morton Gould's orchestra will provide the musical accompaniment for the dramatic portion of the show and for Sablon's singing.

'Case of Squared Circle' Up to Bulldog Drummond

"The Case of the Squared Circle," adventure story of the prize ring, will be dramatized on the Bulldog Drummond program on W-G-N and the Mutual network from 5:30 to 6 tonight. George Coulouris, movie and stage star who takes the title rôle this Sunday will have a mysterious death case on his hands.

AMERICA'S FIGHT FOR HEALTH IS THEME ON W-G-N

Keith Morgan Will Be Speaker.

The story of the United States' fight against disease and physical suffering will be the theme of the "Americans at the Ramparts" program on W-G-N and the Mutual network from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Thursday. Usually the "Americans at the Ramparts" program salutes our country's military establishment, but Thursday's tribute will be paid to the campaign against infantile paralysis—one of America's health ramparts.

Key officials of the campaign against infantile paralysis will speak on Thursday's program. Keith Morgan, national chairman of the committee raising fund for the national infantile paralysis foundation, will speak from New York. Herbert J. Lorber, Cook county chief of the drive, will speak from the W-G-N studios.

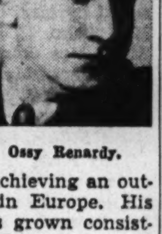
Producer Blair Walliser is assembling a cast of stage and screen favorites for the comedy and variety to be woven into the show.

Morton Downey, now appearing at the Chicago's Chez Paree, will sing. Arthur Treacher, the serious butler of the movies who is now starring in "Panama Hattie" at the Erlanger theater, will take over the comedy department. James Dunn, also from the "Panama Hattie" cast, will be master of ceremonies.

Musical settings will be provided by Bob Trendler and the W-G-N dance orchestra.

OSSY RENARDY GUEST ON MUSIC THAT ENDURES

Ossy Renardy, 21 year old Vienesse violinist, will be the guest artist on W-G-N and Mutual's program, "Music That Endures" from 8:30 to 9 p. m. tomorrow. Renardy will appear with the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus under the direction of Henry Weber.



Ossy Renardy.

Renardy made his American debut two and a half years ago after achieving an outstanding reputation in Europe. His American success has grown consistently. At the end of January he will play at the President's birthday ball in New York.

Tomorrow Renardy will play the last movement of Mendelssohn's E Minor Concerto and the "Romanza Andaluza" by Sarasate.

HONDURAS TO BE SALUTED NEXT ON AMERICAS SPEAK

The Republic of Honduras will be saluted on the Americas Speak program over W-G-N and the Mutual network today. The program will be heard on W59C, W-G-N's frequency modulated station, and the Mutual network from 2 to 2:30 p. m., and will be rebroadcast over W-G-N at 3:30 p. m. [CST].

The first 15 minutes will originate in the studios of W-G-N and the final portion will be broadcast direct from Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras.

The Chicago portion of the broadcast will feature a dramatization of the discovery of Honduras by Christopher Columbus and its conquest by Cristobal de Olid. Vincent Pelletier and Bret Morrison will head the dramatic cast.

From Honduras, the program will feature several brief interviews and music which will give the radio audience an interesting picture of the life, culture, and customs of that country.

Paul Lukas Is Guest on Double or Nothing

Paul Lukas, currently appearing in "Watch on the Rhine," will head the list of guests on the "Double or Nothing" program over W-G-N and the Mutual network at 5 p. m. today. Mr. Shea will be introduced by Philip Maxwell, of THE TRIBUNE'S editorial staff.

The Medill mixed chorus, directed by Miss Mila Vodicka, will sing two numbers, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," arranged by Noble Cain, and "Send Forth Thy Light."

Two more students will be added to the honor roll, and one, Geraldine Turner, senior at Medill, will be interviewed by Maxwell. He will tell the accomplishments of the other, Joe A. Collings, 16 year old senior of West Lafayette, Ind.

OAK PARK HOME GIVEN THORO JOB OF REMODELING

Couple Lets Living Room Wait Until Last.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Contrary to the procedure many people would have followed, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist of 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park, left the finishing of their living room and dining room until the last when remodeling their 70 year old house.

These two rooms were only completed recently. But they felt that the large library bay which adjoins the dining room and which they fitted out beautifully with built-in shelves and cases, weather tight windows, and chairs, radio, and couch could be made to meet their needs until time came when they could turn their attention to living room and dining room.

Mrs. Bornquist preferred a blue kitchen, but every one advised against it since the room had a north exposure. In the end it emerged according to her preference. The ceiling is a delft blue, the walls a lighter shade of blue blended with a phantom gray.

Radiator Is Horizontal.

"We mixed our own colors, and mixed and mixed," Mrs. Bornquist pointed out. It took us days to experiment and get the colors we really wanted."

A new radiator heating system was installed, and when it came to installing a radiator in the kitchen there seemed no wall space for it. So Mr. Bornquist decided to have it placed horizontally instead of vertically and at right angles to the outside wall. Then he built a shelf over it and small shelves down one end, covered them with blue linoleum of the same shade as the working surfaces of kitchen and fastened chrome towel racks parallel with the top shelf. Now this ingenious unit not only provides heat but serves as a swanky little breakfast counter.

Mr. Bornquist had wanted a circular breakfast nook but there was no room for this so he built a semi-circular table, placed it against a wall, and included as part of its permanent equipment, swing out chairs. The knobs on the chairs are Mrs. Bornquist's initials, and the wall overhead is papered, a fetching patterned paper with a yellow background.

Uses Salvaged Window.

Equipment is all new and streamlined and over the sink there's a smart window which looks for all the world like one of the new horizontal sliding windows. It happens to be merely a window which Mr. Bornquist salvaged from an old garage. He took the upper part of it and installed it horizontally instead of vertically.

Adjacent to this kitchen is a sizable room which for the present is used for storage purposes. Some day it will be a modern bedroom or den. Its ultimate rôle in life is still unsettled.

The bathroom, of course, was completely transformed. The "Queen Anne bath tub," as the Bornquists called their old tub on legs, disappeared and a new built-in model appeared, with overhead shower and curtains. The wainscot is a pale yellow, the walls and ceiling a deep blue. The linoleum on the floor is coral shade and matches the small fish which are glimpsed in the wall paper pattern.

Plywood on Doors.

The doors thruout the whole house have been covered with plywood and painted white. On the second floor new hardwood floors were laid over the soft wood floors. Downstairs the hardwood floors are to be stained a dark shade shortly. The woodwork thruout is also white like the doors.

If you have wondered what to do with a narrow, boxed-in stairway to give it a slightly different and lively mien, there's an idea for you in what the Bornquists did.

The original stairhall was open at the top but they closed this in and left a small hallway at the head of the stairs from which opens the master bedroom and the guestroom. They then painted the stairwalls light and ran a band of deep colored paint a foot and a half wide down each wall. They use this band as a guest book and give each guest a white crayon to write on the band the name and date of the visit.

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr.

Mrs. Ida B. W. Smith.

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr of Union Theological seminary, New York City, will speak at the 8 o'clock meeting of the Chicago Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, tonight on the subject, "The Wheat and the Tares." Clifford W. Barnes, founder and president of the club, will preside.

Dr. Neibuhr's book, "The Nature of the Destiny of Man," selected as the religious book of the year in 1941, grew out of an address he made at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, during that city's first air raid.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Evanston, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, will speak at the 7 o'clock meeting.

Music will be provided by the club's choir and the visiting chapel choir of Elmhurst college.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Jan. 19.

As stated before, this is the time to make the plan for a war garden, so called because under the present emergency every effort must be made to grow more produce to aid defense. Organize your neighborhood, arrange to have as large a garden as can be well taken care of. Make a list of the seeds needed and order them. It is imperative that the order be sent to the seedsman as early as possible for some stocks are very low and the demand will be great.

Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Many fruit trees are grossly neglected with the result that they never produce the crop of which they are capable. Now is the time to get these trees in proper condition, but if in doubt as to how to go about it, it is wise to engage the services of an experienced man who will also take care of spraying operations at the proper time. Pruning is beneficial when properly done but it may be injurious if undertaken by the inexperienced.

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Do you know that many kinds of shrubs can be easily propagated from dormant wood of the previous season's growth? Examples are: Cornus, spirea van houttei, snowberry, weigelia, privet, forsythia, hydrangea paniculata, kerria japonica, ninebark, lonicera or honeysuckle. Make the cuttings 6 to 8 inches long and bury in a sandy or well drained spot during the winter and by spring each cutting will form a callus and be ready to line out for rooting in the garden.

Thursday, Jan. 22.

Home gardeners who have the space should certainly investigate the possibilities of the hotbed for it is one of the finest accessories to the garden that can be installed. Now is the time to build one altho knocked down frames, ready to install, are available and at a reasonable price. Ready glazed sash is also available.

Friday, Jan. 23.

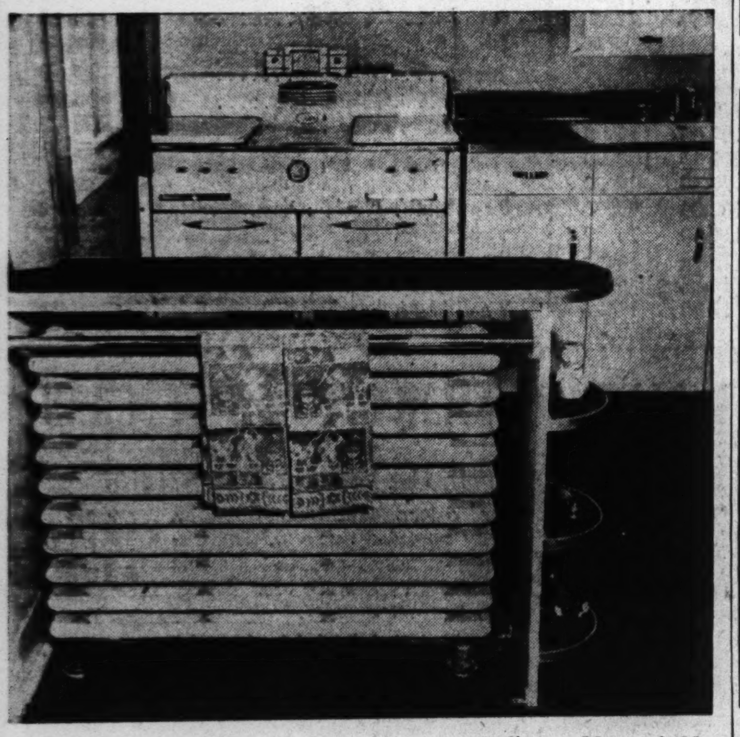
Frequently the asparagus fern or asparagus sprengeri will be rejuvenated if it it cut down and repotted in spring. Both kinds require a fairly rich soil and they are excellent house plants.

One of the finest house plants for the person who will give them proper care is the beautiful Norfolk Island pine. It costs more than many other kinds but for the discriminating gardener it is a choice plant. It is an evergreen from Australia.

Saturday, Jan. 24.

How about the begonia that rots off near the surface of the soil? This is caused from too much water. Place the plant in the window where it will receive more light and be more careful not to overwater. Worms in the soil do little damage beyond stopping up the drainage hole, causing the soil to become saturated with possible subsequent injury from over watering.

Breakfast Bar Over Radiator



Rather than sacrifice kitchen space to a radiator, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist utilized this method in the modernization of their home at 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park. Now the top serves as a breakfast bar, while towel racks extend underneath.

CADETS AT LANE JOIN TO APPLAUD MEDAL WINNERS

Scene Is Duplicated in 27 Schools.

BY ARTHUR MIDDLETON.

Nearly 1,200 ROTC cadets, members of the Lane Techincal High school unit, marched into the school gymnasium last week where they watched 41 fellow cadets honored for outstanding work in their military training classes during the semester.

It is their day. These 41 young men have put in five months of conscientious work to earn medals which are to be presented them by the war department, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Daughters of the American Revolution, and the American Legion.

Before the assembly begins, the ROTC room in the basement of the high school is a busy place. Here the officers and cadets are polishing shoes, buttons, and Sam Browne belts. Service caps are being set at a jaunty but correct angle on slickly combed heads. Two young men, members of the color guard, rub cloths over the already gleaming surfaces of their rifles.

Last Minute Instructions.

Technical Sergt. Gilman R. Carle, military instructor of this, the largest unit in the city, calls Col. Henry Sikora and Capt. Thomas Zohogianes into his office for last minute instructions. This is to be Col. Sikora's last honor assembly. He will be graduated in a few weeks and today will turn over his duties as cadet commander of the unit to Capt. Zohogianes.

Upstairs in the gymnasium other cadets are filing in and taking their seats. The ROTC band strikes up a stirring march as the color guard comes up the ramp and into the gym. The guard comes to a halt before the speakers' table and faces the audience of cadets. Twelve hundred and thirty-eight cadets snap to attention as Col. Sikora announces he will lead them in the pledge to the flag. More than 1,200 voices boom out: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States . . ."

The flag ceremony completed, the color guard posts the flags before the speaker's table. Capt. John Schroeder, the regimental adjutant, steps to the public address microphone to introduce the first speaker: C. E. Lang, principal of Lane High school. His popularity with the students is attested to by the roaring welcome that rises from the stands.

Praise from Principal.

"I can always tell an ROTC man even when he is without his uniform," Principal Lang tells the cadets. "They are a notch straighter, they have learned to stand on their two feet and talk straight out, they have learned to take and give orders."

There are more words of praise for the unit and then he asks the cadets to assist him in gathering the names of all former Lane students who are serving with the nation's armed forces. These names are to be inscribed on a roll of honor to hang in the Lane halls.

Principal Lang then introduces Capt. N. W. Oppenheim, adjutant to Col. W. F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics in the Chicago area, who is to award the ROTC department medals. The first medal, for efficiency as an officer, goes to Capt. Zohogianes. The applause is loud for the cadet captain and for the other cadets who follow him to receive their medals. In the audience of cadets there is a determination to be a medal winner next semester.

Growth of ROTC.

Twenty-four cadets stride out on the gymnasium floor as their names are called by the next speaker who is to present the gold and silver medals awarded semi-annually to the city's outstanding cadets by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and its editor and publisher, Col. Robert R. McCormick. The cadets are told that from a small unit born during the last World war thru the efforts of Col. McCormick, Chicago's high school ROTC has grown to the largest unit in the nation with more than 10,000 cadets enrolled.

Before the next speaker is introduced, Principal Lang calls upon the band for a number. "It is called 'Blaze Away,'" says the principal, and adds, "You know, what we are going to do to the Japs." Cheers and whistles for this statement drown out the first bars of the band selection.

Final presentations are then made by Mrs. George Harbert on behalf of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and by Sergt. Carle who awards the medals donated by the American Legion. The ceremony closes as all rise to their feet and sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Shouts of congratulations are hurled back and forth by the cadets as they examine each other's trophies. And in 26 other high schools where the presentation scene has been duplicated during the last two weeks, thousands of other cadets, like those at Lane, look forward with determination to be among the winners next May.

Lane Tech Holds a Medals Assembly to Honor Best of ROTC Cadets

THE FINAL POLISH

READY FOR INSPECTION

Shoes and buttons must shine when cadets of Lane Tech's ROTC unit prepare for their great moment—the medal presentation assembly in the huge Lane gymnasium. Forty-one students received awards Wednesday afternoon in the largest of Chicago's 28 high school ROTC units. Twenty-four of the awards were Tribune medals. In the busy trio at the left are, left to right, Maj. Hugh Christian, Capt. William Felgenhauer, Corp. Matt Moe. Polishing done, the Lane cadets are now ready for inspection. Technical Sergt. G. R. Carle (right) gives final instructions to Lieut. Col. Henry Sikora (left) and Capt. Thomas Zohogianes.

THE FIRST MEDAL

Recalls Quiet Morning Japs Struck Hawaii

BY GLADYS PRIDDY.

On the morning of last Dec. 7, the date that will go down in history as "Pearl Harbor," Mrs. Herbert W. Tomlinson, who left Glencoe six months ago to go to Honolulu, was up early. Her Japanese cleaning woman, Toma, hadn't come to do the ironing, and Mrs. Tomlinson wanted to get a pair of white duck trousers pressed in time for her son, David, 13, to wear to Sunday school. Afterward, she intended to make waffles for David and his brother, Philip, 10, and sister Mary, 8.

It was a peaceful Sunday morning, and everything was comfortable in the furnished house the Tomlinsons had rented in Honolulu while Mr. Tomlinson, an architect, was fulfilling an assignment in defense work on the islands. He is with the Pacific Island Naval Air Base contractors.

That is the beginning of the story which led up to the Tomlinsons' Christmas day notice that they would be evacuated if they'd be ready in two hours, [a feat they accomplished with the coöperation of all the neighbors] and to the family arrival here. They are staying at the home of Mrs. Tomlinson's mother, Mrs. Joseph F. Shippen, 464 South avenue, Glencoe, and the children are back in classes

SWEDISH GROUP GIVING CHORAL FETE MARCH 1

Membership of 550 Promotes Culture.

Members of the Svithiod Singing club, Swedish choral society, are preparing to celebrate the group's 60th anniversary, to be climaxed on March 1 with a concert in the Civic theater.

Knute Hansen.

The club's membership, approximately 550, represents all parts of Chicago and many of the suburbs. Knute Hansen directs the 60 voice male chorus which will give the concert.

In March, 1882, a group of Chicago residents, all of them of Swedish descent, banded together to form an organization for the perpetuation and furtherance of male chorus singing of all types, but Swedish in particular.

Buy Wrightwood Avenue Site.

Less than 15 years after its inception the club had gained such renown that men not interested in singing sought to join. In 1896 the organization purchased the property upon which the present headquarters stand at 624 Wrightwood avenue.

With the building of the clubhouse, a social program was instituted, and the club's activities ceased to be of a purely musical nature. Dances are held in the club's modern ballroom and Scandinavian fish dinners are presented for the enjoyment of members and their guests.

Business men take advantage of the clubhouse's quiet portals, and many a deal is closed over the small white cloth covered tables in the dining room. But, generally, business, politics, and religion are not among the subjects discussed. The organization's officers and members seek to maintain the purpose for which the club was formed—the furtherance of culture.

Take Concert Tours.

Until 1928 the club sponsored biennial Scandinavian concert tours for the male chorus. In 1928 the group presented concerts in more than 30 towns and villages, the proceeds from each presentation going to the charities of the locale in which the concert was given.

The society is among leading Chicago clubs in the sale of defense bonds. Members have taken active parts in numerous charity and patriotic drives within the last two years.

Officers, many of whom are sons and grandsons of the founders of the club, include: Grover A. Peterson, 6444 North Rockwell street, president; Swen G. Webner, 1740 North Normandy avenue, vice president; Gustaf Rickan, 4615 North Paulina street, recording secretary; John A. Linn, 3419 North Clark street, treasurer, and Ragnar Gustafson, 3157 Hudson avenue, steward.

Directors of Society.

Officers of the Ladies' auxiliary include: Mrs. Franklin C. E. Lundquist, 2724 Winnemac avenue; Mrs. Russell M. Edgar, 5243 North Hoyne avenue; Mrs. Paul Rosewall, 421 Melrose street; Mrs. Eric Ramsey, 6513 North Mozart street; Mrs. William M. Gwynn, 3508 Janssen avenue, and Mrs. Clarence Olson, 1719 Glenlake avenue.

Among the honorary members are: United States Senator Wayland Brooks, Gov. Green, Lieut. Gov. Hugh W. Cross, State Senator Arnold P. Benson, Mayor Kelly, and Gustav Oldenburg, Swedish royal consul in Chicago.

Presbyterian Men to Give Annual Musical Comedy

Men's Glee club of Edgewater Presbyterian church, 1020 Bryn Mawr avenue, will present its 12th annual musical comedy, "The Dictator's Dilemma," at 8:15 o'clock Friday and Saturday evenings in the Sullivan High school auditorium, 6631 Bosworth avenue. The program, written by members of the club, will include numbers supported by the chorus and dance ensembles. Several feminine rôles will be taken by members of the club.

St. George Mothers' Club to Hear Talks Tomorrow

St. George High school Mothers' club will meet tomorrow afternoon in the library of the school at 350 Sherman avenue, Evanston. Mrs. Thomas E. Small and Mrs. Maurice Cooney will present the program. Mrs. Small will talk on the Indian missions in North Dakota, and Mrs. Cooney will give musical readings. There will be tea and a social hour.

'SHARE YOUR CAR' PLAN ATTRACTS 800 MOTORISTS

One of Many Defense Aids on North Side.

BY ANTON REMENIH.

One of the most active civilian defense areas on the north side is the Sheridan Center-East Lake View district which last week incorporated its Victory clubs, a fast growing "share your car" program with more than 800 registered car owners already participating.

Operation of the program is explained by Frank Sweeney, 543 Addison street, president of the Victory council. Any automobile owner may join the club. Registration blanks may be obtained from headquarters at 3810 Broadway.

Cuts Use of Cars.

On the blank, owners write name, address, size of car, time of departure in the morning, destination, and hour of return. Volunteer workers check registrations, suggest logical combinations, and notify owners living in the same neighborhood with similar work destinations. One owner uses his auto one week, others use theirs on successive weeks. In this way, Sweeney explained, not only will each owner's tires be used only one-fourth or one-fifth as much, but the number of accidents will be reduced and congested traffic conditions ameliorated. Victory club stickers are furnished free by the organization.

"The Victory clubs aren't limited to sharing cars, however," Sweeney said. "You can belong to it if you share any object that contains vital defense material. For instance, when objects now in common use in households become scarce, we'd like to organize household Victory clubs among women who would share equipment."

Group's Purpose Explained.

The complete purpose of the organization according to its charter is to "organize groups of automobile owners who will coöperate in pooling the use of cars to conserve materials for national defense; to conduct drives thru these groups; to collect materials needed in national defense; to promote war efforts among civilians; to curtail waste; to engender and develop morale."

Manford M. Haskell, 749 Brompton place is secretary-treasurer.

To prevent needless duplication of efforts a Victory council of fraternal religious, business, and social groups in the Lake View area was created. This area, covering 218 blocks, extends from Diversey avenue on the south to Montrose avenue on the north and from Lake Shore drive on the east to Sheffield avenue on the west.

Varied Groups Represented.

Two members from each of the following groups have been appointed to the council: The Lake View and Aero Wing posts of the American Legion, the Sheridan Center Business Men's association, the Lake View lodge of B'nai B'rith, the Anshe Emet and Temple Sholom Men's clubs, Our Lady of Mount Carmel Holy Name society, the Sheridan Bowling league, the 5th and 6th district defense councils, a Winfield sanitarium group, and the local Red Cross chapter.

More than 250 volunteer workers have registered with the organization, of whom more than 200 handled the recent Red Cross war relief fund drive in a house to house canvass. Sixty-five block organizers are ready for assignment to civilian defense duties.

In Glencoe groundwork for a complete program of coöperation with national plans for civilian preparedness was laid recently by local leaders directed by George F. Brown, village civilian defense coördinator.

Village Hall Is Headquarters.

Headquarters for the program is the village hall. When registration of all citizens is complete seven precinct captains and 163 block wardens will be appointed. O. E. Zehr, head of men's activities, will direct them. Precinct lines will follow established political divisions.

A squad of volunteer firemen, the first group to number 25, will be organized by Fire Chief Edward Marshall. William Preston is in charge of enrollment of this group.

A volunteer corps of emergency police selected from the American Legion will be led by William Helke, chief of police. Walter L. Backer, commander of the Winnetka post, is organizing a preliminary group of 25 for this work. Special arm band insignia will be supplied all defense volunteers.

Women's part in defense work is being directed by Mrs. Alfred H. Taylor. Twenty-five Glencoe women's groups attended a recent organization meeting. Assisting Mrs. Taylor and the committees headed by each are Mrs. Otto Schmidt, enrollment; Mrs. Milton Grauer, liaison with Fort Sheridan and Great Lakes Naval Training station; Mrs. Arthur Olson, Red Cross liaison, and Mrs. Keith Capron, information.

Pass Defense Ordinance.

A special defense ordinance, confirming authority of local civilian defense council representatives and prescribing penalties for failure to obey regulations issued by the council, was passed recently at the request of George Young, village manager.

An air raid siren was purchased recently and is being installed in the village hall. Coördinator Brown said that air raid practice and blackouts will begin after precinct and block organization is completed.

Civilian defense activities for Evanston and the North Shore were accelerated last week with the announcement of a series of seven lectur-discussion meetings sponsored by the Evanston defense council and Northwestern university to be held in Cahn auditorium, Scott hall.

The first meeting, open to the public without charge, will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening. Ralph D. Shanesy, chairman of the Evanston defense council, will speak on "Evanston Organizes for Civilian Defense." Barnet Hodes, executive vice chairman of the Chicago commission on national defense and member of President Roosevelt's civilian defense committee, will speak on "The Chicago Program for Civilian Defense."

The audience will be invited to question speakers following the lectures. Parker Wheatley, radio director of Northwestern university, will be chairman of the discussion groups.

Preparing for Symphony Concert

Included in the program of the Rogers Park Symphony orchestra's first concert of its second season next Sunday evening at the Loyola Community theater, 1320 Loyola avenue, will be "Square Dance," written by the conductor, Sam Raphling. This number won a recent nationwide composition contest. Two other numbers by Raphling, "Curtain Raiser" and "Indian Summer" also will be played. In this group studying the score, left to right, are H. Arnold Cohen, cellist; Alfred Kuhlin, trumpeter; Jeanette Dietrich, program chairman, and Mr. Raphling. All proceeds from the concert will be turned over to service organizations.

OLD ST. JOSEPH'S TO MARK 97TH YEAR AT PARTY

Parish, Founded in '45, Plans Fete Tuesday.

Members of Old St. Joseph's, 1107 Orleans street, will observe another anniversary of the parish—the 97th—at a card party and dance at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Germania club, Clark street and Germania place. The Rev. Paul Schlimm, pastor of the church, has announced the traditional grand march as one of the features.

The Rev. Paul Schlimm.

Father Schlimm established the anniversary celebrations as parish homecomings when he became pastor at Old St. Joseph's five years ago. The oldest parishioners, chosen from former as well as present church rolls, always lead the march.

This year the grand march leaders will include: Amelia Kruegl, William Loeffel, Louis and Magdalen Schmal, Frances Hahn, Kate Mueller, Mary Schniffeneder, John Werdell, Catherine Ludes, Elizabeth Glunz, John Tekip Sr., Mary Dieden, George Helman, George Schmidt, Margaret Elliott, Anna Word, Andrew Levinski, William Klein, Gus Renker, John Pannoch, John Klein, Nicholas Bedessen, Joseph Schulte, and Joseph Klein.

Old St. Joseph's has served four generations of Chicagoans since its organization in 1845. Its first home, a little frame structure, was put up on the farm of Peter Annen in 1846. Its exact site is now the intersection of Chicago and Wabash avenues. Thirty families were in that pioneer parish.

STEINWAY

SAILS WITH THE BOYS IN BLUE

☆ The USS Houston, the navy cruiser from which President Roosevelt reviewed the Fleet, is equipped with a Steinway piano. It is a fitting tribute that the world's finest fleet should be furnished with the world's finest piano. But not surprising . . . inasmuch as the Steinway is the musical symbol of excellence in the American home as well as the American concert stage. It has always been built in America by successive generations of the same American family. The Steinway you place in your home today will stand to serve many future generations of your own American family . . . and by that very token, it becomes the least expensive piano to own.

Steinways are easy to own

You can have your choice of a Steinway Grand, Vertical or Spinet (shown) delivered to your home for just a very small down payment, and budget the balance in very convenient terms. Liberal allowance on your old piano in trade. Once you have a Steinway, you need never buy another piano.

SPRING PRIMARY FALLS ON LATEST POSSIBLE DATE

Second Tuesday in April Will Be 14th.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Political candidates will have less time than usual this year between the April primary and the November election in which to wage their campaigns for office. This was pointed out last week by John F. Tyrrell, vice chairman of the Republican state central committee, an attorney who has become known as an election law expert.

The 1942 primary will take place April 14, latest possible date under the state primary law formula which specifies that the primary shall be held on the second Tuesday in April in even numbered years.

Not since the state primary was switched from September to April in 1917 has it been held so late as April 14. This late a primary will not occur again until 1964, unless the law is changed meanwhile.

Election Is Early.

The election this year will be held on Nov. 3. This is only one day beyond the earliest possible date for a general election, which under the state election law must be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in even numbered years. There has been no Nov. 2 election since 1930, and there will not be another until 1952.

This year's loss of campaigning time is not likely to cause great consternation, Tyrrell indicated, inasmuch as criticism has frequently been raised that the April primary leaves too great an interval between the nomination and the election of candidates.

Candidates Object to Early Date.

The candidates themselves dislike the early primary, principally because it exposes them all summer long to the interminable line of solicitors for program advertising, political picnics, organization doings and other schemes for separating the vote seeking politician from his campaign cash.

The September primary was free from this objection. However, it had the disadvantage that vote contests arising in the primary could not in all cases be disposed of in time for the election. The time interval was too short for the ponderous machinery of the law to function.

Occasionally it is suggested that a return be made to the September primary, but thus far such proposals have found insufficient support. The late primary is favored by many downstaters because the spring primary comes at a time when the farmer is busy in the fields and so has scant time to vote or to listen to the oratory of prospective nominees. Proponents of the April primary point out that it includes the election of delegates to the national party conventions, held in June or July.

Sought Primary in June.

An effort was made this year to postpone the primary to June 1, and to hold it in conjunction with Supreme court judicial elections on that date in five of the seven judicial districts in the state. This would have saved expense.

Both the Cook county board and the Chicago city council passed resolutions asking Gov. Green to move for the change. The governor, however, omitted the subject from his call for the first special session of the legislature, and so it could not come up for consideration.

Illinois has functioned under the primary system since the first compulsory primary act was adopted May 18, 1905. Prior to that, primaries were optional under an act passed in 1885.

The 1905 law was declared unconstitutional, as were four other attempts to frame a statute satisfactory to the state supreme court.

Not until July 6, 1927, was such a statute enacted.

MEMBERS OF STANTON GENTS RESOLVE TO BE MODELS OF BEHAVIOR

After the fashion of adult organizations, the Stanton Gents club elected officers at the beginning of the new year. The Gents, boys of 14 to 16, living in the neighborhood of Stanton park at Vine and Evergreen streets, also copied their elders by committing themselves to a resolution. It read:

"We, the members of the Stanton Gents, will do our best to help the park in any way by setting a good example for the younger children, and not to swear, smoke, etc., in the building. To John Merlo in the future we will show our appreciation for his help."

John Merlo, director of Stanton park at the time the Gents were organized in September, was transferred to Seward park last week. However, the Gents, under the sponsorship of the park district, intend to carry on the program he helped them establish. Their new leaders are: Carlino Flosi, president; Edward Hanhardt, vice president; Carmello Fortuna, secretary, and Tony Gagliano, treasurer. Jasper Montalbano and Joseph Mufale are listed by the Gents as sergeants at arms. Andrew Sassolino is recorded as porter. There are 25 Gents.

RECALLS QUIET MORNING JAPS STRUCK HAWAII

Glencoe Woman Returns Home with Children.

Mrs. Tomlinson says, "I didn't expect we'd be evacuated because we were in the last classification—defense family. I was prepared to stay in Hawaii for the winter, at least. Our landlady came to see us, and we thought she was going to raise the rent because there is a great housing shortage in Honolulu, of course. But she came to lower it instead. She said she was glad to have a family she could depend on. Christmas morning she brought us a fruit cake, and I assured her we'd be staying. She'd scarcely gone when our call came."

Trunks Had Been Aired.

Fortunately, Mrs. Tomlinson had enough of a hunch to air out two trunks the day before—that meant getting rid of the lizards and various other pests that get into things in the islands. The gasoline ration had been cut to ten gallons a month, but friends came in and offered their cars. No trucks would take the luggage to the boat on Christmas, but a friend donated a station wagon.

Good-bys were said almost at bayonet point. No one but a passenger or crew member was allowed to board the boat. The navy worked quickly and quietly. Prospective evacuees were informed by phone—some knew of their departure a little before the Tomlinsons did, but no news was released early enough for it to be generally reported. The returning families paid their transportation. The minimum was $125 apiece.

The Tomlinsons, like other Honolulu residents, were curious rather than alarmed when the Japanese attack first began at Pearl Harbor eight miles away. There was the sound of planes, of course, but maneuvers were common over the islands. Mrs. Tomlinson first thought something was wrong when the Hawaiian firemen in the station across the street from her spoke sharply to a child and ordered him off the street. The firemen were notedly good natured and especially kind to youngsters. Soon afterward, the firemen rode out of their station with no warning.

News Soon Spread.

But it wasn't long until the radio broadcasts came on. The first orders were for all service men to report at their posts. Cars are scarce in the islands, Mrs. Tomlinson says, so every one hangs onto any kind of a vehicle he has. Soon sailors, soldiers, and marines were riding by aboard about every kind of museum piece that would go. All civilians were ordered off the streets and highways and every one warned not to use his telephone.

Mrs. Tomlinson had attended a parent-teacher association meeting a short while before and had heard the head of the major disaster councils give instructions. She had felt as tho the lecture wasn't quite in keeping with the PTA program at that time, but on that Sunday morning she realized it was extremely timely.

Great as was the havoc of that Sabbath day, Mrs. Tomlinson feels it was a blessing that children were not in school and men were not at business.

Residents Not Panicky.

Blackout precautions were effective immediately, and Mrs. Tomlinson arose early in the morning to write letters. Schools were closed, of course. A building only three blocks from the Tomlinsons' house was bombed, but despite the proximity of disaster, no one was in panic. The residents of Honolulu obeyed orders to the letter—and went on with their Christmas shopping. All but one lot of cards mailed by Mrs. Tomlinson reached here safely. She herself came home so quickly that her husband is still receiving mail from north shore friends inquiring about her safety.

AUTO DEATH TOLL FOR CHILDREN IN '41 REACHES 118

County Fatalities Higher Than Previous Year.

An analysis of circumstances which brought death to 118 children under 19 years old in traffic accidents in Cook county during 1941, revealed that 38 fatalities or nearly one-third occurred in midblock accidents. The figures, compiled from case histories in the coroner's office files by Chicago Motor club safety engineers, showed that the fatalities included 84 boys and 34 girls.

The survey revealed an increase over the 106 fatalities recorded during 1940. Midblock accidents during 1940 accounted for 41 deaths. Altho there was a small decline in midblock accidents during 1941, the largest percentage of fatalities occurred in this manner. Fifteen children were killed crossing between intersections; eleven lost their lives by running suddenly into the street from the sidewalk; eight were killed when they darted from between parked cars into the path of a car, and four were killed while playing in the street.

Few Killed During School Day.

Safety engineers pointed out that only 11 children were killed on a school day during school hours. This was an appreciable decline from 1940 when 32 children were killed during school hours. The decrease was credited partly to the motor club plan called "The Safest Route to School." By this system children are trained to take a route approved by teachers and the patrol boys between their homes and school in order to minimize exposure to traffic hazards.

The danger of crossing at unguarded intersections was revealed in the files which showed 20 deaths occurred at intersections without signals or traffic guards. This was an increase of 9 per cent over 1940. Failure of children to judge the speed of vehicles accurately, hurry and carelessness were cited by the safety engineers as causes of these deaths. Five children, however, were killed at signalized intersections during 1941 compared to a perfect record in 1940 when no fatalities were reported at guarded intersections.

The figures also revealed an increase last year in the number of children killed in automobiles. Nineteen children lost their lives while riding as passengers compared to 13 during 1940. Nine youngsters lost their lives while driving cars compared to three during the previous year.

Southwest Most Hazardous.

As in 1940, the southwest section of Chicago and Cook county was the most dangerous area, with 36 children killed. The west and northwest sides were the second most dangerous sections, with 27 fatalities each. Sixteen children met death on the south side and 12 were killed on the north side.

Of the various age groups, the fatality rate was greatest among the 6 year olds, with 14 children of that age losing their lives. Eleven youngsters 16 years old were killed and ten 3 year olds were fatally injured. There were 22 fatalities in the preschool age—under four years of age; 59 of elementary school age—5 to 13 years old, and 13 high school students —14 to 19.

Fourteen children were killed riding bicycles in the street and three lost their lives while hitching rides on automobiles and trucks. Cars backing out of driveways and alleys, falls from moving cars, and other miscellaneous accidents claimed ten lives.

Urges Safety Habits.

"Children cannot be cautioned too frequently about street dangers," Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out in urging parents, teachers, and all adults who have contect with youngsters, to impress upon them the importance of good safety habits.

Following are four rules compiled by the motor club for parents to impress upon their children:

1. Cross only at intersections and if possible where there are traffic signals or policemen.
2. Wait for traffic to clear before crossing.
3. Do not play in the streets.
4. Ride bicycles with extreme care.

EXPECT THRONG AT PLUSH HORSE BALL SATURDAY

It's 34th Annual Party of Town and Country.

Several states are represented among the early reservations for the 34th annual plush horse ball of the Town and Country Equestrain association to be held in the Hotel Sherman next Saturday. W. Earl Butler, president of the association, reported that reservations indicate a record attendance.

Early orders for tables include one from the Riders of the Rambling Roads, of Chesterton, Ind. Another came from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walker, of White Pigeon, Mich. Individual reservations have been received from Wisconsin and Iowa, and from as far west as Wyoming.

Program Follows Dinner.

Frank Maher, chairman of the arrangements committee, said that leaders in the entertainment world would be on the program that will follow the dinner.

Reservations may be made thru the association secretary at 111 West Jackson boulevard, but accommodations for latecomers will be available. The public is invited.

Have Record Membership.

Butler said last week that the association's 1941 paid membership of 892 was the highest in history. The association was formed in 1908 by Miss Astrid Scheel Rosing, Fred W. Upham, and George P. Nichols.

Of these 892, 438 were men, 401 were women, and 53 were junior members. Butler predicts that the membership will pass the 1,000 mark in the first half of this year.

COLLEGE OFFERS STUDY OF WORDS AND MEANINGS

A seminar in general semantics, a study of the science of meanings of words, will open tomorrow evening at National College of Education in Evanston. It will continue as a series of six successive Monday evening sessions.

Robert H. Carpenter, English teacher at New Trier Township High school, leader of the course, describes its nature in part:

"Pioneer thinkers have long recognized that whenever we use language most of us reveal assumptions that have been proved false. When we use language in this way, we create for ourselves emotional disturbances, due to blockages in the nervous system. If the disturbances are severe, we experience difficulty in learning, reading or speaking. We may also find it difficult to make satisfactory adjustments in our professional or personal lives."

Participants in the course will include Dr. Irving J. Lee of the school of speech and university college at Northwestern university, and S. I. Hayakawa, faculty member at the Illinois Institute of Technology. Lee is the author of "Language Habits in Human Affairs," and Hayakawa is the writer of the book-of-the-month "Language in Action."

After luncheon on Saturday three members will present a comedy, "Perfide comme l'Onde." Cast members will be Miss Sophie Fisk, Mrs. Harold Schmetzer, and Mrs. William Zellweger.

The Day Bill Got SLAPPED..

. . . Into existence (1930) the world was going to hell on a handcar. Stocks and businesses were crashing to earth. The future was unpredictable. It took real nerve to take on new responsibility . . . But over all this great broad land thousands of Bills, Toms, Dicks and little Harrys were born. A new generation became exposed to all the hazards of life. A creative instinct, that same instinct which caused our forefathers to go on having children in spite of the Indians, wouldn't die within us.

. . . When we brought these lads and lassies into this world there was re-instilled in all of us a new desire to live once more in the lives of our children. In their lives would be our immortality. In their continued safe existence the only pledge we could ever know of a future we could only dream.

. . . Far in the outposts of the Pacific are Bills, Toms, Dicks and Harrys of another generation fighting a fight to the death with a horde of slant-eyed devils and savages with a lust to destroy our freedom and our very dreams. Right now the American Red Cross needs funds. We should supply them with all the money they need. Every life they'll save out there in the Pacific is someone's dream of Immortality here in the States and an assurance that we, the fathers and mothers of younger Bills, mayhaps, will be able to continue with our living dreams. . . .

OAK PARK HOME GIVEN THORO JOB OF REMODELING

Couple Lets Living Room Wait Until Last.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Contrary to the procedure many people would have followed, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist of 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park, left the finishing of their living room and dining room until the last when remodeling their 70 year old house.

These two rooms were only completed recently. But they felt that the large library bay which adjoins the dining room and which they fitted out beautifully with built-in shelves and cases, weather tight windows, and chairs, radio, and couch could be made to meet their needs until time came when they could turn their attention to living room and dining room.

Mrs. Bornquist preferred a blue kitchen, but every one advised against it since the room had a north exposure. In the end it emerged according to her preference. The ceiling is a delft blue, the walls a lighter shade of blue blended with a phantom gray.

Radiator Is Horizontal.

"We mixed our own colors, and mixed and mixed," Mrs. Bornquist pointed out. It took us days to experiment and get the colors we really wanted."

A new radiator heating system was installed, and when it came to installing a radiator in the kitchen there seemed no wall space for it. So Mr. Bornquist decided to have it placed horizontally instead of vertically and at right angles to the outside wall. Then he built a shelf over it and small shelves down one end, covered them with blue linoleum of the same shade as the working surfaces of kitchen and fastened chrome towel racks parallel with the top shelf. Now this ingenious unit not only provides heat but serves as a swanky little breakfast counter.

Mr. Bornquist had wanted a circular breakfast nook but there was no room for this so he built a semi-circular table, placed it against a wall, and included as part of its permanent equipment, swing out chairs. The knobs on the chairs are Mrs. Bornquist's initials, and the wall overhead is papered, a fetching patterned paper with a yellow background.

Uses Salvaged Window.

Equipment is all new and streamlined and over the sink there's a smart window which looks for all the world like one of the new horizontal sliding windows. It happens to be merely a window which Mr. Bornquist salvaged from an old garage. He took the upper part of it and installed it horizontally instead of vertically.

Adjacent to this kitchen is a sizable room which for the present is used for storage purposes. Some day it will be a modern bedroom or den. Its ultimate rôle in life is still unsettled.

The bathroom, of course, was completely transformed. The "Queen Anne bath tub," as the Bornquists called their old tub on legs, disappeared and a new built-in model appeared, with overhead shower and curtains. The wainscot is a pale yellow, the walls and ceiling a deep blue. The linoleum on the floor is coral shade and matches the small fish which are glimpsed in the wall paper pattern.

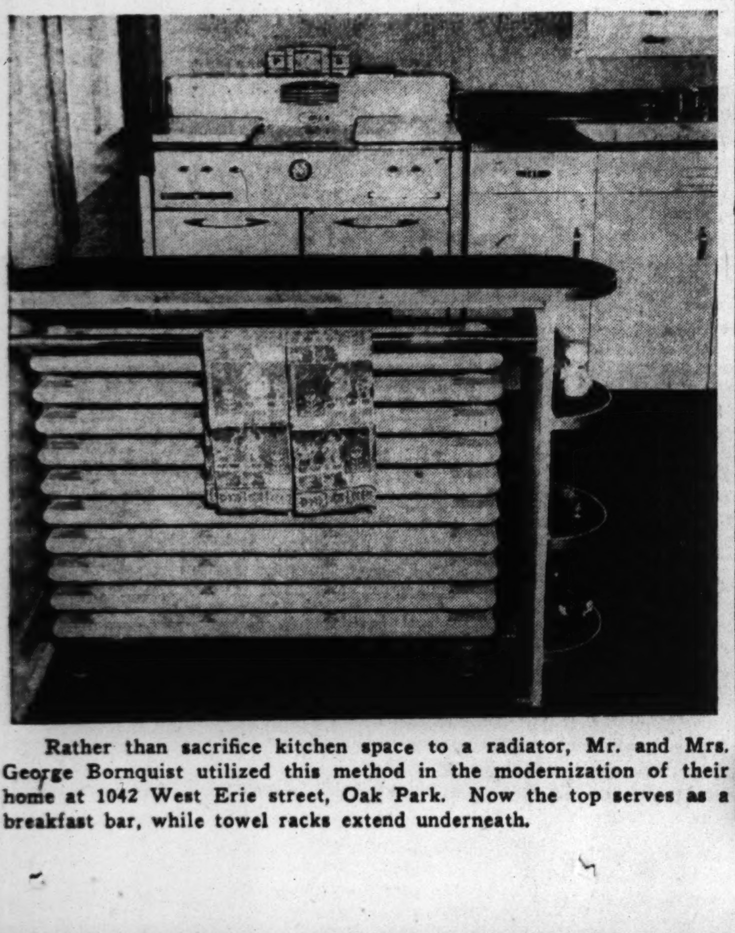
Plywood on Doors.

The doors thruout the whole house have been covered with plywood and painted white. On the second floor new hardwood floors were laid over the soft wood floors. Downstairs the hardwood floors are to be stained a dark shade shortly. The woodwork thruout is also white like the doors.

If you have wondered what to do with a narrow, boxed-in stairway to give it a slightly different and lively mien, there's an idea for you in what the Bornquists did.

The original stairhall was open at the top but they closed this in and left a small hallway at the head of the stairs from which opens the master bedroom and the guestroom. They then painted the stairwalls light and ran a band of deep colored paint a foot and a half wide down each wall. They use this band as a guest book and give each guest a white crayon to write on the band the name and date of the visit.

Breakfast Bar Over Radiator



Rather than sacrifice kitchen space to a radiator, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist utilized this method in the modernization of their home at 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park. Now the top serves as a breakfast bar, while towel racks extend underneath.

DR. REINHOLD NEIBUHR SPEAKS TONIGHT AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

Dr. Neibuhr's book, "The Nature of the Destiny of Man," selected as the religious' book of the year in 1941, grew out of an address he made at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, during that city's first air raid.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Evanston, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, will speak at the 7 o'clock meeting.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Jan. 19.

As stated before, this is the time to make the plan for a war garden, so called because under the present emergency every effort must be made to grow more produce to aid defense. Organize your neighborhood, arrange to have as large a garden as can be well taken care of. Make a list of the seeds needed and order them. It is imperative that the order be sent to the seedsman as early as possible for some stocks are very low and the demand will be great.

Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Many fruit trees are grossly neglected with the result that they never produce the crop of which they are capable. Now is the time to get these trees in proper condition, but if in doubt as to how to go about it, it is wise to engage the services of an experienced man who will also take care of spraying operations at the proper time. Pruning is beneficial when properly done but it may be injurious if undertaken by the inexperienced.

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Do you know that many kinds of shrubs can be easily propagated from dormant wood of the previous season's growth? Examples are: Cornus, spirea van houttel, snowberry, weigelia, privet, forsythia, hydrangea paniculata, kerria japonica, ninebark, lonicera or honeysuckle. Make the cuttings 6 to 8 inches long and bury in a sandy or well drained spot during the winter and by spring each cutting will form a callus and be ready to line out for rooting in the garden.

Thursday, Jan. 22.

Home gardeners who have the space should certainly investigate the possibilities of the hotbed for it is one of the finest accessories to the garden that can be installed. Now is the time to build one altho knocked down frames, ready to install, are available and at a reasonable price. Ready glazed sash is also available.

Friday, Jan. 23.

Frequently the asparagus fern or asparagus sprengeri will be rejuvenated if it it cut down and repotted in spring. Both kinds require a fairly rich soil and they are excellent house plants.

One of the finest house plants for the person who will give them proper care is the beautiful Norfolk Island pine. It costs more than many other kinds but for the discriminating gardener it is a choice plant. It is an evergreen from Australia.

Saturday, Jan. 24.

How about the begonia that rots off near the surface of the soil? This is caused from too much water. Place the plant in the window where it will receive more light and be more careful not to overwater. Worms in the soil do little damage beyond stopping up the drainage hole, causing the soil to become saturated with possible subsequent injury from over watering.

SVITHIOD SINGERS MARK 60TH YEAR

CADETS AT LANE JOIN TO APPLAUD MEDAL WINNERS

Scene Is Duplicated in 27 Schools.

BY ARTHUR MIDDLETON.

Nearly 1,200 ROTC cadets, members of the Lane Techincal High school unit, marched into the school gymnasium last week where they watched 41 fellow cadets honored for outstanding work in their military training classes during the semester.

It is their day. These 41 young men have put in five months of conscientious work to earn medals which are to be presented them by the war department, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Daughters of the American Revolution, and the American Legion.

Before the assembly begins, the ROTC room in the basement of the high school is a busy place. Here the officers and cadets are polishing shoes, buttons, and Sam Browne belts. Service caps are being set at a jaunty but correct angle on slickly combed heads. Two young men, members of the color guard, rub cloths over the already gleaming surfaces of their rifles.

Last Minute Instructions.

Technical Sergt. Gilman R. Carle, military instructor of this, the largest unit in the city, calls Col. Henry Sikora and Capt. Thomas Zohogianes into his office for last minute instructions. This is to be Col. Sikora's last honor assembly. He will be graduated in a few weeks and today will turn over his duties as cadet commander of the unit to Capt. Zohogianes.

Upstairs in the gymnasium other cadets are filing in and taking their seats. The ROTC band strikes up a stirring march as the color guard comes up the ramp and into the gym. The guard comes to a halt before the speakers' table and faces the audience of cadets. Twelve hundred and thirty-eight cadets snap to attention as Col. Sikora announces he will lead them in the pledge to the flag. More than 1,200 voices boom out: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States . . ."

The flag ceremony completed, the color guard posts the flags before the speaker's table. Capt. John Schroeder, the regimental adjutant, steps to the public address microphone to introduce the first speaker: C. E. Lang, principal of Lane High school. His popularity with the students is attested to by the roaring welcome that rises from the stands.

Praise from Principal.

"I can always tell an ROTC man even when he is without his uniform," Principal Lang tells the cadets. "They are a notch straighter, they have learned to stand on their two feet and talk straight out, they have learned to take and give orders."

There are more words of praise for the unit and then he asks the cadets to assist him in gathering the names of all former Lane students who are serving with the nation's armed forces. These names are to be inscribed on a roll of honor to hang in the Lane halls.

Principal Lang then introduces Capt. N. W. Oppenheim, adjutant to Col. W. F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics in the Chicago area, who is to award the ROTC department medals. The first medal, for efficiency as an officer, goes to Capt. Zohogianes. The applause is loud for the cadet captain and for the other cadets who follow him to receive their medals. In the audience of cadets there is a determination to be a medal winner next semester.

Growth of ROTC.

Twenty-four cadets stride out on the gymnasium floor as their names are called by the next speaker who is to present the gold and silver medals awarded semi-annually to the city's outstanding cadets by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and its editor and publisher, Col. Robert R. McCormick. The cadets are told that from a small unit born during the last World war thru the efforts of Col. McCormick, Chicago's high school ROTC has grown to the largest unit in the nation with more than 10,000 cadets enrolled.

Before the next speaker is introduced, Principal Lang calls upon the band for a number. "It is called Blaze Away,'" says the principal, and adds, "You know, what we are going to do to the Japs." Cheers and whistles for this statement drown out the first bars of the band selection.

Final presentations are then made by Mrs. George Harbert on behalf of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and by Sergt. Carle who awards the medals donated by the American Legion. The ceremony closes as all rise to their feet and sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Shouts of congratulations are hurled back and forth by the cadets as they examine each other's trophies. And in 26 other high schools where the presentation scene has been duplicated during the last two weeks, thousands of other cadets, like those at Lane, look forward with determination to be among the winners next May.

Sabin High Mothers' Club to Take Industrial Tour

Members of the Sabin High school Crippled Children Mothers' club will meet at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning in the school auditorium, 2216 Hirsch street. An industrial tour at 1 o'clock has been arranged by the ways and means chairman, Mrs. J. D. Markese, 2329 Cortez street.

Shoes and buttons must shine when cadets of Lane Tech's ROTC unit prepare for their great moment—the medal presentation assembly in the huge Lane gymnasium. Forty-one students received awards Wednesday afternoon in the largest of Chicago's 28 high school ROTC units. Twenty-four of the awards were Tribune medals. In the busy trio at the left are, left to right, Maj. Hugh Christian, Capt. William Felgenhauer, Corp. Matt Moe. Polishing done, the Lane cadets are now ready for inspection. Technical Sergt. G. R. Carle (right) gives final instructions to Lieut. Col. Henry Sikora (left) and Capt. Thomas Zohogianes.

State Primary Falls on Latest Possible Date

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Political candidates will have less time than usual this year between the April primary and the November election in which to wage their campaigns for office. This was pointed out last week by John F. Tyrrell, vice chairman of the Republican state central committee, an attorney who has become known as an election law expert.

The 1942 primary will take place April 14, latest possible date under the state primary law formula which specifies that the primary shall be held on the second Tuesday in April in even numbered years

Not since the state primary was switched from September to April in 1917 has it been held so late as April 14. This late a primary will not occur again until 1964, unless the law is changed meanwhile.

Election Is Early.

The election this year will be held on Nov. 3. This is only one day beyond the earliest possible date for a general election, which under the state election law must be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in even numbered years. There has been no Nov. 2 election since 1930, and there will not be another until 1952.

This year's loss of campaigning time is not likely to cause great con-

THE FIRST MEDAL
DAR AWARD

His trim ROTC cap tucked properly under his Sam Brown belt, Capt. Thomas Zohogianes receives an ROTC department medal for officer's efficiency from Capt. Norman W. Oppenheim, ROTC supervisor of north side units. Cadet Adjutant John Schroeder (at the microphone) announced the medal winners. "Congratulations!" says Mrs. George Harbert of the Daughters of the American Revolution as she hands the DAR award to Adjutant Schroeder. Marshal Foch post of the American Legion also presented medals.

SWEDISH GROUP GIVING CHORAL FETE MARCH 1

Membership of 550 Promotes Culture.

Members of the Svithiod Singing club, Swedish choral society, are preparing to celebrate the group's 60th anniversary, to be climaxed on March 1 with a concert in the Civic theater.

Knute Hansen.

The club's membership, approximately 550, represents all parts of Chicago and many of the suburbs. Knute Hansen directs the 60 voice male chorus which will give the concert.

In March, 1882, a group of Chicago residents, all of them of Swedish descent, banded together to form an organization for the perpetuation and furtherance of male chorus singing of all types, but Swedish in particular.

Buy Wrightwood Avenue Site.

Less than 15 years after its inception the club had gained such renown that men not interested in singing sought to join. In 1896 the organization purchased the property upon which the present headquarters stand at 624 Wrightwood avenue.

With the building of the clubhouse, a social program was instituted, and the club's activities ceased to be of a purely musical nature. Dances are held in the club's modern ballroom and Scandinavian fish dinners are presented for the enjoyment of members and their guests.

Business men take advantage of the clubhouse's quiet portals, and many a deal is closed over the small white cloth covered tables in the dining room. But, generally, business, politics, and religion are not among the subjects discussed. The organization's officers and members seek to maintain the purpose for which the club was formed—the furtherance of culture.

Take Concert Tours.

Until 1928 the club sponsored biennial Scandinavian concert tours for the male chorus. In 1928 the group presented concerts in more than 30 towns and villages, the proceeds from each presentation going to the charities of the locale in which the concert was given.

The society is among leading Chicago clubs in the sale of defense bonds. Members have taken active parts in numerous charity and patriotic drives within the last two years.

Officers, many of whom are sons and grandsons of the founders of the club, include: Grover A. Peterson, 6444 North Rockwell street, president; Swen G. Webner, 1740 North Normandy avenue, vice president; Gustaf Rickan, 4615 North Paulina street, recording secretary; John A. Linn, 3419 North Clark street, treasurer, and Ragnar Gustafson, 3157 Hudson avenue, steward.

Directors of Society.

Officers of the Ladies' auxiliary include: Mrs. Franklin C. E. Lundquist, 2724 Winnemac avenue; Mrs. Russell M. Edgar, 5243 North Hoyne avenue; Mrs. Paul Rosewall, 421 Melrose street; Mrs. Eric Ramsey, 6513 North Mozart street; Mrs. William M. Gwynn, 3508 Janssen avenue, and Mrs. Clarence Olson, 1719 Glenlake avenue.

Among the honorary members are: United States Senator Wayland Brooks, Gov. Green, Lieut. Gov. Hugh W. Cross, State Senator Arnold P. Benson, Mayor Kelly, and Gustav Oldenburg, Swedish royal consul in Chicago.

Mrs. Herman Gartenberg is president of the home which is at 1401 North California avenue.

Royal League Organization to Hold Party Tomorrow

Mrs. Anna Kuehn, president, will be assisted by Mrs. Clara Levy, Dr. Eric G. Tavs, Harry G. Weimer, Lee Shassers, and Dr. John B. Bell.

50 HOME WELLS RUN DRY AS NEW PLANT IS OPENED

Owners Protest as They Carry Their Water.

"You never miss the water till the well runs dry" is an adage the pertinence of which is being impressed upon some 50 home owners in the unincorporated area north of Melrose Park, between Mannheim road and Scott street.

Beginning last November wells in the community that borders the new Buick airplane engine plant on the north ceased supplying water for domestic needs. Neighbors related their troubles to one another. Some went to the Buick plant to protest that it was a new well being dug at the plant that caused the shortage. State and county health boards were contacted. There has been the appointment of a committee, and a petition for aid even has been sent President Roosevelt. As yet the dilemma remains unsolved.

Housewives Carry Water.

As an emergency measure housewives have carried their buckets to a pump in the vicinity of Grand avenue and Mannheim road. Others have brought water in their cars from Chicago.

Residents of the community, for which a name has not yet been chosen, are former Chicagoans who sought the quiet of pastoral life during the last two years. At the time of their settlement they did not envision a big industrial plant close by. Each householder had his own well and there was no thought that the future might bring on a water shortage. Expenditures that were large in proportion to individual incomes were made for water systems.

"We started to lose our water supply last November," said Frank J. Garr, spokesman for the committee made up of home owners with wells involved. "The trek to the community well began and continued into the subzero weather. Just before the first of the year most of the wells went completely dry. For three days the water came back and then left us again."

Plant Has Two Wells.

John Wealer, supervisor of Leyden township, in which the newly developed drouth area is located, said he had recently received a report of the well water shortage from Dr. E. A. Piszczek of the county health board. The communication stated that two deep wells at the Buick plant were being completed.

It may be possible, it was explained, that when these wells are cased the water may return. The report added, however, that conditions might grow worse and spread to other communities and that lack of water in the area would constitute a potential public health hazard.

Mr. Wealer was asked to review the reports and pass them on to the state defense council and other agencies that might aid in giving the area health and security and an adequate water supply. The state water survey and the state geological survey at Urbana also were sent copies of the report.

SCHURZ COURSE WILL TRAIN FOR DEFENSE WORK

New classes for training defense workers will begin tomorrow evening at Schurz evening school, Robert C. Keenan, principal, announced. "A great demand for trained men has been created by the vast war program," said Mr. Keenan. "Men enrolling in these classes may serve their country's cause while preparing themselves for better jobs by improving their skill."

All courses are offered free of charge by the board of education's national defense training program under auspices of the federal government.

A new course is being offered this semester in precision inspection and measurement for industrial shops which is designed to improve the skill of workers in defense plants and fit them for promotions.

The new class in practical shop mathematics for defense workers will stress such fields of mathematics as proportion and variation, calculation of areas, cutting speeds, weights and capacities, right triangulation, pulleys, gearing, cams, and the use of graphs, diagrams, and slide rules.

An industrial chemistry class for laboratory workers, assistants and technicians will study the fundamentals of metallurgy, electroplating, plastics, and general laboratory techniques.

Other related courses available at the evening school are electric shop fundamentals, tool and die design, automobile mechanics, blueprint reading, foundry and forge work.

AUTO DEATH TOLL FOR CHILDREN IN '41 REACHES 118

County Fatalities Are Above Previous Year.

An analysis of circumstances which brought death to 118 children under 19 years old in traffic accidents in Cook county during 1941, revealed that 38 fatalities or nearly one-third occurred in midblock accidents. The figures, compiled from case histories in the coroner's office files by Chicago Motor club safety engineers, showed that the fatalities included 84 boys and 34 girls.

The survey revealed an increase over the 106 fatalities recorded during 1940. Midblock accidents during 1940 accounted for 41 deaths. Altho there was a small decline in midblock accidents during 1941, the largest percentage of fatalities occurred in this manner. Fifteen children were killed crossing between intersections; eleven lost their lives by running suddenly into the street from the sidewalk; eight were killed when they darted from between parked cars into the path of a car, and four were killed while playing in the street.

Few Killed During School Day.

Safety engineers pointed out that only 11 children were killed on a school day during school hours. This was an appreciable decline from 1940 when 32 children were killed during school hours. The decrease was credited partly to the motor club plan called "The Safest Route to School." By this system children are trained to take a route approved by teachers and the patrol boys between their homes and school in order to minimize exposure to traffic hazards.

The danger of crossing at unguarded intersections was revealed in the files which showed 20 deaths occurred at intersections without signals or traffic guards. This was an increase of 9 per cent over 1940. Failure of children to judge the speed of vehicles accurately, hurry and carelessness were cited by the safety engineers as causes of these deaths. Five children, however, were killed at signalized intersections during 1941 compared to a perfect record in 1940 when no fatalities were reported at guarded intersections.

The figures also revealed an increase last year in the number of children killed in automobiles. Nineteen children lost their lives while riding as passengers compared to 13 during 1940. Nine youngsters lost their lives while driving cars compared to three during the previous year.

Southwest Most Hazardous.

As in 1940, the southwest section of Chicago and Cook county was the most dangerous area, with 36 children killed. The west and northwest sides were the second most dangerous sections, with 27 fatalities each. Sixteen children met death on the south side and 12 were killed on the north side.

Of the various age groups, the fatality rate was greatest among the 6 year olds, with 14 children of that age losing their lives. Eleven youngsters 16 years old were killed and ten 3 year olds were fatally injured. There were 22 fatalities in the preschool age—under four years of age; 59 of elementary school age—5 to 13 years old, and 13 high school students —14 to 19.

Fourteen children were killed riding bicycles in the street and three lost their lives while hitching rides on automobiles and trucks. Cars backing out of driveways and alleys, falls from moving cars, and other miscellaneous accidents claimed ten lives.

Urges Safety Habits.

"Children cannot be cautioned too frequently about street dangers," Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out in urging parents, teachers, and all adults who have contect with youngsters, to impress upon them the importance of good safety habits.

Following are four rules compiled by the motor club for parents to impress upon their children:

1. Cross only at intersections and if possible where there are traffic signals or policemen.
2. Wait for traffic to clear before crossing.
3. Do not play in the streets.
4. Ride bicycles with extreme care.

For the fourth consecutive year, residents of the northwest area will have opportunity to hear nationally and internationally known speakers, 11 of whom will appear in Barrington's High school auditorium during the Town-Warming opening Sunday, Jan. 25, and closing Thursday, Feb. 5.

Dr. William L. Stidger, educator and journalist, will speak next Sunday at the first meeting of the Town-Warming, which is free to the public. Monday evening's speaker will be Dr. William Lyon Phelps, Yale professor known as the "dean of American literature."

The former warden of Sing Sing prison, Lewis E. Lawes, will speak Tuesday night. Mr. Lawes, who is known for his book, "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," will talk on, "Crime and the Home."

Dennis Doyle on Program.

"Will This War End Christianity?" is the question which Denis Conan Doyle, lecturer and journalist, will attempt to answer Wednesday evening, Jan. 28, when he will be featured at Barrington's Town-Warming. Mr. Doyle is the son of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, author of the Sherlock Holmes stories. Sir Arthur, before his death, spent much time doing research in the field of spiritualism. 4 CIVIC GROUPS LIST OBJECTIVES FOR COMMUNITY

Defense Efforts Likely to Slow Improvements.

George J. Trinkaus.

Having elected officers for the new year, four civic and improvement associations on the northwest side have set forth their objectives and reviewed their accomplishments of 1941.

All four—the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs, the Nor'Wes'Ton congress, both of which are composed of representatives from neighborhood civic groups, the Independent Improvement association and the Avondale Civic council—have pledged their support to the national defense program.

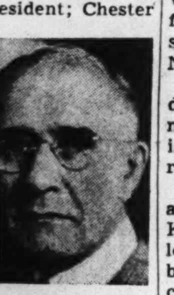
"We are going slow this year in recommending public improvements lest such efforts interfere seriously with defense measures," said George J. Trinkaus, Northwest Federation president and member of the Addison Heights Betterment and Protective association. "With foresight we last year urged the extension of the subway to Milwaukee and Central avenues. We still maintain that such construction might be of use as a bomb shelter. The federation is also standing behind the building of the Avondale superhighway project, as we have in past years."

Comprises 40 Clubs.

The federation is composed of 40 northwest side improvement clubs, delegates from which meet each month to consider civic matters of common interest.

Officers elected for 1942, besides Trinkhaus, are Edward F. Boyle of the Portage Park West End Improvement club, first vice president; Edward Warden of the Edgewood Community club, second vice president; Edward D. Flynn of the Avondale Civic council, third vice president; Edwin D. Jackson of the Jefferson Gardens Improvement and Social club, secretary; Walter A. Schmidt of the Wilson Avenue Community association, treasurer; Vincent Mayer, also of the Jefferson Gardens group, sergeant at arms.

The Nor'Wes'Ton congress has announced its opposition to the proposed superhighway adjacent to Skokie road from Devon avenue north to the county line, which it claims would create a bottleneck at Devon, Caldwell, and Carpenter road. The congress considers Sheridan, McCormick, Skokie, Milwaukee, and Waukegan roads as ample.



John H. Kerr.

Congress officers elected last week are John H. Kerr, president; Chester Latto, executive vice president; Frank J. C. Radde, corresponding vice president; Edward T. Klodzinski, recording secretary; Amedee Caboor, financial secretary; Gustave Reich, treasurer, and Charles O. Porter, sergeant at arms. Retiring President Vincent C. Rozycki was elected to direct the Junior Olympics.

Staged Junior Olympics.

Last year the congress successfully staged the Northwest Junior Olympics at Norwood Park, was instrumental in the state legislature's endeavor to bring about reapportionment of congressional districts particularly on the northwest side, condemned the erection of garbage loading platforms which was urged by the city in the Mayfair district, recommended disposal of garbage by incineration, erection of a public library branch in the Mayfair district, widening of Higgins road west of Milwaukee avenue, and the stationing of a police officer at Milwaukee avenue and Higgins road. The congress opposed the federation's efforts to construct the Avondale superhighway, recommending that it be deferred as a postwar project, since labor and materials are now more essential to defense.

C. A. Kepner.

C. A. Kepner was unanimously reelected president of the Avondale Civic council, affiliated with the Northwest federation and formerly known as the Kedzie Modernizing club.

Other officers are Mrs. Grace Spath, 3371 North Kedzie avenue, secretary; C. C. Spath, 3371 North Kedzie avenue, treasurer; Alfred Otte, 3426 North Troy street; Charles F. Nehls, 3026 Belmont avenue; E. W. Dean, 3463 North Kedzie avenue, and Paul Boettge, 3349 North Troy street, vice presidents; C. K. Broza, 3147 Southport avenue, sergeant at arms.

Seek Kedzie Paving.

The council is devoting its efforts this year toward the paving of Kedzie avenue and the establishment of a city park and playground at the southwest corner of Kedzie and Elston avenues. It also is urging another public library branch on the northwest side. Its crowning attainment of last year was the paving of Belmont avenue thruout the community. The council is planning a celebration of the achievement early in the spring.

Rudolph West was elected president of the Independence Improvement association. Fellow officers are Clyde Fenton, vice president; Edward Maina, recording secretary; Irving Pearl, financial secretary; William Hoffman, treasurer, and John Wysin, sergeant at arms.

Directors named are Julius Larsen, Arthur Nordlie, Fred Newstadt, Otto Hammer, John Hendry, and Joseph Fucik.

SPRING PRIMARY FALLS ON LATEST POSSIBLE DATE

2d Tuesday in April Will Be 14th.

sternation, Tyrrell indicated, inasmuch as criticism has frequently been raised that the April primary leaves too great an interval between the nomination and the election of candidates.

Candidates Object to Early Date.

The candidates themselves dislike the early primary, principally because it exposes them all summer long to the interminable line of solicitors for program advertising, political picnics, organization doings and other schemes for separating the vote seeking politician from his campaign cash.

The September primary was free from this objection. However, it had the disadvantage that vote contests arising in the primary could not in all cases be disposed of in time for the election. The time interval was too short for the ponderous machinery of the law to function.

Occasionally it is suggested that a return be made to the September primary, but thus far such proposals have found insufficient support. The late primary is favored by many downstaters because the spring primary comes at a time when the farmer is busy in the fields and so has scant time to vote or to listen to the oratory of prospective nominees. Proponents of the April primary point out that it includes the election of delegates to the national party conventions, held in June or July.

Sought Primary in June.

An effort was made this year to postpone the primary to June 1, and to hold it in conjunction with Supreme court judicial elections on that date in five of the seven judicial districts in the state. This would have saved expense.

Both the Cook county board and the Chicago city council passed resolutions asking Gov. Green to move for the change. The governor, however, omitted the subject from his call for the first special session of the legislature, and so it could not come up for consideration.

CHICAGO BANDS IN SPOTLIGHT ON W-G-N THIS WEEK

Brown, Jarrett, Howard, Teagarden Slated.

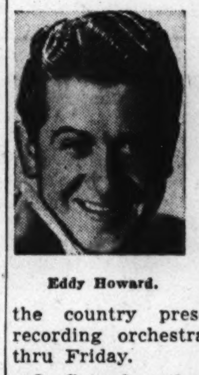
Spotlight Bands, W-G-N-Mutual's week night parade of leading dance orchestras, will be aired from Chicago for the first time this week. For the first four weekdays, starting tomorrow, Spotlight bands will be aired from the Civic theater in the opera house. Les Brown and his orchestra, who have just closed an engagement at the Blackhawk restaurant during which he was heard on W-G-N, heads the Spotlight Band parade at 9:15 o'clock tomorrow evening. Brown is soon to open at the Chicago theater.

Les Brown.

Then, on successive nights will follow Art Jarrett; Eddy Howard, and Jack Teagarden. Griff Williams and his orchestra, long Chicago favorites, will be heard on Friday evening. Jarrett, who will be heard on Tuesday night, is another familiar name to W-G-N listeners as his band was heard last summer from the Blackhawk. At present Jarrett and his band are on a tour.

Art Jarrett.

Eddy Howard is remembered as the former vocalist with Dick Jurgens and has been heard on W-G-N broadcasting from the Aragon. Teagarden, a swing veteran, will visit Chicago for the one night appearance on the Spotlight show. His band is currently touring the midwest. "Spotlight Bands" cover the country presenting the best recording orchestras every Monday thru Friday.



Eddy Howard.

On Saturdays the program puts the spotlight on the band that has sold the most recordings of any one disc during the week in a special half hour show from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m.

A limited number of tickets will be available for the Civic theater broadcasts. Requests should be addressed by letter or phone to the W-G-N ticket department.

Jack Teagarden.

MISS BERGNER GUEST ON KEEP 'EM ROLLING!

Elizabeth Bergner, stage and screen star, will make a guest appearance on W-G-N and Mutual at 9:30 p. m. tomorrow during the "Keep 'Em Rolling" broadcast. Miss Bergner will star in "Land of the Lemon Drop," a play written for radio by Bernard C. Schoenfeld, author of the Broadway success, "Johnny Appleseed."

On the program, too, will be Jean Sablon, French singer of romantic ballads. Sablon will sing two war compositions: "My Sister and I" and "The Last Time I Saw Paris." Morton Gould's orchestra will provide the musical accompaniment for the dramatic portion of the show and for Sablon's singing.

Clifton Fadiman, the master of ceremonies on the "Keep 'Em Rolling" series, will again interview an executive of a war munitions industry.

'Never in This World' on Author's Playhouse Tonight

"Never in This World," a saga of a children's story author who finds the open sesame to the hearts of his audience only thru personal tragedy, will be the Author's Playhouse drama over WMAQ at 10.50 tonight. The original prose work is by Stephen Morehouse Avery with the radio dramatization by Jack LeFrandre. Rôles will be taken by Rosemary Garbell, Ken Griffin, Sid Ellstrom, Hazel Dophide, Betty Hannah, and Dick Holland.

AMERICA'S FIGHT FOR HEALTH IS THEME ON W-G-N

Keith Morgan Will Be Speaker.

The story of the United States' fight against disease and physical suffering will be the theme of the "Americans at the Ramparts" program on W-G-N and the Mutual network from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Thursday. Usually the "Americans at the Ramparts" program salutes our country's military establishment, but Thursday's tribute will be paid to the campaign against infantile paralysis—one of America's health ramparts.

Key officials of the campaign against infantile paralysis will speak on Thursday's program. Keith Morgan, national chairman of the committee raising fund for the national infantile paralysis foundation, will speak from New York. Herbert J. Lorber, Cook county chief of the drive, will speak from the W-G-N studios.

Producer Blair Walliser is assembling a cast of stage and screen favorites for the comedy and variety to be woven into the show.

Morton Downey, now appearing at the Chicago's Chez Paree, will sing. Arthur Treacher, the serious butler of the movies who is now starring in "Panama Hattie" at the Erlanger theater, will take over the comedy department. James Dunn, also from the "Panama Hattie" cast, will be master of ceremonies.

Musical settings will be provided by Bob Trendler and the W-G-N dance orchestra.

HONDURAS TO BE SALUTED NEXT ON AMERICAS SPEAK

The Republic of Honduras will be saluted on the Americas Speak program over W-G-N and the Mutual network today. The program will be heard on W59C, W-G-N's frequency modulated station, and the Mutual network from 2 to 2:30 p. m., and will be rebroadcast over W-G-N at 3:30 p. m. [CST].

The first 15 minutes will originate in the studios of W-G-N and the final portion will be broadcast direct from Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras.

The Chicago portion of the broadcast will feature a dramatization of the discovery of Honduras by Christopher Columbus and its conquest by Cristobal de Olid. Vincent Pelletier and Bret Morrison will head the dramatic cast.

From Honduras, the program will feature several brief interviews and music which will give the radio audience an interesting picture of the life, culture, and customs of that country.

Paul Lukas Is Guest on Double or Nothing

Paul Lukas, currently appearing in "Watch on the Rhine," will head the list of guests on the "Double or Nothing" program over W-G-N and the Mutual network at 5 p. m. today. Appearing with Lukas will be Burris Jenkins, cartoonist, and Bob Whiteman, an air raid warden. Walter Compton is master of ceremonies, and Frank Forest, tenor soloist.

OSSY RENARDY GUEST ON MUSIC THAT ENDURES

Ossy Renardy, 21 year old Vienesse violinist, will be the guest artist on W-G-N and Mutual's program, "Music That Endures" from 8:30 to 9 p. m. tomorrow. Renardy will appear with the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus under the direction of Henry Weber.

Ossy Renardy.

Renardy made his American debut two and a half years ago after achieving an outstanding reputation in Europe. His American success has grown consistently. At the end of January he will play at the President's birthday ball in New York.

Tomorrow Renardy will play the last movement of Mendelssohn's E Minor Concerto and the "Romanza Andaluza" by Sarasate.

Chicago Police Dog Drama on Bob Becker Broadcast

Mrs. Willy Necker, woman dog trainer and handler, will discuss points in a dog's education when she appears as a guest on Bob Becker's Chats About Dogs broadcast at 1 p. m. today over W-G-N. Becker's dog drama for the day is from the files of the Chicago police department and tells the story of a canine servant whose talent for entertainment was the salvation of a Chicago brother and sister.

OAK PARK HOME GIVEN THORO JOB OF REMODELING

Couple Lets Living Room Wait Until Last.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Contrary to the procedure many people would have followed, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist of 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park, left the finishing of their living room and dining room until the last when remodeling their 70 year old house.

These two rooms were only completed recently. But they felt that the large library bay which adjoins the dining room and which they fitted out beautifully with built-in shelves and cases, weather tight windows, and chairs, radio, and couch could be made to meet their needs until time came when they could turn their attention to living room and dining room.

Mrs. Bornquist preferred a blue kitchen, but every one advised against it since the room had a north exposure. In the end it emerged according to her preference. The ceiling is a delft blue, the walls a lighter shade of blue blended with a phantom gray.

Radiator Is Horizontal.

"We mixed our own colors, and mixed and mixed," Mrs. Bornquist pointed out. It took us days to experiment and get the colors we really wanted."

A new radiator heating system was installed, and when it came to installing a radiator in the kitchen there seemed no wall space for it. So Mr. Bornquist decided to have it placed horizontally instead of vertically and at right angles to the outside wall. Then he built a shelf over it and small shelves down one end, covered them with blue linoleum of the same shade as the working surfaces of kitchen and fastened chrome towel racks parallel with the top shelf. Now this ingenious unit not only provides heat but serves as a swanky little breakfast counter.

Mr. Bornquist had wanted a circular breakfast nook but there was no room for this so he built a semi-circular table, placed it against a wall, and included as part of its permanent equipment, swing out chairs. The knobs on the chairs are Mrs. Bornquist's initials, and the wall overhead is papered, a fetching patterned paper with a yellow background.

Uses Salvaged Window.

Equipment is all new and streamlined and over the sink there's a smart window which looks for all the world like one of the new horizontal sliding windows. It happens to be merely a window which Mr. Bornquist salvaged from an old garage. He took the upper part of it and installed it horizontally instead of vertically.

Adjacent to this kitchen is a sizable room which for the present is used for storage purposes. Some day it will be a modern bedroom or den. Its ultimate rôle in life is still unsettled.

The bathroom, of course, was completely transformed. The "Queen Anne bath tub," as the Bornquists called their old tub on legs, disappeared and a new built-in model appeared, with overhead shower and curtains. The wainscot is a pale yellow, the walls and ceiling a deep blue. The linoleum on the floor is coral shade and matches the small fish which are glimpsed in the wall paper pattern.

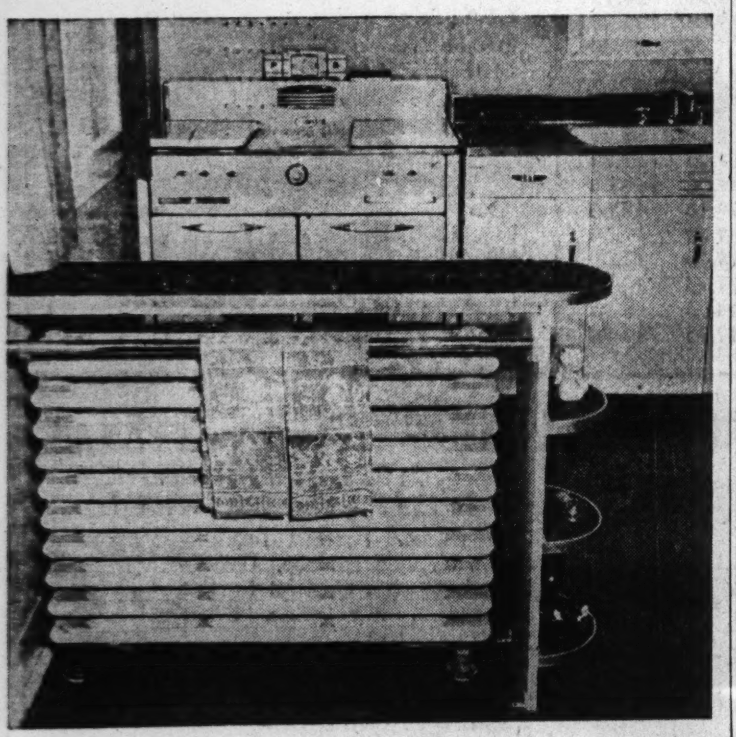
Plywood on Doors.

The doors thruout the whole house have been covered with plywood and painted white. On the second floor new hardwood floors were laid over the soft wood floors. Downstairs the hardwood floors are to be stained a dark shade shortly. The woodwork thruout is also white like the doors.

If you have wondered what to do with a narrow, boxed-in stairway to give it a slightly different and lively mien, there's an idea for you in what the Bornquists did.

The original stairhall was open at the top but they closed this in and left a small hallway at the head of the stairs from which opens the master bedroom and the guestroom. They then painted the stairwalls light and ran a band of deep colored paint a foot and a half wide down each wall. They use this band as a guest book and give each guest a white crayon to write on the band the name and date of the visit.

Breakfast Bar Over Radiator



Rather than sacrifice kitchen space to a radiator, Mr. and Mrs. George Bornquist utilized this method in the modernization of their home at 1042 West Erie street, Oak Park. Now the top serves as a breakfast bar, while towel racks extend underneath.

DR. REINHOLD NEIBUHR SPEAKS TONIGHT AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

Mrs. Ida B. W. Smith.

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr of Union Theological seminary, New York City, will speak at the 8 o'clock meeting of the Chicago Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, tonight on the subject, "The Wheat and the Tares." Clifford W. Barnes, founder and president of the club, will preside.

Dr. Neibuhr's book, "The Nature of the Destiny of Man," selected as the religious book of the year in 1941, grew out of an address he made at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, during that city's first air raid.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Evanston, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, will speak at the 7 o'clock meeting.

Music will be provided by the club's choir and the visiting chapel choir of Elmhurst college.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Jan. 19.

As stated before, this is the time to make the plan for a war garden, so called because under the present emergency every effort must be made to grow more produce to aid defense. Organize your neighborhood, arrange to have as large a garden as can be well taken care of. Make a list of the seeds needed and order them. It is imperative that the order be sent to the seedsman as early as possible for some stocks are very low and the demand will be great.

Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Many fruit trees are grossly neglected with the result that they never produce the crop of which they are capable. Now is the time to get these trees in proper condition, but if in doubt as to how to go about it, it is wise to engage the services of an experienced man who will also take care of spraying operations at the proper time. Pruning is beneficial when properly done but it may be injurious if undertaken by the inexperienced.

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Do you know that many kinds of shrubs can be easily propagated from dormant wood of the previous season's growth? Examples are: Cornus, spirea van houttel, snowberry, weigelia, privet, forsythia, hydrangea paniculata, kerria japonica, ninebark, lonicera or honeysuckle. Make the cuttings 6 to 8 inches long and bury in a sandy or well drained spot during the winter and by spring each cutting will form a callus and be ready to line out for rooting in the garden.

Thursday, Jan. 22.

Home gardeners who have the space should certainly investigate the possibilities of the hotbed for it is one of the finest accessories to the garden that can be installed. Now is the time to build one altho knocked down frames, ready to install, are available and at a reasonable price. Ready glazed sash is also available.

Friday, Jan. 23.

Frequently the asparagus fern or asparagus sprengeri will be rejuvenated if it it cut down and repotted in spring. Both kinds require a fairly rich soil and they are excellent house plants.

One of the finest house plants for the person who will give them proper care is the beautiful Norfolk Island pine. It costs more than many other kinds but for the discriminating gardener it is a choice plant. It is an evergreen from Australia.

Saturday, Jan. 24.

How about the begonia that rots off near the surface of the soil? This is caused from too much water. Place the plant in the window where it will receive more light and be more careful not to overwater. Worms in the soil do little damage beyond stopping up the drainage hole, causing the soil to become saturated with possible subsequent injury from over watering.

Part 6 HOMEMAKERS' SECTION MUSIC DRAMA MOVIES EDUCATION

Above: The lovely Paulette Goddard who is currently appearing with Bob Hope in "Nothing But the Truth" will be gracing our screens soon again in "Reap the Wild Wind" opposite Ray Milland and John Wayne.

Something About the Cinema Stars Pictured on This Page

By Mae Tinee.

Cecil De Mille says that Paulette Goddard has the most colorful personality of any of his women stars and adjures fans to "just wait" till they see her in "Reap the Wild Wind." Well, we're waiting and, in the meantime can enjoy looking at this picture of Paulette.

The "still" of Joan Fontaine and Cary Grant was made while the two were appearing in "Suspicion." This is the picture in which, Joan, after thinking for some time that her husband was the most charming person in the world, she suddenly has cause to suspect that he plans to mur-r-r-der her! And, with a glass of hot milk. Miss Fontaine, in real life, as you undoubtedly know, is happily married to Brian Aherne.

And now, isn't this a nice picture of Alaine Brandes? As the caption tells you she was once a Chicago model. Hollywood scouts took a notion to her and next thing her old friends knew she was Hollywood bound. Next news that came along was the announcement that the belle of the photograph galleries had been cast as one of the twelve "Louisiana Belles" in the screen adaptation of "Louisiana Purchase."

"Do you think"—the doyouthinkers are asking, "That Lana Turner will make up with Artie Shaw?" At the moment it's anybody's guess. But the fact remains that Miss Turner and her former husband go about together quite a bit when they're in the same city.

"They Can't Get You Down" Opens Here Next Sunday

New Revue 3d Musical Show for January

By Cecil Smith.

I am sure it is safe to assume that you have all the advance information you need about "Panama Hattie," which arrives at the Erlanger theater tomorrow evening. If that is the case, we may as well look ahead a week and dig out a few pertinent facts about the third of our January musicals, which opens at the Studebaker next Sunday evening.

"They Can't Get You Down" is the name of the show. The producers are two men whose interests have heretofore seemed widely separated—Dwight Deere Wiman, who has underwritten such rewarding musical comedies as "I Married an Angel" and "Higher and Higher," and Jack Kirkland, who attained particular fame as the stage adapter of "Tobacco Road."

• • •

The authors of "They Can't Get You Down" are Henry Myers and Edward Eliscu, and the tunesmith is Jay Gorney. If these names seem familiar, it is because they were also responsible for "Meet the People," the ingratiating little revue which passed 12 successful weeks at the Grand Opera house in the fall of 1940, and subsequently had a run on Broadway and a further road tour.

Like "Meet the People," the forthcoming show belongs in the "intimate" classification. Most of its players are young, and except for our old friend Donald Brian, not a single name in the cast has yet attained any drawing power or any right to appear in bright lights over the marquee of a theater.

• • •

In one important regard, however, "They Can't Get You Down" differs from "Meet the People." Instead of a string of unrelated skits and songs and dances, it is a book show. Its plot is described as "beginning where practically all other musical comedies have left off." In other words, the action begins after the final clinch and rosy finale of the ordinary musical comedy, and proceeds to deal with the experiences of the boy and girl after they have gotten married and started trying to live successfully on $25 a week.

"They Can't Get You Down" had its start in Hollywood. After seven weeks of prosperous business, the production closed in the face of the blackout threats and war jitters which have put a severe crimp in all entertainment enterprises in California. After a month's lapse, in which the script was revised in a few points which needed to be changed after our entry into the war, Mr. Wiman and Mr. Kirkland have brought the company together again for the Chicago opening. The musical comedy will stay here as long as possible, and then strike out for New York.

• • •

Last week I found myself unexpectedly in New York for a day. Never one to shy away from a busman's holiday, I willingly submitted to performances of two of the winter's theatrical novelties. It was hard to know which two plays to choose, out of the 27 on the boards. After a period of stern contemplation, I managed to settle upon Clifford Odets' "Clash By Night," in which Tallulah Bankhead is starred, and Vinton Freedley's new musical production, "Let's Face It," in which the customers are being wowed nightly by Danny Kaye, the young comic who made Chez Paree customers sit up and take notice two seasons ago.

Tallulah Bankhead.
[Hurrell Photo.]

"Clash By Night" ought to have been good, but it isn't. It represents an odd confluence of talents. Billy Rose, the "Jumbo" and Aquacade man, presented the play as his first undertaking in the field of serious drama. Mr. Odets has such masterpieces of vivid action and effective characterization to his credit as "Awake and Sing" and "Golden Boy." Miss Bankhead awakens stirring memories of her transcendent performance in "The Little Foxes" and her almost equally remarkable dealings with "Her Cardboard Lover" on the summer circuit.

Somehow this unique pooling of powers ought to have brought something interesting to pass. But "Clash by Night" is not worthy of Odets' reputation, for it is a conventional and often dull piece about the roomer who steals his best friend's wife. While Miss Bankhead could never go thru an evening without showing flashes of greatness, it is hard to reconcile her buttery southern accent and her mementos of the Regina Giddens manner with the script's claim that she is just a nondescript girl from Scranton, Pa., looking for a bit of color and life on Staten Island.

• • •

"Let's Face It" is certainly infinitely more diverting, and it is doing the sort of nightly sellout business which presages a year's run at the Imperial theater. It is the first musical hit to choose an army camp as its chief locale, and since the book was written some months before the incident at Pearl Harbor, the plot assumes that army life allows opportunity for a good bit of frivolity and clean fun.

Cole Porter's score is encouragingly better than some of his other recent ones. [Probably you already know the song about farming.] Mary Jane Walsh does well by most of the songs, and pretty little Nanette Fabares [it's Fabray now] of "Meet the People" helps out. Danny Kaye is a bundle of vitality, and has a chance to present a couple of new rapid fire patter songs.

It is a good show, but don't mourn too much, for it isn't as good as "Pal Joey."

Notes of the Theater

John O'Hara knows his night clubs well, or he would not have been able to create such an authoritative character study as he did in "Pal Joey," first in the series of letters in "The New Yorker" magazine and later in the excellent book of the musical comedy now running at the Grand Opera house. But he reached that milieu by a devious route. Born in Pottsville, Pa., 35 years ago, he grew up as the son of a small town physician. This bourgeois environment he used as a background for "The Doctor's Son and Other Stories," published in 1935. His education was scattered but sufficient to earn him a diploma. Altho he started to make his way in this world as an engineer, a prospective writer's restlessness led him to work variously as a boat steward, freight clerk, soda jerker, gas meter reader, amusement park guard, and day laborer in a steel mill. His literary activity began when the late Heywood Broun hired him as a secretary. In time he came to write criticisms and features for newspapers and periodicals, and for one brief episode he edited the Pittsburgh Bulletin-Index. In 1934 his first novel, "Appointment in Samara," appeared, startling the critics and public with the veracity of its dialog and characterization. This was followed by "Butterfield-8" and other works, which faithfully and depressingly depicted certain morally bankrupt strata in American society.

John O'Hara.

Largely thru the efforts of Margaret Rice, secretary-manager of the Society of Allied Arts of Milwaukee and manager of the Pabst theater there, the society has accumulated the largest subscription list to date for the series of plays it is offering this season in the neighboring Wisconsin city. The number of subscribers was close to four thousand, which is far from the lowest total achieved by other guild cities. The Milwaukee season began with the guild's revival of "The Rivals" and continued with "Arsenic and Old Lace" [the Laura Hope Crews-Effie Shannon-Erich von Stroheim company seen in Chicago], which closes a five day run tonight. What their next attractions will be has not yet been announced.

Odds and ends: Katharine Cornell gives the world première of her latest production tomorrow night in San Francisco. It is Henri Bernstein's "Rose Burke." On its way east the play will be shown in Milwaukee [Feb. 13 and 14], but not Chicago. . . . "Lady in the Dark," with Gertrude Lawrence, may come to Chicago next September. A major problem for this production is the transportation and installation of its four revolving stages. . . . When Max Gordon completes his Hollywood chores in June, he will start casting three road companies of "Junior Miss," the comedy success based on Sally Benson's stories. One will naturally play Chicago. . . . "Watch on the Rhine" expects to be on the road by March 1. Some weeks thereafter it is due in Chicago on the American Theater society and Theater Guild subscription series. A week from tonight it plays a "command performance" in Washington, D. C., to celebrate the President's birthday. . . . John Van Druten's "Old Acquaintance" may go on tour after all. If so, Jane Cowl will be back in the rôle she created. . . . Judy Parrish and Elfrida Derwent complete the quintet of players needed for the local company of "Angel Street." . . . The Hammerstein-Romberg operetta, "Sunny River," plans to travel as [a] a regular legitimate attraction with a revised libretto, or [b] a vaudeville unit with a condensed book. In either case the scenic investiture will be cut down. . . . That west coast musical based on "The Patsy" and called "Patricia" still wants to journey hither. Like most musicals it is having book trouble, and changes are in order.

Two openings tomorrow night bring to the fore some personalities who have not been seen on local stages for some time. In "Panama Hattie" Arthur Treacher returns from over a decade in the films to contribute a major share of the musical's fun. He enacts a type of rôle over which he has a monopoly—the imperturbable English butler. Treacher has not always played such a part, however. An Englishman by birth, he was preparing for the legal profession when the first World war broke out. After serving in it with distinction he decided the theater was more exciting than law and embarked on another career in the chorus of a 1919 musical known as "Maggie." In a short time he worked his way up to the lead in a revival of the "The Better 'Ole" and eventually to serving as Mary Nash's leading man in "The Man Who Came Back." On this side of the Atlantic he has played in "The Great Temptations," "The Madcap," "The Silent House," "Wonder Bar" and "The Cat and the Fiddle." His film career includes a brief engagement in 1930 ["The Battle of Paris"] and then an uninterrupted series of appearances from 1934 ["Hollywood Party"] to 1940 ["Brother Rat and a Baby"].

Contrary to a statement first made in these columns, Richard Waring, who plays the gifted Welsh youth in "The Corn Is Green," has been seen here before. Just once, tho, and that behind the headdress and elaborate costume of the White Rabbit in Eva Le Gallienne's production of "Alice in Wonderland." His stage training began in Miss Le Gallienne's famous repertory company — Burgess Meredith and Jules Garfield were fellow apprentices — facing the footlights first as a drummer boy in "Romeo and Juliet." Within two years he was playing Romeo and such similar leads as Armand in "Camille." Outside of the repertory group he has portrayed John Wilkes Booth in "The Man Who Killed Lincoln" and a neurotic murderer in "At the Stroke of Twelve." His current rôle demands a Welsh brogue and occasionally some Welsh itself. These come easy to him since he spent some of his boyhood years in Cardiff, Wales, altho born in Buckinghamshire, England. At one time he studied at the Westminster School of Art in London, when he thought to follow in the footsteps of his portrait painting father, Thomas E. Stephens.

Cugat Features Latin Rhythms in Empire Room

By Will Davidson.

X marks the spot.

The X is Xavier Cugat; the spot is the Empire room of the Palmer House; and rhumba rending Mr. Cugat marks the Empire room as being the current home of the hip parade.

Cugat's 18 musicians and entertainers can provide a modified and fairly gentle form of swing for the benefit of those who have as yet not fallen under the spell of torrid zone tempos, but they are most happily at home while kicking the conga around. There's Chino, for instance, who does nothing but manipulate the maraccas—but who is a supreme artist at it, and a lively entertainer. There's Miguelito Valdez, called by Cugat the finest exponent of Afro-Cuban songs. Certainly Mr. Valdez gives jungle jive a most amazing presentation. And there is Lina Romay, who should be unanimous choice for Miss Mexico. She is an ideal singer for Mr. Cugat. The maestro has done a commendable job in building a band, and if you don't mind going home with your brain doing a one-two-three-kick, you'll find his orchestra a lively and colorful thing to watch.

Miss Merriel Abbott earns an Oscar for the loveliest production number of her or a good many other persons' careers—the graceful, exquisitely costumed, and breathtakingly lighted "Stardust" number. Her "Samba" routine is excellent, too, making this as fine a dancing show as Empire room guests have seen.

With this as a feature the supporting floor show is entirely adequate. Cedric and Algy are unusual strong men, with a flair for quiet comedy; Cardini's magic is the same as ever; the Six Lovely Ladies sing a neat background for the Abbott numbers. But star of the show is Jayne Di Gatanos, as beautiful and talented a dancer as Chicago has seen in years. With her partner, Adam, she presents a repertoire of exquisite numbers. Her costumes are inspired.

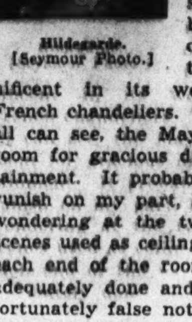
One of Chicago's oldest dining rooms now is Chicago's newest—the Mayfair room in the Blackstone hotel. There is aristocracy in its chartreuse draperies and dubonnet-hung walls; there is dignity in its Prince of Wales plume accents, its white, satiny leather banquettes and chairs; there is a touch of the magnificent in its well remembered French chandeliers. Terraced so that all can see, the Mayfair is an ideal room for gracious dining and entertainment. It probably is a bit picayunish on my part, but I can't help wondering at the two 18th century scenes used as ceiling high murals at each end of the room. They are inadequately done and intrude an unfortunately false note into an otherwise exquisite decor.



Hildegarde.
[Seymour Photo.]

Into this sumptuous room floats the peripatetic Hildegarde, hailed as "The Lovely," fragilely gay, and preceded by billows of tulle, sequins, and applause. The darling of the Pol Roger set is a consumate artist. She has developed cheerleading into a vocal ballet form, and has the knack of making the subtle very, very obvious.

Occassionally, Hildegarde does sit down. Singing to her own piano accompaniment, she's gorgeous. "The Things I Love" and "The Last Time I Saw Paris" are beautifully done. And "Farming," "How Long Can a Lady Resist," and "My Cousin from Milwaukee" are good fun.

Music for the Mayfair is played by that very show wise and genteel gent, Emile Coleman. It is excellent dance music and delightful to dine to.

As much a part of the room as the beautiful decor is Emile, the magnificent maitre. He's as genuine and refreshing as a June day in Kushnact, in his own beloved Switzerland.

Operettas Sung by Marion Claire in New Record Album

Marion Claire, soprano star of W-G-N's nationally popular operetta series, makes her phonographic debut in a new album of three Red Seal records just released by Victor. In six melodious operetta selections the soprano is accompanied by Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N, and the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus.

Marion Claire.
[Seymour Photo.]

Three sides are devoted to favorite airs from Victor Herbert scores—"Romany Life," from "The Fortune Teller"; the "Italian Street Song," from "Naughty Marietta," and "The Angelus," from "Sweethearts." The other three faces contain "Melody of Love," a lilting waltz from Franz Lehar's "Gypsy Love"; "Love Has Found My Heart," from Emmerich Kalman's "Countess Maritza," and "O Promise Me," from Reginald De Koven's "Robin Hood."

The recordings are strikingly successful in catching and reproducing the warmth and brilliance of Miss Claire's voice. Perhaps the most sparkling of all is the "Italian Street Song," in which the singer's high notes are beautifully projected above the animated singing of the chorus.

Those who love waltzes will be attracted by the Lehar and Kalman selections, for the music is in the best operetta tradition—lively, flowing, and graceful. Miss Claire, whose greatest success on the legitimate stage was in "The Great Waltz," has a way with a waltz tune, and these are representative of her inviting style.

In the record coupling "O Promise Me" and "The Angelus," Miss Claire strikes a note of sentiment, and accompanying parts are elaborately harmonized in a special arrangement for chorus and orchestra. "Romany Life" is a dashing gypsy tune.

Mr. Weber conducts the orchestra with his usual command of all the musical resources, providing accompaniments which are rich and sonorous and yet both supple and well balanced. The chorus presents its contributions with precision and excellent tone.

The set of records profits from the most up to date recording methods. The music will give continued pleasure to thousands of regular listeners to the W-G-N operetta broadcasts, for each record is a faithful and complete re-creation of a memorable moment in light music.

Two Noted Instrumentalists Top Week's Musical Program

Horowitz and Milstein at Orchestra Hall

By Edward Barry.

The names of two top quality instrumentalists dominate the week's announcements from Orchestra hall. The pianist, Vladimir Horowitz, will be heard in a recital this afternoon. The violinist, Nathan Milstein, will appear as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra under Hans Lange's direction next Thursday night and Friday afternoon.

Vladimir Horowitz.

Superficially, there are many resemblances between Horowitz and Milstein and many neat parallelisms in their careers. They were born in the same country [Russia] in the same year [1904]. They invaded western Europe at almost the same time [Horowitz in 1924, Milstein in 1925]. They made their American debuts in the same year [1928]. Both, by dint of tremendous industry, absolute integrity, and unique suitability to their respective mediums, have come to occupy positions at the very top of their profession.

But basically—and therefore artistically—the two are worlds apart. Horowitz is one of the most awe inspiring bundles of nerves that even this jittery generation can boast. He is full of an electrical energy that sets the very air around him crackling. Milstein, by contrast, is almost placid, almost the contemplative type.

• • •

A Horowitz performance can be so exciting as to leave a listener limp and bedraggled. The pianist's intenseness is contagious. He is determined that the music shall mean to a listener what it means to him, and his interpretations have a vividness and an overwhelming quality that cannot be imagined but must be experienced. He presses the piano to the very margins of its expressive power, and sometimes seems to be raging inwardly at the limitations of this thing of wood and steel thru which he must make his communications.

Listening to Horowitz, one has the feeling that, altho the piece has doubtless been thought thru conscientiously and its general character grasped, the most electrifying ideas are those which come to the pianist in the actual fever of performance. A slight change of pace or a fine modification of a tone coloring—devices whose very subtlety precludes their being worked out in detail in advance—will suddenly fill a listener with a Dionysian frenzy and give him the impression that his musical horizons have been pushed back violently.

Do not jump to the conclusion that it is only in the most highly personalized and romantic music that these miracles can be expected. Any one who heard that stupendous performance of the Brahms second concerto last winter knows that such is not the case.

Milstein's imagination is less fevered but not less profound. As befits one whose temperament led him to choose for his medium not a percussive but a bowed instrument, his performances are usually smaller of scale and more simply lyrical [Horowitz can be lyrical, too, but it is a lyricism that suggests temporarily banked fires rather than actual repose and contemplation].

Milstein has a commanding power, but this power derives not from brilliance of style and address but from a perfectly integrated musical conception. A listener feels that the violinist has made up his mind about a work before he walks upon the stage, and that everything he will do with it is the result of painstaking thought. The painstaking thought has ,of course, been illumined by lively imagination, for no amount of mere diligence can suffice to wrest a sound musical conception from the cold bars of a score, but at least the preparation has been of the study rather than of the stage.

• • •

For those who glory in homey facts about the lives of great artists, here are a few such cribbed from David Ewen's invaluable "Living Musicians."

Horowitz practices not more than three or four hours a day, but he plays the piano a great deal. Among nonmusical activities his favorites are mountain climbing and movie going. He is a teetotaler except for an occasional glass of wine. He keeps close to him a portrait of Liszt, and he looked at it for luck before he walked upon the stage of Carnegie hall for his American debut.

Milstein is a water colorist, a mimic, and a bridge and ping pong player. At the latter game he once defeated even the redoubtable Jascha Heifetz, who is said to be musicdom's champion ping pong player.

• • •

Horowitz' program this afternoon will begin, so the announcement says, with "The Star Spangled Banner." Since last summer the anthem, by union fiat, has opened all orchestral concerts, but the idea of solo pianists and violinists playing it [and, presumably, vocal recitalists singing it] is a novel one.

The program also promises four Scarlatti sonatas; Chopin's fantasy-polonaise, B-minor scherzo, and F-minor and C-sharp minor mazurkas; Prokofieff's sixth sonata [new to Chicago], Liszt's "Sonnetto del Petrarca," and Horowitz' arrangement of Liszt's arrangement of Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre" [also new to Chicago].

• • •

For reasons which are doubtless clear to the management but which elude outsiders, the Chicago Symphony orchestra is turning this season into a preparation for the celebration of the 102d anniversary of Tschaikowsky's birth [next May 7]. Not content with two or three performances so far of the "Manfred" symphony, the orchestra is scheduling an all-Tschaikowsky program for next Thursday and Friday. And when Horowitz returns in February to appear with the orchestra, guess what he is going to play? The concerto No. 1 in B-flat minor, by Tschaikowsky!

The Chicago Symphony orchestra's activities this week will include a children's concert Wednesday afternoon, the weekly subscription concerts Thursday night and Friday afternoon, and a popular concert Saturday night. Frederick Stock will conduct Wednesday and Saturday, Mr. Lange Thursday and Friday. Programs for the adult concerts follow:

Thursday at 8:15 and Friday at 2:15.

Introduction and Fugue, from Suite No. 1, D minor	Tschaikowsky
Symphony No. 6, B minor ["Pathetic"]	Tschaikowsky
Concerto for Violin, D major	Tschaikowsky

Robert Rayfield, organist, and Raymond Niwa, violinist, will give a joint recital in Kimball hall tomorrow night. They are presented by the Society of American Musicians as two of the winners of its Young Artists contest for last season. Mr. Rayfield has done all his studying locally, holding at one time a Van Duesen organ scholarship. He has toured extensively in the south and central states and is organist of one of the Beverly Hills churches. George Rott will accompany Mr. Niwa, and the program is as follows:

Mr. Rayfield.
Ciaconna	Vitali
Mr. Niwa.
Chorale, A Minor	Franck
Mr. Rayfield.
Praeludium and Allegro	Kreisler

Illinois WPA Symphony orchestra. Daniel Saidenberg leads the orchestra tomorrow for the second consecutive Monday at the 8th Street theater. Only three works comprise the program, which opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 85, in B-flat major, known as "The Queen of France." Eric DeLamarter's Symphony No. 2, in B minor, subtitled "After Walt Whitman," and Elgar's Concerto in B minor for violin and orchestra complete the program in that order. Mr. DeLamarter's work has been played here only once before, in the 1925-'26 season by the Chicago Symphony. In the Elgar concerto David Moll, a youthful member of the same symphony, will be the soloist.

David Moll.

Henry Purmort Eames. The Woman's University Club of Chicago will sponsor a lecture by Mr. Eames, Chicago pianist, composer and pedagog, on "Paderewski, My Friend and Teacher—Memories and Music of a Great Man." Arcule G. Sheasby, head of the violin department in the Northwestern university music school, will play the violin arrangement of the Paderewski sonata as part of the evening's program, which will be held in Curtiss hall on Friday.

Frank Mannheimer. The American pianist, a one time pupil of the great Tobias Matthay, will give a recital in the Arts club on Monday afternoon under the auspices of the Musicians Club of Women. Once an extensive recitalist, he has lately devoted his time to conducting master classes at the Minneapolis College of Music. His program:

Suite, D Major	Vinci-Mannheimer
Adagio	Bach-Hess
Sonata, C Major, Opus 2, No. 3	Beethoven
Kreisleriana, Opus 16	Schumann
Bourée, Opus 14	Roussel

Toccata	Ravel

Sergei Rachmaninoff. The great Russian pianist gives his postponed recital in the Civic Opera house next Sunday afternoon.

The Budapest string quartet plays in the Elm Place school auditorium on Saturday night at 8:30 under the auspices of Mrs. Henry Getz of Highland Park.

Claudio Arrau to Play with Chicago Symphony

Because of continued illness Edward Collins, Chicago pianist and composer, will not play with the Chicago Symphony on March 5 and 6 as originally planned. His place will be taken by Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist, whose appearances with the orchestra on Jan. 1 and 2 won him deserved ovations.

Purposes of New Dance Magazine Are Outlined

A new dance magazine called Dance Index will issue its inaugural copy in January. Since the purposes of this periodical are unique and pertain to the general public rather than to the specific profession, it is worthy of extended announcement. Lincoln Kirstein, author of books on the dance and a ballet impresario, is the publisher. The editorial board will consist of Mr. Kirstein, Paul Magriel, curator of the dance archives at the Museum of Modern Art, and Baird Hastings, music editor of the American Dancer magazine. The publication office is at 637 Madison avenue, New York City. A description of Dance Index by its editors follows:

"The contents of the first year will be mainly devoted to a series of monographs on dancing in North and South America by leading authorities. Each will be illustrated from unpublished iconography in the dance archieves of the Museum of Modern Art or other important public and private collections. Later numbers will deal with dancing in other parts of the world. In addition to these articles, Dance Index will contain information regarding local dance activities; a calendar of theatrical events, reviews of new books, records, films, music, and exhibitions. It will be addressed to the general dance audience. It will be in no way a trade publication."

CLASSICAL RECORDINGS

If there is any falling off in Wagner's popularity at this time the Victor people, happily, are unaware of it. They have just released two impressive albums of his music.

One of them, in six parts, contains Siegfried's Rhine Journey and the Funeral Music from "Twilight of the Gods." The recording was made by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony orchestra. That heroic quality which no other composer has been able to produce so successfully is gloriously projected in the Toscanini performance. Phrases fall naturally into their expressive shapes and tone is vibrant and glowing.

The other Wagner item, a large two pocket album, bears the title "Three Deathless Songs," and consists of "Im Treibhaus," "Schmerzen," and "Träume." These are all from the song cycle written to poems by Mathilde Wesendonck, who was important in Wagner's life at the time "Tristan and Isolde" was being composed. Motives from the third act of "Tristan" occur in "Im Treibhaus" and some of the love music in the second act in "Träume," for both of these songs were written as studies for the music drama. The songs are recorded by the distinguished American soprano, Helen Traubel, with Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia orchestra.

Good Morning!

Attention, Sanders fans! You who have been knocking on the doors of this department demanding information as to WHEN George would appear again as the "Saint."

He ain't—as I understand it. But "The Gay Falcon," I'm told, is the first picture of a new sleuth series in which Mr. Sanders will be featured. . . . So here's where you relax and smile, smile, smile. [I hope.]

• • •

The hero is Gay Laurence, famous for exploits in crime detection, engaged to a hot tempered eye-athletic maiden [Anne Hunter looks and acts so much like Anne Rutherford she might as well be the latter!] but with a roving eye and no inhibitions re a casual flirtation now and then. . . . He's asked by Helen Reed, lovely secretary to Maxine Wood, a noted Manhattan party giver, to solve the mystery of jewel robberies that are constantly occurring at Miss Wood's functions. . . . Because Helen has oomph and Gay DOES like detecting, he accepts the commission. . . .

And from that time forth is in and out of frying pans, romantic, melodramatic, and comical, to the tempestuous finale that sees one girl happy in his arms, the while the green-eyed monster lunches on a couple of other dames. . . .

• • •

It's all lighthearted and merry and at times quite baffling. I state with some pride that I-HAD-MY-SUSPICIONS early in the game—and that I guessed RIGHT [ly].

Well—have fun, Sanders fans!

See you tomorrow.

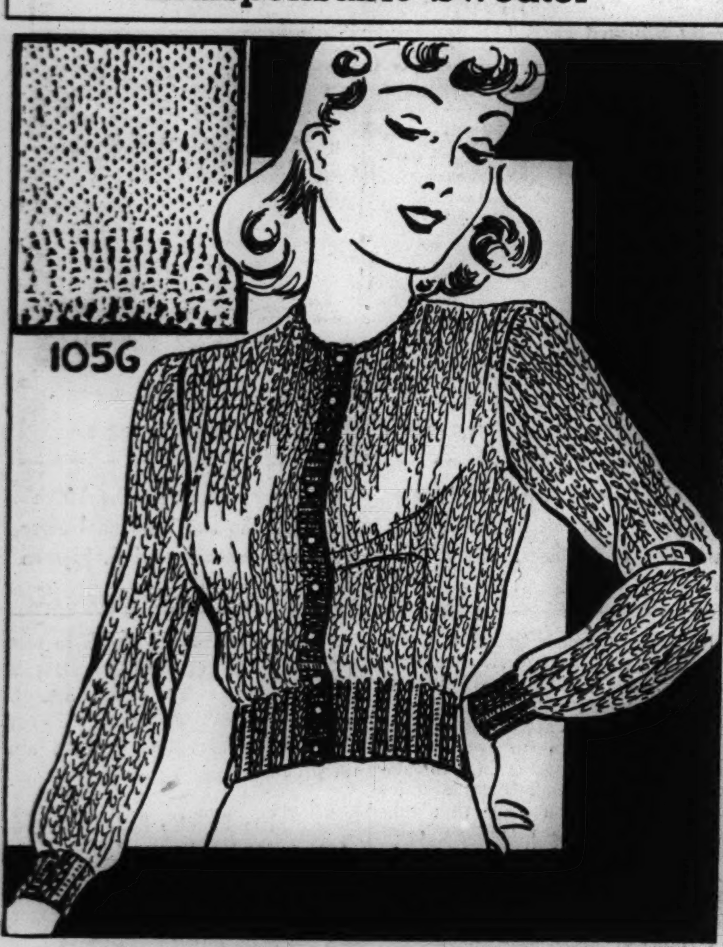
These Recipes Are Economical in a Tasty Way

Indispensable Sweater



By Jean Macdonald.

A knitted jacket is an almost indispensable wardrobe item. It is an easy knitting job, and has ribbing at the waistband, with the same stitch carrying out the snug fitting sleeve. It may be buttoned up the front or worn "hind side forward" and buttoned down the back. Directions are available in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measurements.

For instructions in knitting the sweater, No. 1056, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Timely Tips on Etiquet for Party-Goers

By Helen Bartlett.

If conversational art is your goal, there are several points of conversational etiquet which you should write on your cuff before the party.

Be a good story teller, but don't tell the same story to the same people time after time. No matter how well it's told, it loses its charm and you lose your reputation as a good companion.

Don't overwork your story telling in general. No matter how good the conversation, if it is monopolized by one individual it becomes monotonous and other guests also who might have something to say begin to champ at the bit. It is necessary to keep up your end of the conversation, but it is also quite as vital to listen to, and be interested in, the comments of others.

At a party, be a good sport by entering into the entertainment planned by the hostess enthusiastically even tho it is "poison" to you. Be the best drop-the-handkerchiefer or puss-in-the-corner that ever lived.

And don't forget to go home. The best party in the world has to come to an end, and attempting to prolong it after it has begun to fade is sheer folly. When it is time to say goodby, do so [this should be some time before the hostess begins to yawn]. Speak your piece to the hostess, and leave without taking a half hour to do it, keeping everybody standing and chilled to the bone while you hold the front door wide open.

Contract According to Culbertson

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

[Copyright: 1942: By Ely Culbertson.]

Bridge is not a game for the rugged individualist unless he is so fortunate as to "hold the deck" and become the declarer in every deal. Normally, a player is on defense about half the time, and then his success depends squarely on his ability to run in double harness. Opportunities for individual defensive brilliancy are extremely rare; 95 per cent of the time both defenders must coöperate perfectly in order to achieve the best result. This point is well exemplified by George Baxter of London, England, writing in the Bridge World magazine:

"Contracts of three no trump, unless they are laydown, commonly resolve themselves into a struggle between the opposing sides to determine which can establish its long suit first. The defending side always has the advantage of the lead, the declaring side the advantage of possessing the balance of high cards, and the opportunity, thru the exposure of the dummy, of combining its 26 cards to the best advantage. All the devices, such as unblocking and entry creating plays, which help in the establishment of long suits, are thus easier for the declarer to execute than for the defenders, who to a certain extent have to work in the dark. However, the use of a little imagination will often overcome this handicap, as will be seen from the hand which follows:

NORTH
♥ A 5
♦ Q 10 3
♣ A Q 7 3

WEST
♠ J 9 5 3
♥ J 9 6

♣ 10 8 5

SOUTH
♠ K 4 2
♥ Q 10 8 7 2

♣ J 6

"North opened the bidding with one club, East overcalled with one diamond, and South said one heart. North then bid one spade, South one no trump, North two no trump, and South raised to game.

"West duly opened a diamond, and as dummy played low, East correctly finessed the nine. As it would not avail him to hold off this trick, South won with the king, and played a small heart to the ace; he saw that his only hope lay in establishing the hearts without letting West into the lead to play another diamond thru the dummy. As the cards lie this plan would be successful nine times out of 10; the second trick would be won by the queen, and East would have to win the third round with the king. In this instance, however, East obstructed this maneuver by playing his king under the ace. He reasoned that the only hope of defeating the contract lay in finding West with the jack of hearts, so that it was essential to make that card an entry for him.

"As a result of East's play of the heart king under the ace, South could not establish the suit without losing a trick to West, and the diamond lead then enabled the defense to set the contract one trick.

"Observe that South could have insured the game by putting up the diamond queen on the first trick; this play is often missed even by good players.

* * *

NORTH
♠ K J 5
♥ 10 7 5
♦ A Q 10 6 4
♣ Q 6

WEST
♠ A 10 6 4 2
♥ K 8 6 3
♦ 7 2
♣ A 8

EAST
♠ Q
♥ J 9 4 2
♦ J 9 5
♣ K J 9 7 5

SOUTH
♠ 9 8 7 3
♥ A Q
♦ K 8 3
♣ 10 4 3 2

"Neither side was vulnerable and East dealt. After two passes West opened with one spade; North passed, East bid one no trump, and after this had been passed by South and West, North, on his exiguous holding, interposed a double. East passed, and holding the South cards I decided to pass also, thinking that the opponents would have their work cut out to make one notrump. West also passed, so the contract was one notrump doubled.

"I opened my fourth best club, the queen fell to the king, dummy was entered with the ace of clubs, and a small spade led, which my partner passed, declarer winning with the queen. The king and another club were then played, and I was now in the lead after four tricks had been won by the declarer. I played a low spade, dummy played low and North won with the jack and returned a diamond. We ran off four tricks in this suit, and the position then was:

North
♠ K
♥ 10
♦ 4
♣ None

West
♠ A
♥ K 8
♦ None
♣ None

East
♠ None
♥ J 9 4
♦ None
♣ None

South
♠ 9
♥ A Q
♦ None
♣ None

"It will be seen that when North plays his last diamond, the dummy is squeezed; which ever card is thrown we make the remaining tricks. The contract was thus defeated 500 points, altho the high cards are almost equally divided between the two sides."

Fashions

By Angela

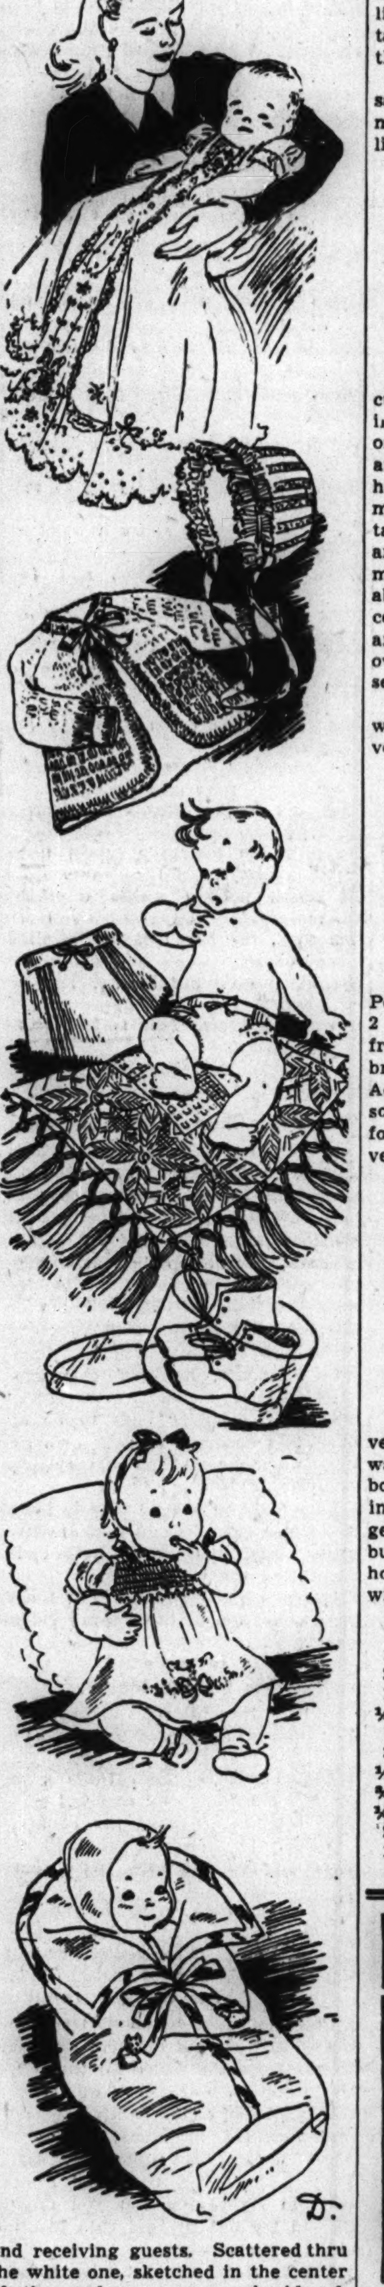
For the day of the christening and the Sundays thereafter there's a quaint, long dress for the baby on his first social engagement. It's a fragile cotton dress, all handmade with dainty scallops, eyelets, bowknots and a lace edged panel down the front, with a slip the same length and design to accompany it. Philippine hand work it is, the kind that won't be found in a month or two when the present supply of imported articles is exhausted. At least, it won't be found at the price of under $6.

The little bonnet to be worn on equally important occasions is made of alternate strips of satin ribbon and lace insertion, with a fluffy ruffle to frame the face.

The loosely woven sack is extremely lightweight, comfortable to wear and easy to put on. Pink and white or blue and white.

Little woolen blotters efficiently take the place of rubber panties. Seventy-nine cents.

Every baby needs a shawl to be wrapped around him when he is up and receiving guests. Scattered thru the white one, sketched in the center of the column, are embroidered, miniature, pink rosebuds. The all wool shawl boasts hand-tied fringe.



Packaged in a tiny cellophane bandbox you will find felt boots with four eyelets for lacing. Available in white, pink, or blue. Under $1.

• • •

When the baby girl is five or six months old, show her off in a white silk dress with a smock yoke and dainty ribbon bows at the shoulder.

A washable fleece bunting will take "the skipper" thru all the stages of winter weather without permitting him a single goose pimple. There isn't a chance for a whiff of cold air to get past his double chin because of the separate hood which is removable and also self-adjustable to the length of the baby as he grows inch by inch. Under $2.

You Can Cut Corners, Yet Be Well Fed

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1942: By the Chicago Tribune.]

We women are going to put away our extravagant and lovely recipes until the war is over. Meanwhile, we shall collect economical, practical, and simple dishes and use them to keep the family dinner table amply supplied with nutritious food.

Luckily for all of us, the plain, well cooked, inexpensive foods are likely to have greater food value than the luxury edibles. So we needn't feel a bit sorry for ourselves. Why should we, when we can have such savory treats as may be made from these recipes?

SPECIAL CORNED BEEF.

Cover 4 pound [or larger] piece of corned beef brisket with water and simmer until tender, about 3½-4 hours. Do not allow water actually to boil. It should only bubble gently if the meat is to be tender. Remove cooked corned beef from liquid and rub it all over with brown sugar. Brown in a 400 degree oven and serve like a roast. Cook potatoes and vegetables, such as carrots and turnips, in the liquid, and serve them separately.

Use leftover cold corned beef in sandwiches. Horseradish or mustard mayonnaise and lettuce will make delicious corned beef sandwiches.

Veal Stew Budget Supper.

[Serves Six.]

2 pounds veal neck or shoulder
Flour for dredging
Salt, pepper
¼ cup lard
6 carrots
6 onions
6 medium potatoes

Wipe veal with damp cloth, and cut into six pieces for serving. Roll in seasoned flour. Brown in hot lard on all sides. Add 2 cups water, cover and let simmer very gently for 1½ hours. Add prepared vegetables and more water if necessary. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and continue to cook gently until meat and vegetables are tender, about an hour longer. Place meat in center of platter with vegetables around it. Pour gravy left in pan over meat, or if there is plenty of it, serve it separately in a bowl.

The preceding recipe may be used with beef or lamb, as well as with veal.

Spiced Pot Roast.

[Serves six or more.]

4 pound pot roast
1 tablespoon salt
2 onions, sliced
1 bay leaf
1 cup brown sugar
⅝ cup vinegar
½ cup catsup

Combine onions and seasonings. Pour over meat, cover, and let stand 2 hours, turning once. Remove meat from liquid, sprinkle with flour, and brown in a little hot fat, on all sides. Add seasonings in which meat was soaked. Cover pot and cook gently for about 3 hours, or until meat is very tender. Good hot or cold.

Stewed Heart with Rice.

[Serves Six.]

1 beef heart, about 3 pounds
1½ teaspoons salt
3 or 4 peppercorns
1 small onion, cubed
2 carrots, cubed
1 stalk celery
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vinegar

Wash heart, remove fibers and veins, cut into pieces, and cover with water for 15 minutes. Drain and add boiling water to cover, and seasonings. Add vegetables and simmer gently for 3-4 hours. Mix flour, melted butter, salt, and vinegar, and add to hot stew. Stir until thickened. Serve with steamed or boiled rice.

Ham, Cheese, and Noodle Ring.

[Serves Six.]

1 8 ounce package noodles
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup hot milk
3 eggs, separated
½ cup grated cheese
¾ cup chopped leftover cooked ham
¼ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon chopped onion

Cook noodles until tender in boiling water. Add other ingredients, beating egg yolks and whites separately, and folding in whites last. Pour into well greased 1½ quart ring mold. Place in pan of hot water. Bake 30 minutes, or until firm, in 325 degree oven. Fill center of ring with creamed green vegetable.

Your Handwriting

BY SHIRLEY SPENCER.

We can never doubt Eddie Rickenbacker's courage. He has proved it too many times, so for me to say his handwriting reveals it is not saying anything we don't all know. But perhaps you would be interested in knowing how courage is shown in handwriting, since it's a popular trait just now.

Physical courage is shown by heavy pressure, by firm, positive strokes, and, in many cases of outstanding courage, by vigorous horizontal strokes such as we see on the end of Mr. Rickenbacker's signature. Also note the bold capitals and the pronounced and heightened stroke of the "k's." He doesn't back down for any one!

Eddie Rickenbacker

Persons who are not afraid of life, or death, strike out boldly, and this trait is revealed by the positive and direct way they pen their words on paper. No quibbling, no indecision, no hesitation. They go into action with full steam up.

Hand Knitted Dresses Are Sensible Wardrobe Luxury

Models Will Retain Smart Look for Years

By Rea Seeger.

Hand knitted clothes, such as those sketched, are logical luxuries for any wardrobe. They are knitted costumes of great distinction and designed with a certain individuality far removed from the old-time knitted creations. For instance, there isn't a model that will not wear and wear for at least four seasons ahead, and look just as smart, just as slender, and just as high fashion the last hour of use as it appears now. That is a prime consideration now in jittery and uncertain times.

These stunning hand knits never sag, they are as expertly made as any other dress in fine wool, satin, crêpe. Even the details are as carefully worked as in dresses of other fabrics. There are dressmaker details, such as panels, flares, simulated plaits, collars, cuffs, pockets, and bands liberally used as part of each costume. The colors are fascinating neutrals, whites, pastels, and street colors with plenty of bright strong shades for contrast duty. There are dinner clothes the equal of any super sophisticated creation in clinging crêpe or velvet, and every piece is hand knit.

• • •

Many interesting patterns or designs are featured, ribbed diagonals, vertical ribs in contrast to horizontal ribbing, nubby textures, or knotted effects with smooth flat surfaces, and so on, with the subtle contrast of plain knitting worked with fancy stitches, all in the same model. You'll find streamlined, one-piece dresses effectively buttoned in the same color and knitted material of the dress; simulated two-piece models with short or long sleeves in the jacket top; actual two-piece affairs of flared skirt and jacket top; and the dress and swagger coat combine.

One of the most unusual collections of such hand knitted costumes is featured in a smart Chicago shop for women. Now on display is a particularly timely showing of high colors and pastels for resort wardrobes, and an equally eye-catching collection of bright and street colors to wear now under winter coats of fabric or fur. They are ideal clothes for town or country wardrobes. Besides being colorful and smart, such knits are famous for their casual swank and complete comfort for wearing thruout the busiest day of the average active woman.

• • •

Indisputably more expensive than the less expertly knit models, these clothes are the best finds of the times, ready for the most strenuous demands of the present stirring, eventful activities of all women.

Besides the very handsome models knitted in soft, tho sturdy, wools, there are beautiful chenilles, and those fascinating creations knitted entirely of narrow silk ribbon. Until you see these last-mentioned models, you will not have realized how smart such costumes can appear under your slightly boresome winter wardrobe. The chenilles have that soft, flattering effect of thin velvet; the silk knits have a super slenderizing dull texture and really accentuate the handmade effect more than either wool yarn or the chenille.

Five new models sketched illustrate only a few of the very distinctive models in this large collection. Others just as swank, just as distinctive, come in a most interesting array of styles, colors, and color combinations. For information, call Superior 0200.

Today's best bet is: Get all the quietness and rest you can negotiate; relax inside; be friendly. Week ahead is one of trials and problems, calling for care rather than headstrong haste; there will be minor benefits along the way, however.

Where to Fix It.

Because man's troubles originate inside himself there is only one place where they can be remedied when man really wants to do it. That place is inside himself. And that is a job that must be done by each of us, one at a time. When we are all right inside we will be all right outside. The world will be a better place when just one more person has made himself better within.

I find that when I want to grate any cheese I can do it much more easily if I first chill the cheese.

MRS. H. ROBINSON, Chicago.

Before the holiday season I noticed that nap had worn off of an oldish rug in one corner of our den. So I took a little dye the color of the rug and sprayed it on with an insect sprayer, very lightly, of course. This helped and the worn spot looks much better now.

MRS. GEORGE BRIGGS, Chicago.

Instead of putting my floor and dust cloths and my cleaning cloths aside for the weekly wash I put them into lukewarm suds after use, and in this way I can clean them with little effort. I usually soak them for an hour or two, depending on how badly soiled they are.

MRS. T. H., Lansing, Mich.

I would like to see all spectacle cases equipped with the kind of clips found on fountain pens so that for men users the cases could be securely clipped inside of pockets.

JAMES T. H., Chicago.

Now that we are saving newspaper clippings of many kinds—at least I am—why not invent a solution that will keep them from turning yellow? Such a solution would improve the looks of those scrapbooks we will want to turn to five and ten years from now.

MRS. FREDD T——, Aurora, Ill.

If you are ever troubled remembering where books you lend may be "parked," do what I do. Whenever I lend a book I cut a piece of cardboard the size of the book, write on it title and to whom loaned, and slip it into bookcase in place of book that has been removed. In this way I can keep track of where my books have wandered.

MRS. DOROTHY G——,
River Forest, Ill.

Why doesn't some one invent a way to remove "gold" from old picture frames—and also a way to put it to practical use?

JOHN B——, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

[Now—PLEASE—YOUR—idea!]

Bettina Bedwell Says:

The vast fashion industry of the United States has by this time geared itself to the new and drastic demands of our wartime economy. A lot of the styles that were readied for spring have had to be scrapped. Not only the greatly increased restrictions, but the tremendous changes in the way women look at the styles demanded shifts and changes. Old and young and in-between ages are thru with glitter and extravagance and oddity for the duration, the folks in the fashion industry say.

One of the most noticeable changes is in colors that the spring season will see in quantity. There is a practical reason for this. A lot of colors no longer can be produced because of defense priorities. There also is an overwhelming psychological reason, and you women are the power behind it. The demand for black clothes has dropped with the dizzy dip of a dive bomber. This is going to be the biggest blue season in history, they say. Altho the government steps in and demands priority on the particular navy blue used for uniforms, there are many other shades of blue left for fashions, and other pastels will be doing well, too.

Lady of the House

Holiday Echoes.

A northern soldier spending Christmas in the deep south writes that he would gladly trade all the firecrackers, parrots, roses, palms and poinsettias of a southern Christmas for a "handful of icicles, a couple of inches of snow, and bells on frosty air."

Dale Poole, who mourns the careless dumping of Christmas trees on trash heaps, likes to "think that the evening star is the same that once shone atop a tree."

"Discarded Christmas tree,
Shorn of baubles bright;
The fair star that shone
Atop your branches free
Still shines in the sky tonight."

And Frank Babray, homesick for the old days, wonders "why one never sees such old-fashioned fruits as we did of yore. Grandma always had pink fleshed apples in the holiday fruit bowl, as well as blood oranges, pink pomelos, red tamarinds, and pink shaddocks. They seemed to add something to the Christmas season.

"The best variety of the pink fleshed apples was Surprise, and the Ruby was the best blood orange. Today there is pink fleshed grapefruit, red fleshed cantaloupe, and yellow watermelon, but no pink fleshed apples."

The Lady of Our House.

[To Mata]

Out to the kitchen, back to the table—
Our mother does the best she is able;
When brother asks her to fill up his plate,
She hurries so he'll not have to wait.
When some one calls, "May I have drink?"
She darts like a flash to the kitchen sink.
Somebody says, "Hand that to me, please"—
Poor mother can't spare a moment to sneeze!
When the salad's gone, and the meat runs low,
With a bound for a refill she will go.
When mother gets set in her chair once more,
She has to leap up to answer the door.
The fast eaters are soon ready for pie—
She queries, "Mince or pumpkin?" "Both," they cry.
Then out to the kitchen she lightly trips,
To beat the whipping cream until it whips,
At least, nobody wants anything more—
'Tis well, for her feet are swollen and sore.
Because we do not let her rest or play,
Our lady's brown hair is fast turning gray!

Where Are Those Fancy Calendars?

If there are degrees of extinction, the fancy calendars that used to grace the holiday scene appear to have suffered a total and permanent blackout.

There were those dainty little ladylike calendars mounted on padded satin and hung by lovely ribbons or tasseled cords. Blotter calendars—you got a new one each month—friendship calendars, mothers' calendars, hand painted calendars, embroidered ones, tiny calendar pads to be affixed to mountings of your own design and make—O, lots of very arty calendars, indeed!

They were so nice to send in place of "just a card," or to tuck in with gifts. And how they helped in decorating the walls!

[Do you happen to have, or know of, a collection of these fancy calendars?]

The Curious Mouse.

The mouse thot once he'd like to know

Of course, they grow behind the cat!"

War Cake.

Household files get so cluttered! In trying to weed out obsolete material I came upon the recipe for that eggless, milkless, butterless "war cake" that reminded of the heatless, wheatless, meatless, sweetless, and other "less" days of that other world war. They weren't bad then and aren't even in sight now, but you might like to try out the old rule just to aid the food budget.

Put 2 c brown sugar, 2 c hot water, 2 tbsp lard, 1 pkg seedless raisins, cut once, 1 tsp each salt, cinnamon, cloves, into a saucepan and boil the mixture for 5 minutes after it bubbles. When cold add 1 tsp soda dissolved in 1 tsp hot water, and 3 c flour. Bake in 2 loaves for 45 to 50 minutes in slow oven. Better at the end of a week. Keeps longer if you can hide it from the boys. The Stamp Collector

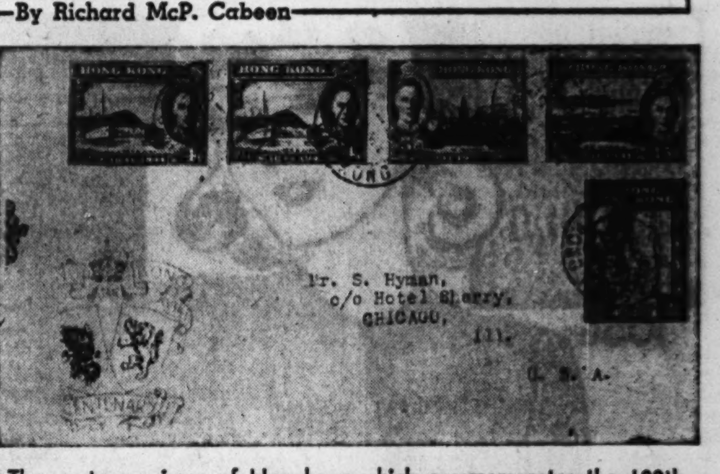
By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps but not about value. The Stamps and Coins advertising column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



The centenary issue of Hongkong which commemorates the 100th anniversary of this British Colony is probably the last issue until after the end of the war. The cover is from the collection of S. Hyman of Chicago.

The name "semipostal" is given to those stamps which are designed to raise money for some purpose in addition to being valid for the prepayment of postage charges. However, when the additional purpose of the stamp is to raise money for war expenses it is classed as a war tax stamp in the Standard catalog.

Originally this division of stamps was called "charity" stamps, for all of the early ones were brought out for the purpose of assisting the Red Cross or some similar enterprise, but in more recent years the additional charges have been for monuments, buildings, etc., and the name has been changed to cover the broader field. A great deal of attention is given to the appearance of the semipostal stamps in order that they will appeal to all collectors and many countries have adopted this method of raising funds for a variety of purposes.

There seems to be no system or logic used in determining the relation between the postage value of the stamp and the additional value. Often they show an equal amount for each purpose but it is more usual for the postage charge to be the larger. It is customary for the stamps to bear an inscription of value which shows both charges, thus—"50c+10c," and in such cases the postage is placed first. In several examples no mention is made of the additional charge, but purchasers understand that the stamps cost several times the stated face value.

Altho Great Britain seldom deviates from the straightforward policy of issuing stamps for postage only, she may be credited with issuing the first semipostal item. This was in 1890 when she issued a penny postal card to mark the jubilee of penny postage. This card was sold for six pence and the extra five pence was credited to a fund for postal employés. In 1879 New South Wales and Victoria followed the lead of the mother country and each issued one penny and two pence half penny stamps in commemoration of the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria. In each case the one penny stamps were sold at one shilling and the two pence half penny stamps at two shillings six pence, or at 12 times face value. The excess realized from the Victoria sales went to a charitable institution while that from New South Wales was applied to an antituberculosis campaign, the first of a long series of stamps for that purpose.

• • •

The next examples of stamps of this class were those issued by Queensland and Victoria in 1900. In each case the stamps had face values of one penny and two pence, but were sold for one shilling and two shillings respectively with the excess going to a patriotic fund being raised in connection with the Boer war. In 1905 Russia issued a set of four values for the benefit of orphans of soldiers killed in the Russo-Japanese war, and in the following year Rumania issued a long set for charitable purposes and the Netherlands brought out two values in the campaign against tuberculosis.

In 1907 Barbados issued a single stamp to raise funds for the sufferers from an earthquake in Kingston in the neighboring colony of Jamaica. During and immediately following the World war, many countries took advantage of semipostal stamps to raise money for disabled soldiers and for other purposes and since that time almost all of the remaining countries have issued such stamps for one purpose or another until today the United States is the only major power which has never issued such a stamp.

In more recent years semipostal air post stamps have been issued and semipostal special delivery and postage due stamps, and the idea has been extended to cover foreign offices of various countries and has been applied to the stamps issued in occupied countries.

The Trading with the Enemy Act has been interpreted to mean that it is illegal to buy or sell any postage stamp issued by any enemy government or by any enemy-controled government after Dec. 7, 1941. For the duration of the war the Scott Publications, Inc., will not list new stamps originating in such countries. It is supposed that the Scott Stamp and Coin company, publishers of Scott's Monthly Journal, will likewise cease to list the new issues from these countries.

The countries included as enemy countries are: Germany, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Bohemia, and Moravia, Slovakia, Denmark, Norway, Finland, France, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Poland, Rumania, Bulgaria, Croatia, Jugo-Slavia, Hungary, Greece, Thailand, and Manchukuo. Included are the colonial possessions of Italy and those of France except such as are identified with the Free French movement. Not included are the latter, the colonies of Belgium and the Netherlands, and the Faroe Islands, a possession of Norway.

It is understood that the act will not prevent the showing of illustrations and the printing of descriptions of stamps from enemy countries.

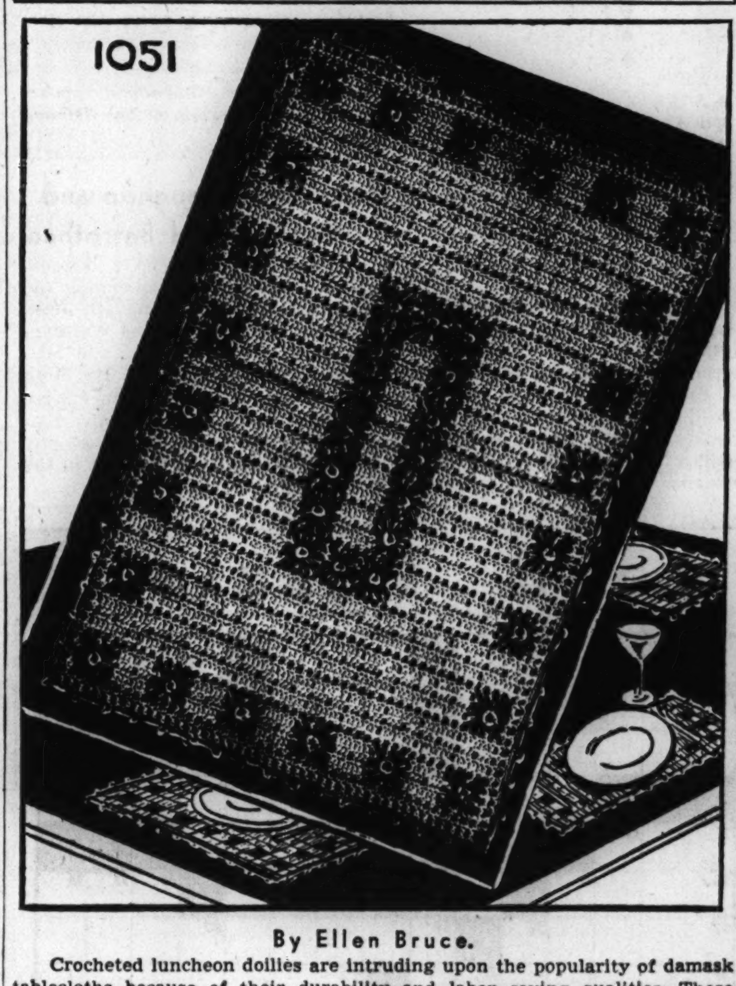
Crocheted Lunch Doilies



By Ellen Bruce.

Crocheted luncheon doilies are intruding upon the popularity of damask tablecloths because of their durability and labor saving qualities. These simple doilies, with an embroidered motif, are created of carpet warp and may be laundered, dried, and put to use again without benefit of an iron. More elaborate doilies may be made from fine linen or cotton thread.

For instructions in crocheting the carpet warp luncheon doilies, No. 1051, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

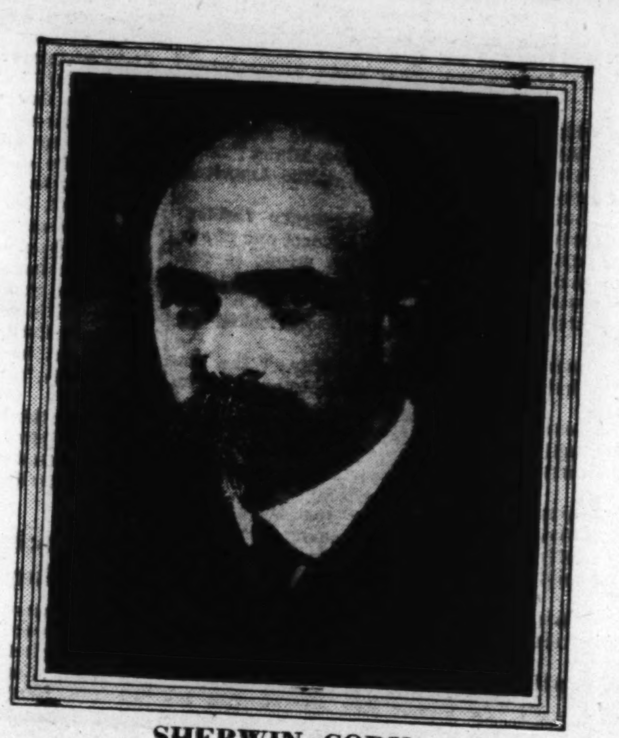
Do You Make These Mistakes in English?

Sherwin Cody's remarkable invention has enabled more than 100,000 people to correct their mistakes in English. Only 15 minutes a day required to improve your speech and writing.

MANY persons use such expressions as "Leave them lay there" and "Mary was invited as well as myself." Still others say "between you and I" instead of "between you and me." It is astonishing how often "who" is used for "whom" and how frequently we hear such glaring mispronunciations as "forMIDable," "aveNOO," and "KEWpon." Few know whether to spell certain words with one or two "c's" or "m's" or "r's" or with "ie" or "ei," and when to use commas in order to make their meaning absolutely clear. Most persons use only common words—colorless, flat, ordinary. Their speech and their letters are lifeless, monotonous, humdrum.



SHERWIN CODY

Why Most People Make Mistakes

What is the reason so many of us are deficient in the use of English and find our careers stunted in consequence? Why is it some cannot spell correctly and others cannot punctuate? Why do so many find themselves at a loss for words to express their meaning adequately? The reason for the deficiency is clear. Sherwin Cody discovered it in scientific tests which he gave thousands of times. Most persons do not write or speak good English simply because they never formed the habit of doing so.

What Cody Did at Gary

The formation of any habit comes only from constant practice. Shakespeare, you may be sure, never studied rules. No one who writes and speaks correctly thinks of rules when he is doing so.

Here is our mother-tongue, a language that has built up our civilization, and without which we should all still be muttering savages! Yet some schools, by wrong methods, have made it a study to be avoided—the hardest of tasks instead of the most fascinating of games. For years this has been a crying disgrace.

In that point lies the real difference between Sherwin Cody and such schools! Here is an illustration: Some years ago Mr. Cody was invited by the author of the famous Gary System of Education to teach English to all upper-grade pupils in Gary, Indiana. By means of unique practice exercises Mr. Cody secured more improvement in these pupils in five weeks than previously had been obtained by similar pupils in two years under old methods. There was no guesswork about these results. They were proved by scientific comparisons. Amazing as this improvement was, more interesting still was the fact that the children were "wild" about the study. It was like playing a game.

Receives Two Salary Increases

"I can frankly say that my last two increases in salary were largely due to improvement in English, as influenced by the course." C. A. P. (Washington)

Great Business and Social Benefits

"I am a secretary and handle a large amount of correspondence. Your course has built up my vocabulary, made me accurate in spelling and punctuation. I now enjoy myself at social functions, knowing that I use proper English and, through your course, can express myself in more colorful language." Miss L. M. L. (Illinois)

From a Minister

"It has proved most beneficial to me as a minister and public speaker. I can highly recommend it." Rev. V. B. A. (California)

Gains New Self-Confidence

"My friends have already noticed a marked improvement in my speech and writing. I am feeling a new confidence that puts me at ease in any company." A. B. (California)

"Has Helped Me—and My Children"

"I wanted to correct my English and thereby help my children acquire correct habits of speech. Your course has not only helped me, but also my children in school." H. I. H. (Oregon)

Finds Course Fascinating

"I am more grateful than I can say. No teaching could be easier, more practical, more absorbing." E. W. (New York)

The basic principle of Mr. Cody's new method is habit-forming. Anyone can learn to write and speak correctly by constantly using the correct forms. But how is one to know in each case what is correct? Mr. Cody solves this problem in a simple, unique, sensible way.

100% Self-Correcting Device

Suppose he himself were standing forever at your elbow. Every time you mispronounced or misspelled a word, every time you violated correct grammatical usage, every time you used the wrong word to express what you meant, suppose you could hear him whisper: "That is wrong, it should be thus and so." In a short time you would habitually use the correct form and the right words in speaking and writing.

If you continued to make the same mistakes over and over again, each time patiently he would tell you what was right. He would, as it were, be an everlasting mentor beside you—a mentor who would not laugh at you, but who would, on the contrary, support and help you. The 100% Self-Correcting Device does exactly this thing. It is Mr. Cody's silent voice behind you, ready to speak out whenever you commit an error. It finds your mistakes and concentrates on them. You do not need to study anything you already know. There are no rules to memorize.

Only 15 Minutes a Day

Nor is there very much to learn. In Mr. Cody's years of experimenting he brought to light some highly astonishing facts about English.

For instance, statistics show that a list of sixty-nine words (with their repetitions) make up more than half of all our speech and letter-writing. Obviously, if one could learn to spell, use and pronounce these words correctly, one would go far toward eliminating incorrect spelling and pronunciation.

Similarly, Mr. Cody proved that there were no more than one dozen fundamental principles of punctuation. If we mastered these principles, there would be no bugbear of punctuation to handicap us in our writing.

Finally he discovered that twenty-five typical errors in grammar constitute nine-tenths of our everyday mistakes. When one has learned to avoid these twenty-five pitfalls, how readily one can obtain that facility of speech which denotes the person of breeding and education!

When the study of English is made so simple, it becomes clear that progress can be made in a very short time. No more than fifteen minutes a day is required. Fifteen minutes, not of study, but of fascinating practice! Mr. Cody's students do their work in any spare moment they can snatch. They do it riding to work or at home. They take fifteen minutes from the time usually spent in profitless reading or amusement. The results really are phenomenal.

Sherwin Cody has placed an excellent command of the English language within the grasp of everyone. Those who take advantage of his method gain something so priceless that it cannot be measured in terms of money. They gain a mark of breeding that cannot be erased as long as they live. They gain a facility in speech that marks them as educated people in whatever society they find themselves. They gain the self-confidence and self-respect which this ability inspires. As for material reward, certainly the importance of good English in the race for success cannot be overestimated. Surely, no one can advance far without it.

FREE—Book on English

It is impossible, in this brief review, to give more than a suggestion of the range of subjects covered by Mr. Cody's new method and of what his practice exercises consist. But those who are interested can find a detailed description in a fascinating little book called "How You Can Master Good English in 15 Minutes a Day." This is published by the Sherwin Cody School of English in Rochester. It can be had by anyone, free upon request. There is no obligation involved in writing for it. The book is more than a prospectus. Unquestionably, it tells one of the most interesting stories about education in English ever written.

INSTALMENT II.

What Has Gone Before Steve Cunningham, a young attache at the American embassy in Brazil, is about to ask Ellen Corning to marry him when he discovers she has deceived him. She is not the harmless free lance writer she pretended to be, but in the pay of a sensation-seeking publisher. Her job is to unearth a dangerous story of international intrigue in industrial diamonds that will play havoc with American-Brazilian diplomacy. Steve does not know that Brintell, an American secretly pro-Nazi, and Schultz, a German agent, are plotting to use either Ellen or Theo, Brintell's wife, to blackmail him into giving confidential information about embassy secrets. While Ellen is in Steve's office Van Hooten, a Brazilian in the diamond business, receives a cable telling him of his son's death in Rotterdam.

STEVE left the embassy and stood on the steps for a moment looking out under the amendoiera trees to the blue waters of Botafogo bay and to the gray-green rock that was Sugar Loaf. A whole restless evening ahead!

The late afternoon was still hot and the hills behind the city held back any breeze. The sound of the sea was loud; this was a lucky city to have its rhythm set to a sea beat. He crossed over to the promenade beside the bay and turned left to the docks. Yesterday, this time, he had been looking forward to marriage. Perhaps what he had thought was love was only homesickness. Ellen was the first pleasant American girl he had met in a long time.

He walked along slowly. Restless, and he knew why! He wanted Ellen and he knew that, too. A man had to be impersonal and unemotional in daily work at the embassy, but that only made his emotional reactions sharper outside. He was lonely and he told himself that he was not the first man nor the last to be lonely in the foreign service. That was his career; he had chosen it himself. One day, perhaps a year off, he would head this way to the docks for the last time to some new post. Then another, and another.

Helsinki, Caracas, even Vladivostok! Never a chance to get roots down in geography. All the more reason for getting them down in emotion. He told himself that his job was dull: writing detailed reports to be filed away in some state department safe, decoding dull dispatches, acting as office boy for American business men and American travelers; helping a dealer in hides who complained of short weight, a ship's master having crew trouble, a hundred callers a week who hoped to obtain some special favor or introduction. Other peoples' troubles! A home and some one in it, a smile like Ellen's, and the touch of her soft hand were the only escape.

Steve Decides He Will Go to the Party

Steve looked out to sea. The hills around the city were blue-gray now and friendly. Here was great beauty, but what of it? It was foreign beauty—impersonal and meaningless. With Ellen the loveliness of Rio had become something intimate, something held precious. Together they had visited the beaches from Gavea to Jurujuba, where the water is a tincture of powdered jade. Together they had explored the little towns back of Rio; towns with the wonderful names of Deodora, Therezepolis, Barra do Pirahy. The jungle comes close to Rio and garlands its hills; together they had explored that. Wherever he had gone with Ellen he had seen beauty because he had seen it with her.

He came near the docks. The warm, welcoming smell of coffee was strong, the mellow odors of fruit. They were not odors windborne, but ever present, not evanescent, like part of a structure into which a man walked, to be completely surrounded. They were the smell of tropical earth, of the hills back of Santos, of the banks of the Paranhyba and the Iguassu. But for a lonely person from Massachusetts they were foreign smells and repelling.

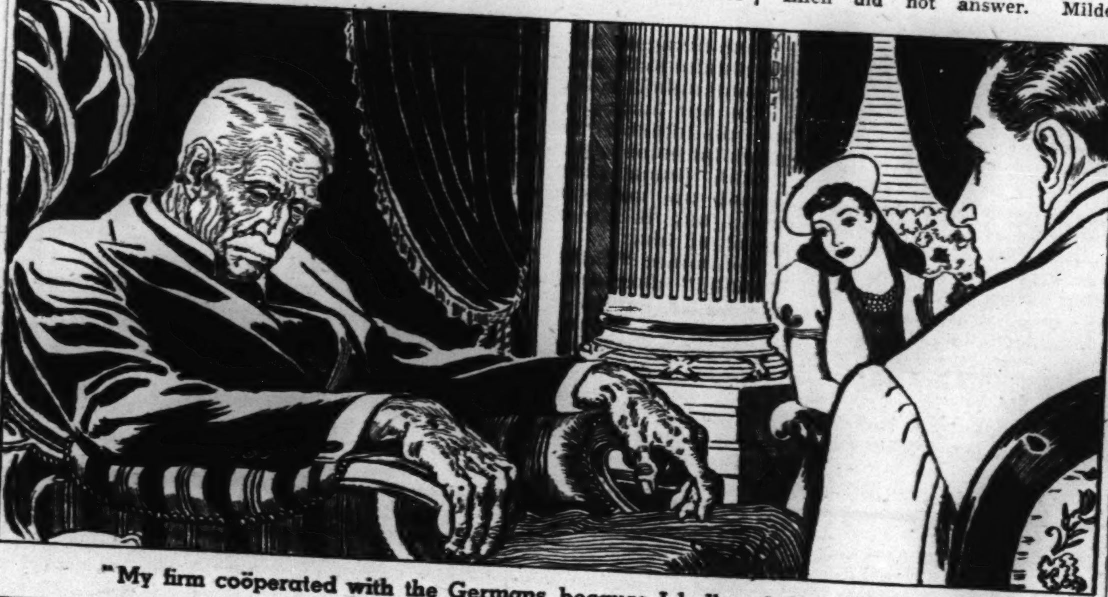
Steve stood undecided. It was a shame to waste this evening. He could go back to his little apartment in Flamengo, one of the pleasantest parts of Rio, sit by the window and feel sorry for himself. He could go to the Brintell party. He could go back now and try to find Ellen at her hotel. He found it easy to think of excuses for her; if she had deceived him, she had only followed her employer's order. Even diplomats had to deceive their friends at times.

Steve turned quick and walked with a new fast step. After all, it might be wise to keep an eye on Ellen. It might even be possible to forget all the unpleasantness of the afternoon and to get back to some old basis.

He grinned. He knew he would like that.

. . . . .

Back in her hotel Ellen stood by the window in her room. She stood there for a long time, looking out on the shining scallops of beach by the bay, silent, like a person trying to feel solid ground again after a sudden fall. Steve had hurt her with his conventional reaction, his unwillingness to understand her position. Perhaps he had a right to be angry, but why should he act toward her like a parent to a naughty child, flinging at her, "I was going to ask you to marry me."



"My firm coöperated with the Germans because I believed they had my son."

As for Bryan! Selling out his own reporter! It was not pleasant to think of going back to New York with no story. He was proud of his reputation for the ways his boys and girls got stories. The important thing was they got them.

Ellen moved away from the window. She had been sure that Steve was going to propose and she was sure she would have accepted. That would have been revenge on Bryan—going for a story and coming back with a husband. That chance of revenge almost made her call Steve. Perhaps he might phone. But the telephone on the night table was as dead as a branch in winter. It was hard to forget Steve's boyish attractiveness, but it was best to try. That was only excess baggage for a young woman going her way alone.

It was 5 o'clock and time for her appointment. A stranger named Milder had telephoned in the morning. "My name is Megly Milder, one of the more colorful members of the American colony. You've heard of me?" He was disappointed at Ellen's answer. "I'm in the industrial diamond business and I have some information of vital importance to you."

That made Ellen curious, but Milder would not explain.

When he was announced, Ellen went to the lobby to meet him. She saw a little man dressed in dark clothes, a morning coat and striped pants, a size too small. He stood a short distance off, like an actor about to make a tragic entrance, head up, face frowning slightly, one shoulder forward and higher than the other. His large head was thatched with a mat of gray hair. Standing monumentally, with one thumb clipped to a vest button, he reminded Ellen of an old engraving of Daniel Webster about to launch into an oration.

He came forward quickly. "Milder, Megly Milder's my name," he said pleasantly, bowing in a ridiculously courtly manner. Ellen expected to hear him creak. He handed her a card that carried his name. "Supposing we go into the café, unless the music annoys you. I find, sometimes, it makes me savage."

Ellen laughed.

They went into the café. A little orchestra under a palm bower was playing softly. A few people were dancing. For a second Ellen thought of Steve; they had danced, and talked, and laughed here.

As they sat at a rear table a waiter brought coffee. "A pleasant country this," Milder said jovially, "where coffee by law can only cost a penny a cup." Then he smiled. "I must say, young lady, that you are scarcely my idea of an American journalist."

Ellen did not quite know how to take that.

"I thought they were all unattractive, with thick glasses."

"I'm sorry to disappoint you," Ellen said pleasantly. She did not want to ask direct questions yet, but she was curious about the man's motives.

"I've heard so much about you," Milder continued.

"From whom?"

"From the gossip that passes for conversation in the American colony. For example," Milder said casually, "I believe you've been working on a story on industrial diamonds."

That brought Ellen up straight. "How do you know that?"

"If I didn't know it before, I know it now," he smiled genially. Then, seeing that Ellen was annoyed, he explained, "I've a lot of friends in that business. I know you talked with some of them. I found you were a free lance journalist and I put two and two together with the obvious result."

Ellen was suspicious. Some one might have sent him to find out what she knew. "I don't think my interests concern you."

"O, but they do!" Milder protested. "Industrial diamonds are my business."

Ellen was becoming more and more suspicious. "Just why have you come to see me?"

"Suspicious?" Milder laughed and his laughter sounded genuine. "You're smart." He laughed again. "The most important thing in the diamond business today, of course, is its relation to the war: specifically, the problem of keeping industrials out of the hands of the Germans."

"What do you know about that?" Ellen snapped.

"That interests you?" He smiled as if scoring an important point. He seemed to be shooting at random, hoping he could hit something. A waiter came and took an order. Ellen said, "It's all very interesting, Mr.

If Milder had been sent by the Germans, Ellen had let herself be trapped. As carelessly as she could she said, "It interests me as part of the general story."

Milder nodded. "So it should! It's a good story. The Germans got a large supply of South African industrials from Holland when they took over that unfortunate country. They bought some in America and elsewhere and shipped them by trans-Atlantic Clipper until the British got wise. Remember the Clippers began stopping at Bermuda? That was not for mail censoring but to let the British take off German stones. Of course, you know that."

Ellen did not answer. Milder

Milder, but you said you had some specific information for me."

"Of course I have," Milder said pleasantly, "if you'll let me come to the point."

"Please do."

"It's simply this," Milder said. "I've much information about the industrial diamond situation here that I should be very pleased to give you."

Ellen looked as skeptical as she felt. "In exchange for what?"

That pleased him. "A very clever young woman! In exchange for a little publicity—that's all!"

That might be all, but Ellen doubted it. Milder was obviously the sort of a man who used truth, like a subway, if it got him where he wanted to go in the shortest time.

Milder looked around the room. He lowered his voice, "Let me tell you one story I've heard. . . ."

An hour later, after the little orchestra in the background had followed fox trot with samba and samba with fox trot, Ellen was still listening to Milder. His story told, he talked about himself. He had been everywhere, in a hundred different businesses. Perhaps he was a suspicious character. Some sinister motive might lie behind his careless aimless talk. But he was amusing and he never once forgot his self-chosen rôle of a middle aged gallant, bathing in warm remembrance. As if to tease Ellen, he would not come near the subject of diamonds again.

"I've told you about my dope sheet business at Saratoga, haven't I?" he smiled. "Ah, never go in that business unless you can get the horses in as junior partners."

Ellen smiled. "Very interesting, but——!"

Milder looked sad. "I know what you're going to say. It doesn't concern the diamond business. And all I ask is that you humor a petulant old man who gets little chance to exercise a creaking conceit and talk about himself."

Ellen had tried a dozen times to turn the conversation back to diamonds. Now she looked at him coldly. "What's your purpose in all these reminiscences?"

"Purpose?" Milder looked astounded. "I want you to realize what vivid source material I am."

"I would rather talk about the diamond business," Ellen said bluntly.

Milder looked hurt. "For me, I am the most interesting subject in the world. I'm hurt when I find that people don't agree with that. But I am a colorful person."

Ellen laughed again. "You use that word as if it were a personal possession."

"Just think!" Milder gestured dramatically, "how many colorful people do you meet in a lifetime? How many have you met?" Then, proudly, "I like to think of myself as a stickpin on the funereal necktie of a shabby world."

"Very descriptive," Ellen said impatiently, "but I haven't the time to consider that. I'm very busy. I leave here Tuesday."

"That's impossible," Milder protested. "With all the material I can give you!. No, no, you must change your plans."

"I can't do that," Ellen said firmly. She tried an indirect attack. "I assume the diamond business is a new venture for you?"

"Every business is a new venture," Milder answered. "My real business is making a living. I keep my ears open, I hear people talk, and I find opportunities for my talents."

Ellen Tells Milder to Call Her Again

"Have you an office here?"

"With a head on my shoulders, do I need an office?"

"I take it, the diamond business didn't bring you to Rio?"

"I knew nothing about it until I came here," Milder admitted. "But it has a great future. The Germans here are eager to buy and ask few questions."

"Do you sell to the Germans?"

"I have my own trade secrets," Milder said shyly. "More and more Brazilian dealers refuse to sell to them because they're pro-British or because they find the Germans non-sympatico. It was the same way once in the jute business in Calcutta. I remember——!"

"Diamonds, Mr. Milder," Ellen said pleasantly.

"Eh, what? O, yes, diamonds. You're very rude with your interruptions."

"You were telling me how you happened to get into the diamond business," Ellen said unperturbed.

"O, yes." Milder looked at his watch. "I'll have to tell you more at another time. I have a dinner engagement."

If his plan had been to bait Ellen's curiosity with tidbits, he had succeeded beautifully.

He turned to her smiling. "Do I interest you?"

"Very much," Ellen confessed. "But I'd like you to be more specific."

"I may have more stories for you by lunch time tomorrow."

"Call me in the morning," Ellen said. Before he could call the waiter she added, "At the beginning of this charming conversation you told me a story about a local firm with a branch in New York. You said they not only supplied the Germans with Brazilian stones, as many firms do, but that thru their American branch they've sold African stones to the Germans in New York."

Milder nodded. "That's correct."

"I want the name of that firm. If it's true, it means that they are violating an American executive order forbidding the reëxport of industrial diamonds."

"That would be a good story, wouldn't it?"

"It would." Ellen wondered if Steve or the embassy knew of it.

"I've told you I don't know the name now," Milder said, "but I'll try to have it for you by tomorrow."

That story if verfied, would be one thing to take back to Bryan. It might give clues to other stories. Milder

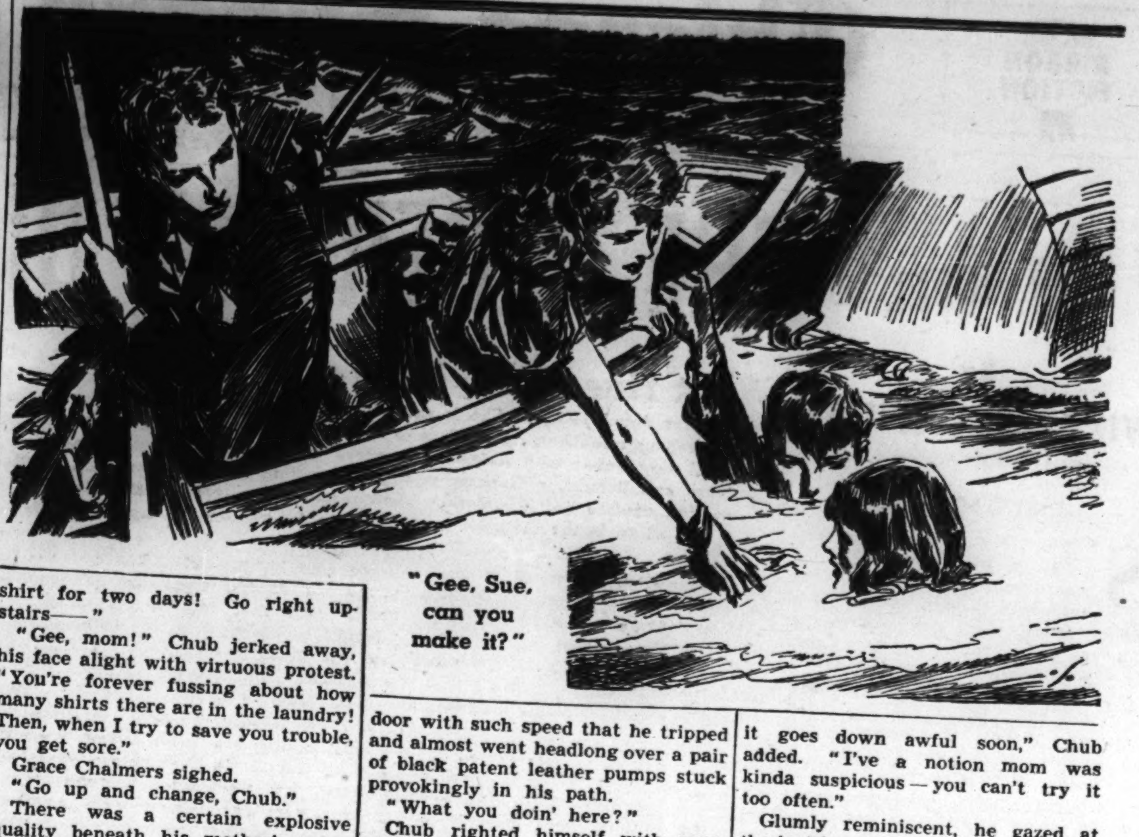
NEXT SUNDAY—"THE TEEHANNER," A SHORT STORY BY LUKE SHORT

NO RHYTHM

By Marie de Nervaud

(Copyright: 1942: By Marie Dun.)



"Gee, Sue, can you make it?"

CHUB CHALMERS sat on the porch rail swinging his feet and gazing at the bright June sunshine with an expression of intense gloom on his round, freckled face.

Not even the sight of Jigs' dinghy swinging away from the boat house lightened the frown that dug heavy lines between Chub's wide set gray eyes. If anything, the furrows deepened.

He had almost forgotten about Jigs in the new despair that was eating him at his mother's announcement that he had to go to the club dance tonight. Chub had confidently hoped to get out of that, but when Mom got sot, boy, did she get sot!

Now, a last glimpse of the dinghy scudding before the wind around the end of the cove shifted his thoughts back to Jigs' treachery.

The nerve of his asking Sue Travers out for a sail, in a dinghy that only half belonged to him! Well, maybe a bit more than half, but who had chipped in last season to buy a new sail? And who had helped pay for having the rudder mended that time they had smashed into the "Eaglet"?

Chub found momentary comfort indulging in the luxury of picturing himself at the dock the next time Jigs tried to pull a stunt like that.

He would stroll up with his hands in his pockets and watch them; then he would ask, his voice all deep and sarcastic, "What you usin' for a sail?" Before Jigs could think up a comeback, he would point out that half that sail belonged to him.

"And no sail of mine is being hoisted on a boat that carries a girl for ballast."

That would show Sue Travers where she got off! The sooner she passed the word around to the other girls, the better.

With bewildered resentment, Chub tried to figure out what had struck Jigs.

Who would have thought last summer that they two could ever be anything but the closest of pals?"

Chub Tries to Get Out of Going

Gosh, they had seen eye to eye on every darn thing! And now look what one year of high school had done to Jigs! Goofy as they make 'em over girls!

It wasn't only Jigs, either. The rest of the bunch were bitten by the same bug. Snickering and writing notes and making dates! It was enough to turn a fella's stomach.

All last winter Chub had scornfully withstood the feminine onslaught in the junior high, secure in the comfort that, once they got to Harbor cove, Jigs and he would fight the good fight together. And now look at Jigs! Goofy as a hyena! "Let him be goofy!" Chub's thoughts reached the tempestuous stage of exploding to a muttered, inarticulate rumble. "Let 'em all be goofy!"

"What did you say, dear?"

Chub glanced at his mother where she sat in the sunshine, on the porch, with her mending.

It was a minute or two before the sense of her bright inquiry penetrated his gloom. He blinked at her, and the astonishing thought came to his mind that his mother had once been a girl herself; not such a bad looking one, either, probably, with that curly light brown hair, and her blue eyes.

They looked especially blue at this moment, almost the color of the sky; and there was a wistful sympathy in them that brought a ray of hope glinting thru Chub's dejection.

"Honest, mom, do I have to go to that dance tonight? Aw, gee, lookit! What's the sense of wasting all that money? What's the sense—"

Amusement joined the sympathy in his mother's eyes, but her tone was devastatingly firm.

"Not a bad argument, but it's beside the point. You——"

"Like heck it is!" Chub disputed hotly. "Gosh, mom, look at the way you and dad are always talking about having to save money! Look at all the things we need and don't have! I bet you could get a good second hand dinghy for the price of these dancing lessons! Sure, you could. That way, you'd have something. This way, what you got? Nothing at all! I'll never learn to dance. Besides," reading in his mother's quizzical glance the futility of this line of argument, Chub swung to another tack with the agility of desperation—"besides—" his hand tenderly stroked his throat and he swallowed hard, "I——"

"I wouldn't try a sore throat again," his mother warned, with that lift of her eyebrows and little quirk to her mouth that always told Chub she was on to him. "It won't work a second time." She put up her sewing. "There's no use arguing, Chub. You're going tonight and every Thursday night. After the trick you played last week, I may add, you are going dead or alive!"

Chub had the grace to blush. "My throat was sore," he mumbled. "You saw yourself I had a temperature——" His mother's expression decided him not to pursue this line further.

"Aw, skip it!" He vaulted the rail and started for the boathouse, firing one last broadside over his shoulder. "If you think this is a good way to make me like girls——"

Driving her husband back from the station that night Grace Chalmers incautiously appealed for help.

"I wish you would talk to Chub, Phil! He thinks this is all just a foolish feminine idea——"

["A chip off the old block!"] Phil Chalmers chuckled. "My word, Grace, I think he's right! I must say, summer dancing school is rather thick! You kept him at it all last winter——"

"And he's still clumsy as a bear, with as much sense of time or tune; but that's not the point." Grace's tone was very patient. "I wish you would read some of those books I brought home from the study group, Phil. Then you might understand. Chub has managed to get out of step with all his age. He's so stubbornly masculine, the poor darling! He has set out to be a woman hater, and a woman hater he is going to be."

A snort from Phil made her all the more insistent.

"You can laugh, but it isn't funny. It was pathetic the way he dropped out of the crowd last winter and moped by himself. It's no fun being deserted by all your cronies, especially if you're an only child. And now Jigs has gone back on him!"

"You ought to hear Jigs' father on that subject," Phil interrupted. "He's yelling for help in the other direction."

"All right, if you won't understand," Grace crossly broke in on his laughter. "Chub has a naturally sunny disposition, but there is nothing so corroding as loneliness at that age. If we don't break up this complex of his, an emotional block may set up——"

"Don't talk psychology to me," Phil groaned. "Complex—emotional block—Good Lord! Let the poor kid alone!"

"I won't let him alone to be unhappy." A hint of brightness gleamed in Grace's eyes. "O, why won't you see? It's a cause with him, Phil; a mission, a crusade! My poor little White Knight!" Her lips trembled thru her laugh, and her eyes were very deep blue under their soft mistiness. "Why do you suppose I took the chairmanship of the junior entertainment committee if it wasn't for Chub? I've worked like a dog to round every one up for these lessons; besides, they're not regular lessons. There is only a half hour of teaching, and the rest is just fun."

Their arrival at the house cut short the argument, but Phil made one last effort to come to his son's rescue as they sat on the porch after supper, waiting for him to appear.

"Gosh sakes, Grace, why not let the kid off? He looks sunk. Why rush him into being girl crazy? He'll come to it soon enough."

"I don't want him to be girl crazy any more than you do." Grace's soft lips were set. "I'm just trying to work him naturally into the crowd. I don't want him to be queer and lonely and left out. Once he knows how to dance, he'll want to dance. Then——"

"Not if he's like me, he won't. Phil glanced up at a hollow "Hi!" from the door.

"Hi, yourself! He surveyed his son in all the glory of blue coat and white flannels. "Not so bad," he approved; but Chub's mother was less easily satisfied.

"Is that a clean shirt, Chub?" she asked suspiciously.

"Yeah." Chub stepped into the shadow. "Well, practically."

"Charles Chalmers!" Grace made a dive for him and hauled him under the porch light. "You've worn that shirt for two days! Go right upstairs."

"Gee, mom!" Chub jerked away, his face alight with virtuous protest. "You're forever fussing about how many shirts there are in the laundry! Then, when I try to save you trouble, you get sore."

Grace Chalmers sighed.

"Go up and change, Chub."

There was a certain explosive quality beneath his mother's calmness that checked the further argument Chub was about to put up.

He gave her an injured look. Gosh, what was the use arguing with mothers? You might as well save your breath. Women had no logic.

Chub swung on his heels, gauged the distance to the stairs, and figured he could make it in two broad jumps.

The first landing was successful, tho the impact of his 130 pounds shook the house to its foundation.

Chub always claimed that the second one would have been all right, too, if his mother hadn't yelled at him.

Her frantic "Chub! Your white flannels!" distracted him just at the wrong instant.

Caught off balance in midair, he staggered against the newel post, clutched it, swung around in a desperate arc, and crashed against the hall table.

Before his mother could reach him he was half way up the stairs, a gutteral mutter, half apologetic, half exasperated, floating in his wake.

Grace Chalmers collapsed weakly against the door jamb. Her husband grinned at her with amused, affectionate tolerance.

"You're on the wrong track, Grace!" He spoke as one who had no hope of making his point. Like his son, he knew that when "mom was sot, she was sot." "No use trying to make Chub into a lady's man! Some boys just naturally stay savages longer than others.

"And some never get over it," Grace added with pointed emphasis. "I'm not going to have Chub a savage or a boor. O, I know," she had to laugh at Phil's comic acceptance of the thrust, "you would let everything drift! Let him get out of these dances, let him——"

She broke off at the sound of clumping feet on the stairs, but not soon enough.

Chub Plans a Sitdown Strike

The grim satisfaction of planning how he would get even stayed by Chub all the way to the club, was still seething as his father dropped them there.

Let his father and mother gang up against him! He'd show 'em!

He'd stage a sitdown strike; that's what he'd do. He could be as stubborn as his mother. No matter how mad she got, she would hardly drag him out on the floor by main force.

Or, would she? Certain uneasy memories began to undermine Chub's confidence. He'd have to be kind of cagey, how he handled that sitdown strike.

"O, dear, we're late! And I should have been here receiving!" Grace Chalmers hurried her reluctant son into the clubhouse. "Don't stay too long in the coatroom," she called as Chub turned glumly down the hall. "They're practicing the waltz step now."

Acting on this tip, Chub stayed in the coatroom until his mother sent one of the boys after him.

"Tell her I'll be right out." Chub fumbled with his trouser leg. "My garter's gone fluey. I'll be right out, tell her."

He waited until the messenger had left, then scuttled down the corridor, across the far end of the dance hall, and out into the comforting darkness of the porch.

In his haste to escape his mother's watchful eye he plunged around the door with such speed that he tripped and almost went headlong over a pair of black patent leather pumps stuck provokingly in his path.

"What you doin' here?"

Chub righted himself with gyrations that were nothing short of miraculous. He glared at the occupant of the chair. A fool girl, of course.

"Ouch! Why don't you look where you're going?"

The fool girl leaned forward to clutch her toe, and glared back at him.

Even in the dim light under the eaves of the porch, Chub could see that she was a new one.

Bitterness gripped him once more. Why the heck couldn't some boys show up at Harbor cove for a change? Girls, girls, girls!

He was on the point of passing on in disgust when something about the brown eyes stopped him.

Gosh, but her eyes were big for her face! Sort of frightened too, and pretending not to be.

A sudden fellow feeling made Chub pause and repeat his original question.

"What you doin' here?"

"Nothing."

In spite of this lack of encouragement, Chub lingered on.

He could see her better now. She had pretty light hair that fluffed out above a green net dress. Even in the shadows, a plentiful sprinkling of freckles showed on her upturned nose.

Once more that same vague fellow feeling kept Chub from moving on.

"Why aren't you dancing?"

"Nobody asked me." There was the merest quiver to her defiant frankness.

"Why not?" Chub peered more closely at her. "You're not so bad. What's wrong?"

"No rhythm." The laconic explanation held untold depths of woe.

"Say! Honest?" To Chub's surprise, he found himself sliding into the chair next to hers. "Me, too," he confided. "Waltzes, fox trots, rumbas—they all sound alike to me."

The eager interest with which she turned to him gave Chub a pleasant exciting stir somewhere in the region of his stomach.

"I didn't know there was any one else like me," she sighed. "I try and try, and I count and I count, but I can't tell the difference. At least, not until it's too late! Just as I'm catching on, the music stops." The flood gates once open, she became as voluble as she had been monosyllabic before. "All the boys found it out last week. I told mums nobody would dance with me tonight! She made me try once more, but I'll never come again. Never, never!"

"Say, ain't mothers the limit?" Chub rose jubilantly to this bait. "Why they want to pay out good money to make you have a lousy time, gets me."

"I know."

For some minutes, with ever growing sympathy, they contemplated in silence the idiosyncrasies of the strange race of mothers.

"What's your name?" Chub asked suddenly.

"Molly Bruckner. We've rented the house out on the point."

"I'm Chub Chalmers."

"You weren't here last week, were you?" Molly asked.

"Nope." Chub dropped one eyelid. "Sore throat."

"Real one?"

"Say, you're all right." Chub grinned. "Did you know," he said importantly, "that you can give yourself a temperature by holding hot water in your mouth just before they stick the thermometer in?"

She giggled and shook her head.

"You want to remember that. Only it goes down awful soon," Chub added. "I've a notion mom was kinda suspicious—you can't try it too often."

Glumly reminiscent, he gazed at the inviting stretch of moonlit water.

"Golly, what a night for a sail! Think of wasting a breeze like this—Sa-ay! Wait a minute! How about you and me duckin' the dance and going out? Jigs left the dinghy down at the dock."

"It isn't there now." The bright excitement that had leaped to Molly's eyes died down. "Jigs and Sue went out about a half hour ago."

"The snazzy lug!" Chub was on his feet, eyes flashing, fists clenched. "I'll show him! That's the second time today he's gone off with that bird brain in my dinghy! I'll——"

"Your dinghy!" Molly squealed delightedly. "Chub, I didn't know that was your dinghy! Jigs told Sue it was his. Wait till I tell her."

"Well, it's partly mine." Chub hastened to eliminate future embarrassment. "Half the sail belongs to me and part of the rudder. Jigs can't get away with this kind of business! I'll bet you he'll get goofy and forget what he's doin'," he predicted angrily. "Like as not he'll run up on the rocks and ruin the dinghy for the rest of the summer. Lookit!" He held out a hand and hauled Molly to her feet. "What say we go out after 'em? We'll take somebody else's dinghy if that's the style round here. Come on!"

Molly Keeps Him from Turning Back

"O—I—I ought not—!" But, all the time Molly was protesting she ought not, she was running along beside Chub.

"Snap into it!" Chub set a faster pace, throwing back an apprehensive look behind him as a crash of drums and wailing shriek of saxophones announced the end of that dance. "My mother'll be on my trail in a sec. Gosh hang it!" He stared indignantly at the line of posts along the dock's edge. "Not a dinghy here!"

A faint call of "Ch-u-ub!" came floating down from the club house porch.

"Look! Never mind!" Chub shoved Molly toward the nearest row boat. "We'll take this one."

"Which way did they go?" He drew a long breath as they got out in the harbor, safely out of earshot.

"Over toward the Point; there's the sail by Oven cove."

Chub followed her gaze and bent to the oars with a disgusted snort. "I'll show 'em!"

"Chub!" Chub looked up in surprise at the breathless little catch in Molly's voice. "Why—why don't we sort of float around and wait for them? They're heading back now."

Sudden consternation caught Chub as the enormity of what he was doing struck him full force. Golly, what had gotten into him to take a girl—a strange girl, at that—out for a moonlight row! Just wait till the fellas get hold of that one! Added to it, there would be plenty of music to face at home for having ducked the dance.

He was about to give way to panic and turn back when he caught the expression in Molly's eyes. A warm, contented feeling stole over him.

Molly was thinking he was more and more wonderful. Chub could see that. He began to think so himself.

He hadn't done so badly at this dance, after all. When his mother gave him heck for deserting, he could point out that he had had to do something for a girl with no rhythm who wanted to make a getaway.

There would be no point about hauling Jigs and the dinghy into his explanation. The more he thought about it, why bother with Jigs anyway? He could tell him where he got off tomorrow.

NO RHYTHM

Chub looked over at Molly sitting in the stern, her green dress billowed about her, her hair a fluffy gleaming halo in the moonlight.

She gave him a shy, friendly smile. "This is better than dancing, isn't it?"

"I'll say it is!" Chub leaned forward on his oars, about to say considerably more, when Molly gasped and pointed, staring ahead of her with wide startled eyes.

"Chub! The sail! Jigs' sail! It just—it was there a minute ago, and now it isn't——"

A faint, faraway call came to them as Chub spun around to look for himself.

"By cracky, they're over!"

Molly slid from the stern to the seat in front of him. "Quick, Chub, give me those extra oars."

Chub hesitated.

"Look," he protested distractedly, "unless you're really good, I can make it faster by myself."

"I am good," Molly reached for an oar, pulled it out, and dropped it into the rowlock. "Pass up that other one."

Overlooking, in his excitement, the enormity of the fact that he was being bossed by a girl, Chub shoved the other oar forward. Together they brought the bow around so that they were headed for the point.

The wind that they had hardly felt before, drifting along with the current, was another story now that they were pushing against it, and the strong running tide as well.

Chub straightened up a moment to send a roar of encouragement to Jigs. Before he could bring out a second shout, Molly peremptorily cut him short.

"Row, Chub, and don't waste your breath," she threw over her shoulder. "Your voice won't carry against this wind."

The dazed sense that Molly was keeping her head better than he was snapped Chub to Herculean effort.

Bending to the oars, he pulled with all his might, thankfully aware of Molly's sturdy help, of her instinctive timing to his stroke. By gosh, she was good! She might not have rhythm on the dance floor, but, boy, she had it in a boat, all right.

The strain of the pace he set brought the blood drumming into Chub's ears. Thru it he could hear Jigs' shouts, coming louder and clearer, the relief in them telling him that they had been seen.

They Find Sue Is Badly Hurt

The last stretch, after they passed the point, was the hardest of all. Choppy waves splashed up and stung his eyes, and gusts of wind continually swung them off their course. But ahead of him, thru it all, the steady swing of those surprisingly strong young arms, topped by the incongruous green puffed sleeves, kept an even rhythm.

Molly was leaving the steering to him. Chub realized, his masculine pride once more reassuringly in the ascendant, as he gave a quick glance toward the capsized dinghy.

He could see it clearly now, sort of over on its side, with the mast and sail half in the water, buoying it up at a crazy angle. Jigs and Sue were clinging to the stern, and he could catch the wave of Jigs' signaling arm.

"They're okay," he gasped. "I can see 'em both."

Molly's blond head ducked acknowledgment of the news, but her stroke never wavered.

Jigs' voice was shrill with anxiety and relief, as they finally came close and he recognized them.

"Golly, Chub!" He gulped and grabbed the bow of the rowboat, "Sue's got a smashed arm or something. The boom hit her as we went over. A crazy puff caught us—gee, Sue, can you make it?"

"Easy, Sue." Molly was on her knees, leaning over to grasp Sue's groping hand, while Chub shipped the oars, and joined her.

"I'm—I'm all right." Sue's voice gallantly fought down the pain that quivered thru it. "If you can get your hand under my arm——"

For one agonizing moment, it seemed that they would all be overboard. The rowboat tipped perilously, as Chub and Molly leaned over, hauling Sue up, while Jigs got his hands under her knees, and boosted her from the water. All that saved them was Chub's quick action in flinging his weight to the other side in the nick of time as Sue came tumbling over the side.

Another second and Jigs swung aboard. Between them they made Sue as comfortable as possible in the bottom of the boat, where she lay, her head in Molly's lap, bravely refusing to cry, while Chub and Jigs rowed for dear life, making record time with the wind and tide in their favor.

Just once did Chub gaze gloomily back at the dinghy. Reading his thought, Jigs muttered fiercely, "She'll probably drift ashore on one of the islands, but I don't care if she doesn't."

A little moan from Sue made Chub feel that he didn't care, either. All he cared about was making that dock.

Their shouts brought a crowd running down from the club house.

In a jiffy Sue and Jigs were pounced on by their parents, and whisked away, as Chub told what had happened.

He ducked uneasily from the praise heaped on him for the rescue.

"Gosh, that's nothing'! You should have seen Molly row! I couldn't have got there in half the time if she hadn't been along."

That warm contented glow he had experienced when they first went out in the boat passed pleasantly over him once more as he caught Molly's admiring look.

Without further struggle, Chub capitulated, and, in capitulating, his topsy turvy world suddenly righted itself.

In a flash, he saw it all.

There was nothing the matter with Jigs! He was the one who was the nut. It was cuckoo to bunch all girls together. There were girls and girls. They could be as different as—as dogs, for instance. Some were crazy headed and silly, and some were pals. You had to have the sense to pick 'em. Take Molly now. No boy could have come up to scratch any better than she had.

Chub's mind, dazzled by this new view of life, came back slowly to what his mother was saying to Molly.

"We'll see you home, dear, if your mother isn't here. You and Chub wait while I telephone Mr. Chalmers and——"

"Gosh, mom! Why do we have to go home now?" Chub protested. "Gee, we didn't fall in! We're not really wet. We've just splashed. Honest, mom, we won't take cold."

Grace Chalmers looked at her son with a can I believe my ears expression.

"You mean—you WANT to stay?"

"Sure. Come on, Molly."

He started up the walk to the clubhouse, then dropped back to whisper an enthusiastic: "Ain't she a peach? Gosh, mom, how's this for luck? She ain't got no rhythm, neither."

Too dazed to pounce on the appalling collection of negatives, Grace followed her bewildering offspring as he chased after Molly.

She came up just in time to hear Chub dispose of Molly's reluctance to dance. "But Chub, when I've got no rhythm and you're got no rhythm—"

"That's what makes it all right." Chub took a firm grip of her waist. "To heck with the music."

An hour or more later Phil Chalmers found his wife by the clubhouse door, watching Chub and Molly hop joyfully thru the last dance.

"Hi!" He tucked his arm thru hers. "Putting the screws on to the last gasp, eh? I thought you might relent and phone me to come for you earlier——"

"I'm not the one who's keeping Chub!" Grace sighed and leaned against him, "but I wish you had come sooner. I need support!" Her smile held quizzical self mockery. "I'm not so bright, Phil, for all my child psychology courses! It never occurred to me that a girl with 'no rhythm' was the answer."

"A girl with what."

"No rhythm!' She motioned to Chub and Molly and launched into an account of the happenings of the evening. "A tussle with Chub always leaves me so confused," she ended helplessly. "If only issues could be clear cut, but they never are. Here he disobeys, and muddles thru to coming home a hero, getting himself a girl in the process. I ought to be strong and scold him for having gone out in the boat, yet I am proud of the way he behaved in an emergency! Everything is so mixed!"

"How did the girl get into the picture in the first place?"

"All I know is that Chub discovered she had no rhythm." Grace pressed closer on the comforting arm. "That's what is the matter with me, I guess," her laugh was a bit unsteady. "Every stage of life has its own rhythm and I've been out of step with the rhythm of adolescence. You were right, Phil; it takes some planning, but it also takes an awful lot of letting alone."

"Wise girl!" Phil slipped his hand along her arm. It reached her hand, and closed warmly over it. "You know, I have a feeling Chub always will muddle thru."

They were still smiling at each other when Chub burst on them with a strident, "Mom!"

It was the old Chub, cocky, assured. "Molly's mother arranged for her to go home in a club car. I told her we'd take her. Okay?"

Grace smiled and nodded, her eyes fixed on the sudden widening of Chub's gray eyes as he looked over at Molly with the identical look his father used to have——

Encouraged by the smile, Chub seized the auspicious moment.

"And how about stopping for a soda? Okay?"

Pride glowed thru him as Molly whispered, "Your mother's awful pretty, Chub!"

"I'll say." Chub agreed gruffly. With a satisfying inner sense of security and content he looked back on his mother and father following arm in arm. Mothers were all right after all, he reflected. A bit goofy at times, but all right.

The IMPERFECT DIPLOMAT

might provide more information. But Ellen wanted one assurance. "I'd like to discuss a little more fully just what you want me to do for you."

"You find me colorful?" Milder asked anxiously.

"Like a walking rainbow."

"Then, some day, when I want it, perhaps you'll give me a little publicity. That's all I ask."

Perhaps that was all he would ask but Ellen doubted it. As Milder paid the waiter, Ellen looked up. The little orchestra was playing. The small dance floor was crowded now. And there, in the doorway stood Steve. As he saw her he smiled happily and started toward her, his smile broadening, like that of a man nearing home.

He saw Milder. The smile vanished. His face reddened. He hesitated for just a moment then came quickly toward the table.

Steve had come into the hotel looking forward to a pleasant evening. He had not quarreled with Ellen before today. That could be forgotten and they would not quarrel again.

Then he saw Milder.

"Steve!" Ellen sounded genuinely warm. "You know Mr. Milder? This is Mr. Cunningham, of the American embassy."

Milder bowed in creaky fashion. "Always delighted to meet one of our diplomatic staff. I've meant to call at the embassy before this and leave my card for the ambassador, a courtesy too frequently overlooked by travellers abroad."

"I'll leave my card anyway," Milder said pleasantly. "It's always convenient to be known at the embassy if you get into trouble."

From some of the stories that Steve had heard about Milder he might well need help. "Do you expect to get into trouble?"

"One never knows," he said jauntily. He bowed again to Ellen, then to Steve. "Now, if you'll excuse me."

"Certainly." Ellen was eager to question Steve about the little man.

As Milder left, she reached out. "I'm so glad you came." She looked radiant. "I hoped you would." Then, as she saw no answering smile on Steve's face she said, "What's the matter?"

He sat down slowly, and looked around the room. Then, abruptly, "How did you get to know Milder?"

For just a second Ellen frowned. She said quietly, "That's the same tone in which we finished this afternoon."

Steve knew it. This conversation, too, could go to the same sterile end, but he hoped desperately to find some way to make this girl realize how close she was to danger. It was baffling that she could be so appealing at one moment, so irritating the next.

"It happens," Ellen continued blandly, resenting Steve's quick judgment, "that Mr. Milder and I were discussing business."

"Business, with him?"

"Who is he Steve?"

"I've not met him before but I've heard enough about him."

"I know that tone of voice," Ellen snorted. "I've heard it in other countries. All you diplomats have a standard lecture on 'Fit People for an American Girl to Associate With.'" Then, quickly, "I'm sorry Steve, but you can certainly be irritating."

"Me, irritating?" Steve exploded.

"Wouldn't it have been more diplomatic for you not to imply anything about Milder but to wait and see what he's told me?"

"Maybe," Steve said sharply, "but whatever he's told you was probably false and for a purpose. Listen, little idiot, Milder came here several months ago, without a dime. He hung around the race track and tried to borrow from every American in the colony. One day, he had money. People began to notice him with Germans and some of the worst sort."

"He certainly is shadowy," Ellen agreed. "Even I came to that conclusion."

"Shadowy!" Steve felt provoked.

"Maybe he's a German agent, maybe not," Ellen continued. "He says there's a firm in this city that not only supplies the Germans with Brazilian stones but, thru an American branch, sells African stones to the Germans in New York."

"The British would like to know that," Steve said. "So would we."

"Doesn't the embassy know anything about it?" Ellen asked innocently.

Steve dodged that lunge for information. "I'm sure I can't tell you. I wouldn't believe anything Milder said."

"He may know what he's talking about. He says he's in the diamond business,"

"He says he's in the diamond business!" Steve did not mean to mimic her so closely. "Are you foolish enough to believe that? If gossip around town is true, he's one of the most dangerous men here."

Ellen's eyes flashed. "You don't know if he's in the diamond business. Neither do I. But I know how to find out at once."

Steve had never seen Ellen so vehement. "How?"

"Call on that man we saw at the embassy this afternoon and ask him! He ought to know about the Germans in the diamond business."

Steve pushed the hair back from his forehead. He said coldly, "It was an unfortunate coincidence that Van Hooten happened in when you were there. You have no right to use any information you may overhear at the embassy." He could imagine explaining this to Cord. "You can't do it."

Ellen sat back in her chair and said firmly, "I'm going to find Van Hooten."

"Do you think this is a proper time to call on him?"

Ellen brushed that aside. "We must settle this Milder question at once."

Van Hooten Reveals His Unhappy Role

Steve knew that. In some way this quarrel over Milder had brought everything between himself and Ellen to a climax, as yet unresolved. A call on van Hooten would show Ellen what a liar Milder was. Thereafter she might be willing to listen to suggestion and advice. He looked steadily at her and saw the determination in her face. "Very well, if you go, I go along."

Ellen nodded. As she gathered up her handbag she said, "Well you call Mr. Van Hooten for permission to come or shall I?"

Steve left the table without a word and looked for a telephone booth.

Ten minutes later they were in a cab, going to the hills at the foot of Corcovado. They had not said a word since leaving the hotel. The cab made a sharp turn and threw Steve against Ellen. "I beg your pardon," he said stiffly.

"Certainly."

The cab began to climb, passing large handsome gardens, with white houses set deep against green. It stopped at a hedge set entrance. A shining white walk, lined with hibiscus bushes, led to a low red roofed house. A chuster of banana trees stood by the doorway.

"Here we are," Steve said eagerly, interested only in what he was sure Van Hooten would say.

Ellen followed up the walk without a word. Steve rang the bell. A Brazilian servant opened the door and showed them into a living room beside a patio gay with flowers.

Van Hooten came into the room quietly, his face sad and gentle.

"You are very kind to let us come," Steve said, then suddenly found himself without words.

"Not at all. Please sit down." Van Hooten had a strange absent quality as if he did not quite know what he was saying.

Ellen sat back in a chair, willing to let Steve direct the conversation.

Steve cleared his throat and began, "Miss Corning is a journalist, interested in industrial diamonds."

"Indeed!" Van Hooten sounded as if that did not matter very much.

"White collecting material she has discovered something sensational, if it is true."

"Yes?"

"She has heard of a firm here, with a New York branch, that has been selling African stones to the Germans."

"Is that so?" Van Hooten sounded as if he were just trying to keep up his end of the conversation.

The butler came into the room with cups and a pot of coffee. He nodded to the old man. "Cafezinha."

"Will you have coffee?" Van Hooten asked.

Ellen and Steve refused.

"Just for me, Gomes," van Hooten said. He drank a little cup of coffee quickly. His face was unpleasantly flushed.

Steve did not look at Ellen as he picked up the conversation again. "I doubt the story Miss Corning heard. I felt you could tell us whether it has any possible foundation in fact."

For the first time Van Hooten was interested. "Where did you get the story?"

Ellen answered, "As a rumor from an American named Milder."

"Never heard of him," Van Hooten said.

"You'd know if there were a dealer here by that name, wouldn't you?" Steve asked."

"Of course I would."

Steve looked triumphantly at Ellen. Van Hooten was staring into space as if following the trial of his own thoughts. "O, yes! You want to know if the story he told you is true."

Ellen nodded nervously.

"Yes," Van Hooten said slowly. "It is true."

Steve's face went white. For an instant Ellen smiled at him.

"The story is true," Van Hooten said quietly. "The firm referred to is my firm."

Ellen sat up straight. Any triumph she may have felt vanished as she saw the pain in the old man's face.

"I'm not surprised that you know the story," Van Hooten said wearily. "I was told that it would be given out."

Steve, shocked by what he heard, was interested at once. "Who told you?"

"Men at the German embassy." Then, without emphasis, "I'm afraid the story will be valueless. After that cable this afternoon, I am going to the British tomorrow and tell them everything."

The pain in the man's voice was more than Ellen could stand. She could not eavesdrop on a man's misery.

Van Hooten continued, feebly, "My firm coöperated with the Germans because I believed they held my son." His voice wavered for a second. "His letters were so full of accurate detail about our business." He lowered his voice to a whisper. "I know the unforgivable scoundrel who got those details from me. Night after night he sat in that chair, talking about my son, pretending friendship. He tricked me because he was not a German." Steve almost jumped forward but he waited while van Hooten continued. "When the letters made me suspicious I refused to do any more business with the Germans. They began to threaten to release the story of my dealings to newspaper men, to destroy me completely with the British and the Americans. So you see," he managed to smile at Ellen, "I expected a visit from you or some other journalist."

"If you'll excuse me," Steve said eagerly, "Who was this man? My embassy will be glad to have his name."

Van Hooten shook his head. "I do not have long to live, I feel. My heart is very bad and worse today. But I have strength enough to take care of that man myself. And I shall take care of him." He forced himself to stand up as he spoke but he had to hold to a chair for support. "Now, if you'll excuse me——!"

"Certainly," Steve said. "May I have a chance to talk to you about this story at another time?"

Van Hooten nodded. "Just telephone me."

Ellen interrupted, "And may I, too?"

Steve turned to her and frowned.

Van Hooten smiled. "At any time. I wish we could have met under happier circumstances. I could have told you many stories."

Steve thanked him and led the way to the door. Ellen followed. Gomes was waiting in the vestibule to let them out. Side by side they walked down the flower lined path, saying nothing. Embarrassment and pity blocked everything Ellen wanted to say. She had confirmation of Milder's story, if not of Milder, but no experience could have been more horrible, more poignant, than to hear that old man confess and explain, to have put him in a position in which he felt he had to explain.

As they came to the street, a street green and pleasant, lined with tall palms and strangely unreal in the greyness of what she had just experienced, Ellen said, "Wasn't it dreadful, Steve? It's horrible to see a man at the end of his resources." She shuddered. "The inhuman cruelty of those rats to force a man—!" She stopped, unable to finish.

Steve nodded. "I've seen other things they've done almost as bad." He turned and faced her. Sharply, "Is this going to be a lesson to you, Ellen, to keep out of this whole affair?"

"Steve!"

"I'm not fooling. You see what they did to van Hooten. They can do the same and worse to any one who interferes with them." He took her arm, as if to shake her. "Why did you ask van Hooten for another appointment? This is serious, Ellen, and dangerous. The embassy can handle this but a lone woman can't."

Child Guidance Is Simply ABC If You Understand It

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

[Tribune Studio Photo.]

Every woman is willing to work as hard as any man to win the war, but in the doing she'll retain, even heighten, her sense of femininity! Exquisite, but inexpensive, bath and grooming aids, fragrant and frothy, will be heading her list of morale-builders.

"Blue sapphire" is the beautiful name of a beautifully scented family of bath preparations that are going to be a great help as morale builders for milady, and at prices that milady can easily afford! The fragrance has a haunting quality, but it lacks not for the sparkle and that precious little note of exhilaration that are what we all want just now.

The very packaging of these is a triumph of understanding of feminine tastes. The cologne and the bath oil, both lovely in themselves, are in an exquisite bottle copied from a 14th century vase, which tapers from a squat, fat base to a long, slender neck. The liquid is a deep sapphire blue. There aren't many prettier bottles to be found. For these there are white ball caps. The same design of flasks for bath crystals [celestial blue in color] and talc [snow white] have flat screw tops.

• • •

There is bubble bath in the same fragrance and a bath powder beautifully done up in a blue container. It's the kind of array any woman would love to have on her bathroom shelf; the colors and shapes please her eye and her desire for beautiful things.

Best of all, the contents of these lovely things are worthy of their settings. The cologne, the bath oil and the preparations that make billions of bubbles are as good as can be. The scent lasts, and its character seems to us unusual. It's the kind of fragrance that fortifies. Because it is so beautiful, it satisfies the feminine sense of well being in the subtle way that a lovely perfume does. And it pleases other people, too!

• • •

All of these things, which sound so luxurious and really are luxurious, in one sense, are fairly inexpensive. They'll be a boon to the woman on the modest budget who wants, now more than ever, to work as hard as any man to win the war, but wants not only to retain, but to heighten, at least some phases of her femininity while she does it!

Furniture of Beauty Merits Regular Care

By Edith Weigle

Furniture, like a good wine, should improve with age. It will respond to care and, as the years go by, develops a fine mellow tone and depth of color which the connoisseur calls "patina."

For best results get the best commercial liquid polish or wax you can afford and then stick to it. Don't experiment with first one polish and then another. It's apt to be hard on the wood.

One manufacturer of very fine furniture, known for its beautiful old world type of finish, makes a polish which is rather expensive, but which keeps the best mahogany looking its best. It gives a dull, soft effect that brings out the beauty of the grain.

• • •

The trend is all away from a high, mirror like polish. Glossy varnish may be practical for some kinds of floors, but it has no place on a fine piece of furniture. A waxed finish is the most artistic and is easy to care for.

The other popular polish is an oil one. That is, it has oil as its base. It is a liquid, whereas most waxes are not. You can make your own oil polish, if you wish. Here is a recipe:

1 cup raw linseed oil
1 ounce white beeswax
2 cups turpentine

Shave the beeswax and dissolve it in the linseed oil, which has been warmed in the upper part of a double boiler. Never place directly over the flame. Later add the turpentine. Put up in bottles and use when needed, applying a little to a clean, soft flannel cloth and rubbing with the grain, never against the grain of the wood.

Furniture wax also may be made at home. In this case oil is omitted. Simply shave one-half pound of pure white beeswax into one cup of turpentine and place over a radiator or in some warm, but not hot place. Stir often while the mixture grows pasty.

• • •

Still another polish that is excellent to use several times a year on varnished or oiled furniture is made by mixing two parts of boiled linseed oil with one part of turpentine. Apply a little of this polish on a soft cloth. After all the excess is wiped off with a clean cloth, rub with the grain of the wood until it is thoroly dry so that no finger marks show on the surface.

Fine furniture such as this Chippendale table and mirror develop a beautiful patina with age if they are given the proper care.

Here is an easy remedy for removing a foggy appearance from a table top: Dampen a clean piece of cheesecloth with a solution made from one quart of clear water to which has been added a tablespoonful of vinegar, and apply it to the surface, rubbing with the grain. Then wipe dry.

White marks caused by hot dishes sometimes can be removed by applying household ammonia and water in equal parts. But don't let this liquid remain on the wood for it will soften the surrounding finish. Or rubbing the mark with a little linseed oil and pumice stone also will help. Use your finger tip. Then give a final rubbing with the oil and a soft cloth.

Don't Expect an Angel or Adult Replica

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co. Inc.]

Again the mail is thick with tales of woe about small boys and girls, those up to about 3 years of age, or possibly 4. They are unhappy and their parents are confused and unhappy. And all because the grown-ups don't know what makes the wheels go around inside these lovable, fascinating little children. Not knowing why they act as they do, and so not knowing what clicks with them, and it is ABC to manage them if you do, most mothers expect too much of these small sons and daughters. Some even expect almost perfection according to adult standards of behavior. I think that is probably responsible for more trouble than any other one thing. These are some of the unchildlike ideals held up for very young children:

Implicit and instant obedience.

Keeping clean, always.

Not touching things they're not supposed to touch.

Being quiet around the house.

• • •

Why should a little child care whether he holds his spoon and fork just so? Why should he want to stop the fascinating thing he's doing when some one asks him to? What concern can it be of his whether the play he's engaged in makes a noise or whether it doesn't?

How can he be expected naturally to refrain from doing something because it will get his clothes dirty? How can he be expected to be conscious that dirty clothes mean work for his mother?

And how, in the name of all that's interesting and worth investigating in this new world he's born into, can he be expected to not touch, not touch, not touch?

• • •

All these things that are expected of him are unnatural, because they possess no importance in his mind and really have no value for him at this time. If they are expected, even exacted from a child, he's going to suffer for it in some way. Either he will be subdued, perhaps cowed, or he will lose the freedom and spontaneity that are his birthright and are necessary to his mental and physical health; or he will rebel and the rebellion may take the form of defiance, willfulness, stubbornness, sulkiness or more obscure effects.

Primarily, the reason parents expect too much of their children is because they do not understand. They think they are doing what is best for their child, molding him into the kind of a person they want him to be, making a little gentleman of the small boy and a little lady of the small girl, making really tiny imitations of adults out of these plastic young things.

That is not what children are or should be at that age. At 2, at 3, at 4 they should be just children. If we try to make anything else of them we're going to meet with failure.

If parents with children of this age, who struggle so hard for these surface things, could only understand that they accomplish them only at cost to the child!

What causes tantrums? How may a child be encouraged to be neat? What two things help the nervous child? For advice on these and other related topics read "You and Your Young Child." Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

Two better looking daytime dresses than those that Vivienne Segal wears in "Pal Joey," which opened at the Grand Opera House last Monday night, would be difficult to find. Her evening gowns and chartreuse house coat are lovely, but the two short frocks are more than that; they're distinctive, chic, and unforgettable, at least to this observer. One is of burgundy wool and, altho it looks as tho it were a suit, it really is a one-piece dress. Simple and beautifully cut, it was designed by the actress herself, we're told. The other one that struck us is of dark blue crêpe with a bright blue bow at the neckline, the bow studded with lighter blue sequins. The skirt is expertly draped and exceedingly graceful. With it she wears bright blue gloves and a hat of the same vivid color. . . . Mrs. Potter Palmer III. was a symphony in black and white at the recent opening of the Mayfair room in the Blackstone. Her long, rather full skirt was of black and white vertically striped taffeta, and her bodice of black velvet. Gardenias on one shoulder carried out the color scheme, or lack of it, to be exact. Orchids on shoulders never have appealed to me, but in hair they are the loveliest things I've almost ever seen. At the Mayfair opening it was noticeable how many women were wearing these exotic blossoms to decorate their coiffures. These flowers have an ethereal appearance when worn in the hair that they lose almost completely when pinned to a gown or a shoulder strap, it seems to me.

Hildegarde, the popular chanteuse who is the entertainer at the Mayfair, wore two beautiful gowns the opening night, an emerald green crêpe and a black ensemble. With both she wore mantillas and gloves to match the gowns, but each time she removed these accessories half way thru the program. Mrs. Edward Morris was an advocate of the cover-up mode that night, for her maroon gown had long, tight sleeves, and an extremely high neckline. Her gloves and bag were of blonde satin brocade. A stunning outfit. . . . Mrs. John A. McGuire was as lovely that night as always in a pencil slim black gown that ended in a swirl of black Chantilly lace around her feet and legs. The upper part of the décolleté bodice was of sky blue taffeta ending in a huge bow at one side of the front. The lace partly covered the blue. There were pink camellias in her black hair. Her sister-in-law, Miss Mary McGuire, a typical Irish beauty [Carlotta Lagorio McGuire is as Italian in appearance as her maiden name], wore yellow-lipped white orchids in her hair and a wide-skirted pale gold lamé gown. The bodice was made in basque style. . . . One would expect a member of the A. I. D. to dress smartly, for those initials stand for the American Institute of Decorators. At the Institute's annual conference, held at the Drake last week, a number of stunning costumes made their appearance. One of the most unusual belonged to Miss D. Lorraine Yerkes of Chicago, and had as a surprise note a trimming of zebra skin. The black and white skin covered one rever of her severe black coat, with which she carried a large, matching muff of zebra. A simple black wool dress, a string of cultured pearls with pearl earrings, and a black turban softly draped to show her pompadour hairdo to full advantage completed her costume. The turban was fastened with tiny white enameled safety pins in a straight row down the back.

• • •

Another Chicago member of the Institute, Miss Cornelia Conger, topped her black wool dress with a knee-length skunk coat. Glossy blackbird wings formed her chic hat. Feathers also appeared in Mrs. Ralph Small's becoming white turban. . . . Miss Mabel Schamberg, a member of the Institute's national board of governors, attended meetings in a smartly cut beaver coat topping a beige wool dress. Over her matching beige felt tricorne she tossed a tobacco brown veil. For a party at the Pump room she changed into a gray satin dress on severe lines and a finger-tip length sable jacket. . . . Miss Nancy McClelland of New York, here for the decorators' meetings, appeared in a simple tailored wool dress, matching coat, and felt hat, all in brown. Green wings trimmed the hat. . . . Miss Katrina Mauff, who has been wearing Middleton Miller's engagement ring since the holidays, has a becoming winter coat and hat of stone blue nubby wool and black Persian lamb. The fur appears on the coat in the form of a Peter Pan collar and giant round buttons. The matching hat is a dashing fez of Persian lamb with a black silk tassel. . . . Mrs. John F. Evans has an attractive afternoon dress of seafoam green crêpe with a border of gold nailheads across the shoulder and circling the long torso waistline. Giant pink feather morning-glories are bunched at the top of her black calot.

Miss Mabel Schamberg.

• • •

A refreshing note on wintry days is an all-white hat, such as one which Mrs. Richard Bernays wears. Hers is nothing more than a band of white faille with a chou of white velvet fringe above the forehead. The other day she was wearing it with a simple, black velvet gown shirred across the shoulders. The handsome silver fox muff she carried did double duty as a purse and a "finger-warmer." . . . One of the most attractive gowns to be worn to the subdebutante parties during the holidays belongs to Miss Barbara Gammie, Mrs. Alexander G. McLaughlin's young daughter. It's an informal frock of pansy purple velvet, with a wide panel of purple wool jersey inserted just above the knees. A single gardenia was pinned in her hair when she wore the dress one night.

HOW TO SHOP FOR SMART STYLES AND TOP VALUES

Have you seen the new feather-print crepe dresses designed to be worn under a coat? What new types of corsets are the stores showing as especially suitable for wear with the new suits? Have you seen the shirtwaist dirndl dress for juniors? Are the stores showing many styles of sweater blouses in striped jersey? Will dresses and accessories in bright colors continue to be in demand? The easiest way to keep abreast of changing fashions is to read the Chicago Tribune. You are not likely to overlook any worthwhile value because the Tribune last year printed more women's apparel advertising than any three other Chicago newspapers combined.

Broadway Has a 'Neighbor' Play Series

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—Plays about the neighbors are good fun if they happen to be your neighbors. A laugh at a person or a type you recognize is great sport, but plays about the other fellow's neighbors have to carry a kind of universality of humor to register. Which is one reason regional dramas are more successful when produced by little theater groups than they are when they get to Broadway.

Recently we have been having a rush of regional plays, most of them holdover experiments of the late summer season. Most of them have failed, too, because the neighbors they pictured were not very interesting. Frank Craven brought in a carload of Connecticut types in "Village Green," but our people were frankly snooty toward them. Sinclair Lewis brought in a "good neighbor" group from "An American City." They were more Jewish than gentile, kindly folk for the most part, but nobody cared.

• • •

"The Wookey" was a folk play borrowed from London and written right out of the heart of an air raid. Edmund Gwenn played its cockney hero delightfully, but the bombs frightened more people than they attracted, and "The Wookey" was blown completely out of the theater with the first reports from Pearl Harbor.

Recently we had "The First Crocus," which told of the good Norwegian neighbors and customs of Minnesota. It ran a week. Last week there were two others, "Papa Is All," telling of the thrifty and stubborn Pennsylvania Dutch, and "Out of My House," in which a young Texas playwright reveals the tragedies developing thru the disintegration of the best people and the best racial strains in his part of the southwest.

• • •

"Papa Is All" is a Theater Guild production, and already has been toured quite generously. In Pittsburgh they liked it a lot, which goes to prove our point that the regional drama has to get close to home to be really appreciated. In Pittsburgh they know the Pennsylvania Dutch from down around Reading and Lancaster.

[Incidentally, I have a letter from Hevlyn Dirck Benson of Brooklyn, protesting vigorously that there really is no such strain as "Pennsylvania Dutch." They are, says he, Pennsylvania Germans, else why did they call their chief settlement "Germantown?" The real Knickerbocker Dutch, insists Benson of Brooklyn, never got west of the Delaware. If I don't believe it, he writes, let me ask President Roosevelt. F. D. R. knows, being of Dutch ancestry himself. Having a feeling, however, that the President is a little too busy right now to be worried about his far-off kin, I have not written.]

"Papa Is All," meaning papa is all gone, finished, dead, in the idiom of these quaint Pennsylvanians, is a colorful domestic comedy with tragic implications. Papa is a Hitler at home. He rules with a couple of iron fists and a club foot. Being a good Mennonite, he won't let mama so much as talk about going to a picture show. He won't let Emma, his pretty daughter, have anything to do with the young men of the neighborhood, and he tears up all the engineering diagrams his son, Jake, draws as a part of his school studies.

• • •

You must accept these seeming exaggerations as being authentic or the comedy shortly goes to pieces. In the second act, after papa has taken the whip to Emma and cruelly kicked Jake, he grabs his revolver and starts gunning for a young man who had taken Emma to the movies the night before.

Jake is ordered along to drive the car, and manages to stall it on the railroad track. When the train comes along the car is scattered for several hundred feet over the right of way, and Jake returns home to report tremulously that "papa is all." Of course, everybody tries to be sad about it, but the joy in that house is wonderful. Naturally, some part of it is contributed to the audience as well. Mama puts in a telephone and buys a lot of pretty things. The children relax and everything is swell.

But there has to be a third act, and with it back comes papa. Jake had merely tapped him on the head with a monkey wrench and laid him in a coal car going, he knew not where. A way is later found, however, to tangle papa with the law and for a while, anyway, he is going to be "all," in spite of anything he can do about it.

There is a nicely appealing performance by Jessie Royce Landis as mama, and Carl Benton Reid does fairly well by papa. But the response of the guilders has been only half-hearted up to now.

• • •

"Out of My House" is a serious indictment of cultural forces in Texas society written by Horton Foote and produced semiprofessionally by an organization known as the American Actors company. Foote sees the problems of the south multiplied. Poverty and illness and sloth afflict the colored folk and the white trash; gin and jazz and lechery are playing havoc with the best people; pride of race no longer sustains the aristocracy, and a crude assortment of "bohunks" has moved in to complicate the living standards of the lower middle class.

It is a confused but thoughtful and earnest exposé. It has several developed dramatic moments, even tho they were awkwardly and shrilly revealed by the actors. Foote, his critics concluded, still is to be heard from.

• • •

There is a kind of justice that seeps thru to the theater occasionally. A lewd and libelous comedy called "Johnny on a Spot," picturing the life, times and corruptibility of an entire state government in the south, was given the benefit of a handsome production and all the skill that Charles MacArthur and an expensive cast of actors could expend upon it, and it lasted for only three performances on Broadway.

Which I think is as it should be. It would have been a disastrous precedent in the theater if "Johnny" had succeeded, giving aid and comfort to forces that, left unchecked, must prove harmful to the theater. There wasn't, for example, a single decent living human in the whole character set-up of this play. The story was a combination of corruption and crime too often laughingly accepted in politics. It was obviously written for that boastfully uninhibited public that finds fun in corruption, glory in crime, and dirt in everything.

The governor of a southern state, a confirmed alcoholic, was found stupefied in the house of his favorite trollop the evening before the election day on which he expected to be sent to the United States senate.

• • •

His resourceful campaign manager, Nicky Allen, seeks to cover the governor's disappearance by putting a transcribed speech on the air, but finds the going hard when his candidate dies on him. How, then, to get the body out of the Bordello and into the state house to arrange for a decent demise after election?

MacArthur employed in the direction all the drive that helped put his "Front Page" play over. He revealed a skilful inventiveness, but neither pace nor a bold flouting of taste could save "Johnny." Keenan Wynn scored a personal hit as the campaign manager, and Edith Atwater, Dennie Moore, Florence Sundstrom and Paul Huber aided and abetted him.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey

How about celebrating the end of midyear exams with a new frock that's sure to rate straight A for charm all thru the next semester? It features the long torso effect that's just about tops in finesse, a skirt that'll swing to the smoothest rhythms, and those lovely soft shoulders that are designed to be devastating, but definitely!

You can whip this model up in crisp taffeta, altho it can't fail to click in any other material. Add a fresh flower [your "date" probably will provide] or a crafty jeweled pin or clip at the neckline and you've a prescription for popularity that's practically perfect.

Style No. T-8754 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material for model with three-quarter length sleeves; three yards, with one-fourth yard contrasting, for collar in short sleeved style.

Loring Organizes New Dance Group; Starts Rehearsals

Under the title Dance Players, Inc., Eugene Loring and 15 other dancers have formed a new company and begun rehearsals in preparation for a tour next spring. Mr. Loring, the foremost American choreographer, will design the entire répertoire of the company. He will revive "Harlequin for President" and possibly restore "Billy the Kid," both of which he composed for the Ballet Caravan, where he got his start. Four new works have been projected: "Prairie," suggested by Carl Sandburg's poem, with music by Norman Dello Jolo, and décor by John Steuart Curry; "Hobo of the Hills," using Mr. Loring's version of southwest animal legends, with music by Mr. Dello Joio and décor by George Bockman; "The Man from Midian," the Darius Milhaud ballet commissioned but never done by the Ballet theater; "The Invisible Wife," having a scenario by Mrs. Winthrop B. Palmer and Waldo Pierce about a New England legend, with settings by Mr. Pierce and music by Benjamin Britten. A revised version of "The Great American Goof," choreographed for the Ballet theater, with new décor by Reginald Marsh, also will be danced. Two pianos will supply the music, and the costumes and scenery are expected to be more lavish than is customary for a small troupe. Lew Christensen and Janet Reed join Mr. Loring as the leading dancers.

Argentinita and Ensemble Give Concert Today

Only two concerts will be given in the Civic Opera house this week, and the artists they feature could hardly be more diversely chosen. This afternoon the refreshingly natural Argentinita and her ensemble of Spanish dancers and musicians will exhibit a folk art; on Friday night the sophisticated Oscar Levant will entertain with comments on and performances of some highly civilized piano literature. Mr. Levant's appearance is a benefit for the Church Mission of Help.

No book in English treats comprehensively the complex art of Spanish dancing. Its history goes back to the days of the Roman empire when its rulers were entertained by dancing girls from Cadiz. Since that time many dance forms have sprung up and become traditional, all types being modified by different sections of the country and in turn becoming traditional in their transformed state. The gypsies and Moors alike have influenced the art in one way or another. So have the graver styles of the European royal courts and theaters.

Federico Rey.

Today existing dance forms can be roughly divided into three classes: classical, gypsy or flamenco, and folk. The classical dances, such as the Seguidillas or the Fandango, established in the urban theaters of the 18th century, are dignified and invariably accompanied by castanets. Flamenco forms, like the Farruca or the Alegrias, are more obscure in origin, being a creation of the wandering gypsy tribes. They are characterized by wilder and freer movements plus, in general, the use of finger snapping and hand clapping in place of castanets. The beginnings of the Jota, a typical folk dance, would be equally difficult to trace, but its charmingly naïve and awkward movements easily suggest the untutored performer.

As stated before, each of these forms is varied in Spain's several provinces, from Navarra in the north to Malaga in the south. For while the Jota is considered the national dance of Aragon, it is also performed in Navarra but with slightly different steps. If this generalized information confuses rather than clarifies the reader on the subject, perhaps it has given him some idea of the incredible variety and subtlety of Spanish dancing. Its beauty is apparent to the most casual observer.

Argentinita, the finest exponent of her art to be seen in this country, will offer examples of the most typical dances. It is to her credit, however, that she annually enlarges her répertoire with new dances from Latin America and old ones from Spain, dug up in research. On her program she will have the assistance of Pilar Lopez and Federico Rey, dancers; Carlos Montoya, guitarist, and Pablo Miquel, her new pianist.

• • •

Mr. Levant, who played on a Gershwin program at the Auditorium theater last season, will do more than just manipulate the piano keys on Friday. He will introduce the compositions on his program, presumably with his own particular brand of humor, for Mr. Levant is a wag rather than a wit. In any case the music he will perform will be by Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Chopin, Debussy, Shostakovich, Schönberg, and Gershwin.

To recapitulate Mr. Levant's astonishing public career one must mention his activities as a composer [piano concerto, string quartet, music for films, and pageants], pianist [appearances at the Lewisohn stadium and Hollywood bowl], conductor ["The American Way"], film actor ["Rhythm on the River" and "Kiss the Boys Good-Bye"], author of a best seller ["A Smattering of Ignorance"], and radio performer ["Information, Please"]. On the last named program he has shown a remarkable knowledge of sports for one who is primarily a musician.

Newest Williams Play to Be Produced Here

Elliott Nugent, Robert Montgomery, and Jesse Duncan will produce in this country the latest play by Emlyn Williams, author of "The Corn Is Green," opening tomorrow in Chicago. It is called "Morning Star," and has proved a popular success in London, altho the critical reaction was mixed.

Home Owners' Queries

Racine, Wis. [To the Home Building Editor.]—Bits of linoleum in our sun room are chipping off. I'd like to preserve it as long as possible. Is there anything we can do? Mrs. Henry T.

Answer: Melt sealing wax of similar shade and run it into breaks. Then, before it cools, smooth it.

Chicago, Ill. [To the Home Building Editor.]—My gilt picture frames are still in fairly good shape but I'm tired of gilt effect. Is there any way I can give them a richer, deeper shade? Joyce Moore.

Answer: You can obtain a glaze which is tinted with brown at a paint store and brush this on the frames. Then take a dry cheesecloth and wipe. Apply the glaze generously. You will find that flat surfaces are slightly darker and that carvings will take on a still deeper tone.

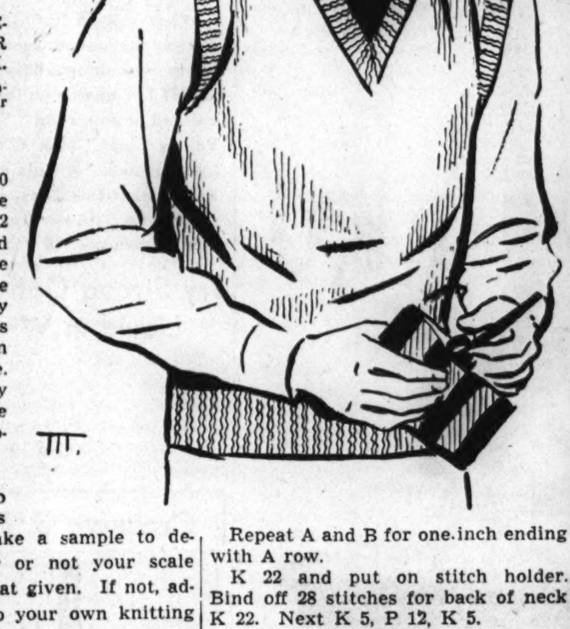
Altho it stands isolated in the midst of Nazi conquered territory, Switzerland is managing to provide itself with plenty of good music. In fact, by virtue of the large number of refugees it was able to hold its third International Music Festival at Lucerne last summer. During the current season Geneva, Lausanne, and other nearby towns are being served with concerts by the Orchestra de la Suisse Romande, conducted by Ernest Ansermet. Such soloists as Jacques Thibaud, Pablo Casals, Walter Gieseking, and Wilhelm Backhaus appear regularly with the ensemble. The Orchestra association, directed by Walter Kaegi, and the Music society, under Luc Balmer, furnish music for the citizens of the Swiss capital, Berne. In Basle the General Music society provides the music.

Red Cross Knitting



The needlework department, in coöperation with the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross, presents the third in a series of knitted items which may be made for men in the armed services. The man's sleeveless sweater with V neck is a simple knitting job. The directions:

MAN'S SLEEVELESS SWEATER WITH V NECK.

EQUIPMENT NEEDED.

Yarn — 4/8, 10 ounces olive drab. Needles—2 single pointed needles to fit the Red Cross needle gauge for heavy sweaters. Gauges available from your area office. Needles slightly smaller may be used for the ribbing.

SCALE.

Five stitches to the inch, six rows to the inch. Make a sample to determine whether or not your scale is the same as that given. If not, adjust directions to your own knitting by casting on fewer or more stitches depending on whether you knit loosely or tightly. The sample of your knitting is also necessary because yarn may vary slightly, making adjustments necessary in the number of stitches cast on.

This garment is worked up the back and down the front with no shoulder shaping.

BACK.

Cast on 80 stitches. Work in ribbing of K 2 P 2 for 4 inches. Work in stockinette stitch [K and P alternate rows] for 10 inches, with the exception of the first and last two stitches which should be knit [garter stitch] to make a neat underarm seam. End with knit row.

TO SHAPE ARMHOLES.

First row—K 5, P to last 5 stitches, K 5.

Second row—Knit.

Third row—Same as first row.

Fourth row—K 5, K 2 together, K to last 7 stitches, K 2 together, K 5. Repeat these four rows twice [68 stitches on needle]. Keeping garter stitch borders at armhole edges [K first and last five stitches in each row], work in stockinette stitch until armhole measures eight inches from first shaping, ending with a knit row.

Proceed:

A—K 5, P 12, K 34, P 12, K 5.

B—Knit row.

K 22 and put on stitch holder. Bind off 28 stitches for back of neck K 22. Next K 5, P 12, K 5.

SHOULDER.

First row—Knit.

Second row—K 5, P 12, K 5. Repeat these two rows three times.

TO SHAPE NECK.

First row—K 5, increase by knitting front and back of next stitch, K to end of row.

Second row—K 5, P to last five stitches, K 5.

Third row—Knit.

Fifth row—Same as first row.

Sixth row—K 5, P to last five stitches, K 5. Repeat these six rows until there are 34 stitches on needle. Break wool and put these stitches on stitch holder. Join wool at neck edge and work other shoulder to correspond, ending with purl row, being careful to have shaping at neck edge. Do not break wool.

Seventh row—K 34, and knit the 34 stitches from stitch holder [making 68 stitches on needle].

Keep 10 stitches in center, knit plain on every purl row for five times to finish neck neatly. Continue to knit until last decrease on back is reached. Then increase one stitch on sixth stitch from each end of needle every fourth row three times. Then cast on three stitches at each end of needle [80 stitches again on needle]. Knit till same length as back. Cast off. Sew up side seams, leaving armhole of nine inches.

Noted Resident of Argentina Visitor in City

By Cousin Eve.

For me this is the beginning of the best part of the year. Days are longer, the white flowers of spring are already here, and spring itself is just around the corner. Or so one kids one's self. People who have run away to escape Christmas are back again with a good tan, and all sorts of exciting travelers are coming and going. And in January one toys with thoughts of travel and wonders where one would go if suddenly one went traveling.

Today's illustrious traveler is Alexander Shaw of Buenos Aires, who arrived from Argentina via New York. This is by no means Mr. Shaw's first visit to Chicago, as he has stayed with Robert Carr here in town and also in Lake Forest. Just seven months ago today, together with the James Scott Kempers of Winnetka, I spent Sunday at the Shaw estancia, Luis Chico, 100 miles from Buenos Aires on the wide Plata river where it merges with the sea.

Of all the fascinating, unique places imaginable, this is the most so, with its setting of old Spanish gardens, vegetable and flower gardens, quaint ranch house, and farms for the magnificent blooded cattle. Probably the romantic personality of Alexander Shaw casts a certain glamor over this property, for he is an unusually handsome man of British descent, that is, British 'way back a couple of centuries. For the Argentines, like ourselves, are a mixture.

Mr. Shaw is one of Buenos Aires' foremost citizens and chairman of several important inter-American committees. Mr. and Mrs. Kemper are having a luncheon in honor of Mr. Shaw today in their Winnetka "estancia" on Lake Michigan. The Kemper yacht has been dismantled and the pretty boat turned over to our navy. I heard some time ago about another yacht, the most handsomely fitted out in American waters, handed to our government late in the summer for its use. It was stripped beforehand of all its fittings, and eventually turned up in England assigned to the service of one of Britain's admirals. Or at least a British admiral has written to this country demanding delivery of the fine adornments to his yacht. Unluckily these had all been given away by their owner a few days prior to the receipt of the letter, to the former owner's great regret as one may imagine when he found who had it.

The Danish minister to Washington, Henrik de Kauffmann, is a wonderful looking man, tall, slim, and straight as a pine. The minister is married to an American, a daughter of Admiral McDougal whom he met and married in China. Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn knew Mr. de Kauffmann in Pekin and he stayed with them over the last week-end, but hardly saw his charming hosts in the press of public engagements.

Monday night the Strawns were having a small dinner for his excellency, who dashed in with only 10 minutes to spare to tub and change. The Strawn front door, however, refused to open. Inside and outside, it was equally adamant, and the Danish envoy was mysteriously barred outside. Finally, he was told to take one set of elevators and connect with the service elevators which would deliver him at the kitchen door. This door worked beautifully, and the guests arriving via the kitchen on the hour found Mr. de Kauffmann in perfect form in the charming Chinese living room. He had made it in four minutes.

The Danish consul and Mrs. Reimund Baumann had a quickly arranged and delightfully nice, small reception for the minister last Sunday at their house in Bellevue place. It was gay and mouvementé from alpha to omega. The hostess received in plum velvet wtih a flock of mauve orchids on her shoulder, and the Baumann girls, Velma and Raymor, two lively young beauties, made introductions. Among the deflié of notable guests were the consular European countries, and several others on good terms with the allies.

There were Mr. and Mrs. Pero Cabric of Jugo-Slavia, Mr. and Mrs. Benedatos of Greece, Lewis Bernays of Great Britain, Consul Goësta Oldenburg and the lovely Mrs. Oldenburg of Sweden, Alrich Beusch, Swiss consul, the Carol Ripas of Poland, the new Dutch consul and his American wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jan Noest. The former is himself a New York Dutch type and might easily have been born at Spuyten Duyvil on-the-Hudson, so well does he look the part and speak our language.

Mrs. Noest was seated opposite Miss Louise Chandler, pouring tea in the dining room. The Dutch consul had been en poste at Rio before coming here. In the polyglot of language that day that smote upon one's eardrums nothing was more quaint than to hear Lewis Bernays trotting out his Russian with the charming Cabrics, and his fluent Polish with the Ripas. Nobody spoke of war that day, yet whose country hadn't been bombed, blasted, and blown out of the water? Probably every one in this gay party was sad at heart. Most of the guests had had no news of their familiees in many months, yet they carried on as if all were well.

The Ad Stillwells are coming up soon from Hot Springs, Va., which is one of the hottest spots in this country, since the dear old Homestead [shades of Washington and Jefferson] filled up with 200 official Japanese from the embassy and consulates. There are also 50 FBI men and even a larger number of armed guards, patroling the grounds and surveying the scene. The Japanese guests have leave to take walks and exercise outside the hotel, but woe betide anybody who loses his pass or tries to get in or out without this item. January is usually a dull month at the Homestead, but it is far from dull this season. All year residents of Hot Springs like Ray Ingalls and the Addison Stillwells think the war has landed on their doorstep.

MARRIED ON JANUARY 2

Mrs. Earl F. Oesterreich was Miss Helena Marie Conover, daughter of Mrs. Mary Conover of Fargo avenue, before her marriage on Jan. 2 in the Rogers Park Congregational church. Mr. Oesterreich, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Oesterreich of North Artesian avenue, recently was inducted into service.

The English-Speakers gave a rousing tea quite from the heart in honor of Peter Gallienne Wednesday at the Arts club. Mary Hastings Bradley, who organized the party, received with President Frank Hecht and Mrs. Hecht, and presented guests to King George's newest consul in Chicago. Lewis Bernays, British consul general, later introduced Mr. Gallienne, wondering naively how the new consul came by the name Peter, when his passport reads "Wilfred Hanford."

The speaker called his lively talk "Return to Chicago," accounting for the last 20 exciting years in as many minutes. He and his charming wife, who was housed with the "flu," have been hurricaned in San Domingo, and traveled en poste north, south, east, and west, from Guatemala, where they lived two years, to Estonia, where he was minister plenipotentiary until the Germans took over. It was the breeziest sort of talk and amusing as could be. Mr. Gallienne tried at one time to keep records of his life and travels. And inasmuch as they were lost in the hurricane, he decided to have his notes in duplicate. Between Estonia and the blitzing of England this data has disappeared, so now he plans to keep the record in triplicate.

• • •

The speaker is a native and householder of Guernsey, a charming island in the British channel now held by the Nazis, and in the last World war he served in the royal field artillery, and was terrifically wounded. But you'd never think it now, so young and blithe is he.

The tea party that followed was set in the grand gallery where two tables were decked out in peasant style by Miss Florence Bartlett. One after the manner of Guatemala had a broidered red cloth, and flowers and fruits were exotic. Estonia's delightful centerpiece was a fantasy of snow blossoms, and the decor was glowing peasant ware. Here Mrs. John Crerar and Mrs. John R. Winterbotham were hostesses, each wearing a vivid hat. The former was crowned by rosy jungle birds, and the fair Doris by a close cap of red feathers with a muff of the same. The Guatemala ladies were Mrs. Chauncey McCormick and Mrs. Edward Hasler, whose hats likewise brought cheer, and were in fact notably pretty.

The motto of this party, if any, seemed to be "say it with hats," so many fresh, new lids were in evidence. Mrs. Silas Strawn was crowned by snowy white headgear and there was a gal there with a black Spanish sailor, large enough to skate on. The usual "assistance" was out, Mrs. Ralph Otis, Mr. George Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holloway, Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Mrs. Lyman Walker, Clark Lawrence, Mrs. Freeman Hinckley.

Writing of one Peter reminds me of another, Peter Dewey, who spent the Christmas holidays in Scotland where war duty took him. The younger son of Congressman and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey was serving as ambulance driver with the Poles when France was invaded. His teammate was Bill Schultz, a step-son of Anthony Drexel Biddle, ambassador to Poland. The two boys reached America alive and Peter has since finished a law course at the University of Virginia. After his graduation, he was offered the post of private secretary to Ambassador Biddle in England, where he is serving as American envoy to "Free Poland"—but did not accept the alluring post as he was looking for something more active.

Peter is one of these fascinating lads who has friends everywhere, so he found himself—not marooned in Scotland over Christmas—but visiting Sir William and Lady Erskine in a splendid castle. The Erskines have been for centuries hereditary regents of the Scottish kings, and at the time the Deweys were stationed at Warsaw, Sir William, present head of the house, was British ambassador to Poland and the two families were close friends. Peter Dewey is expected in Washington this week.

More prominent Chicago citizens ate luncheon Tuesday at the Foreign Relations council with Dr. Karl Brandt, noted economist, than any other meeting of the year. His topic was "Strength of the Axis Powers" and lawyers, bankers, capitalists, and realists of all sorts flocked to hear him. Dr. Brandt had hot-footed out of Germany in '33 when Hitler came in, and has since become an American citizen. His address was all the more interesting since it was far from rose colored and warned his hearers against optimism and complacency. Dr. Brandt made no verbal fireworks or personal attacks against leaders, merely facts and figures as they have come filtering thru from Switzerland and his deductions as an economist.

The Racquet club had an amusing party last week, which seemed to fit into the mood of many members. It was the usual Thursday night buffet dinner, with a galaxy of white robed chefs wielding long sharp knives on ham and beef roasts, chicken and cold turkey. It's a nice way to dine, I find, just to nip about according to the desire of one's eye, and not according to the ideas of the head waiter.

• • •

They have wonderful chefs at the Racquet club these days and a great array of delectable food. The dining room was crowded and most of the diners passed into the card room after dinner for a lesson in contract bridge. Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, chairman of the entertainment committee, had two tables of guests, who afterward played and put in practice some of the new values in bids. The lecturer of the evening was Mrs. Katherine Lewis, a master teacher and professor of the Culbertson school. I found her a brilliant teacher and was fascinated with some of her thoughts about no trump bids, and the clear way she worked them out.

Among the players that night were Mrs. Wolf, Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Charles I. Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Steele, Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Walker, Mrs. George Henneberry, Gerald Cudahy, Mrs. Phelps Kelley, Mrs. Freeman Hinckley, Mr. and Mrs. Werner Lawson.

I don't know whether or not it is ethical to pass Christmas presents along to deserving friends, but it seems to have been done a lot this season. However, if one must perform such a petty act of treason, one should at least take time to remove the card of the earliest owner, or person who purchased the gift. It does appear a bit indelicate to send a gift red hot as it came, with all the original cards, wrapping, etc.

One of our Chicago beaux, a banker be it said, is a great buyer and giver of books to fair ladies. To be on his list is one of the best joys of Christmas. This year a lady by no means on this list was amazed but very pleased to have his illustrious card bounce out of a lovely book wishing her a bright new year. She mused and cogitated much over the gift and was on the point of thanking the gallant for the nice remembrance when another card flew out from between the covers. The mystery was solved. On it was the name of the woman who had shipped the book without even glancing at it.

Phoenix Lures Many Residents of Chicagoland

PHOENIX, ARIZ. The Mexican peon in Arizona has the right idea: Give him a sunny wall to lean against and a sack of beans and the world is his—providing a bottle of mescal is handy. Offer him work with pay and "quién sabe, mañana," is his answer You can be assured that no work will be forthcoming while the beans and mescal hold out and the sun continues to shine. Perhaps that is the real appeal of the desert—in its vastness one can relax and troubles magically disappear in the warmth of its sunshine. Mescal is just distilled maguey agave juice, after all, and oranges—a good substitute for the beans—are yours for the picking.

Sun-lazing away the days at the San Marcos hotel at Chandler are the Boyd Pixleys of Oak Park, who have been at the hotel for the last fortnight but expect to return to Chicago in another week. Mr. and Mrs. Arch Shaw of Winnetka have arrived for their yearly visit and will remain for the balance of the season. Ben Alexander of Lake Forest was among the recent arrivals and will be joined by Mrs. Alexander later in the month.

At the Jokake inn, the William Hedrichs [Tea Kremer] are spending their honeymoon. Last weekend they were the guests of Frank Lloyd Wright at Taliesin-West, his desert school in Paradise valley. Other Chicagoans who are enjoying several weeks of rest and sunshine at Jokake are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Trimble of Evanston.

Edward Doyle was a contestant this week in the putting tournament at Camelback inn. A hole in one by Frank Lay of Kewanee singled him out as the champion putter of the inn. Rosemary Doyle took an active part in the weekly Gymkhana, held at the Camelback Corral on Saturday. Balloon races, cracker races, and potato races, as well as other exciting events, intrigued her to the extent that she is already diligently practicing for the next week's Gymkhana. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward Seabury and Mr. and Mrs. John Lyle Vette arrived Sunday for an extended visit at Camelback inn. The Rev. Edward Randall and Mrs. Randall of Evanston arrived Thursday to spend a week at the desert resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ware and their daughter, Peggy, are returning for the second season at the inn and will remain to see the desert flowers in bloom in the spring—a never to be forgotten sight. Mrs. Leonard Reed, Mrs. Robert Ingersoll, and Mrs. Ingersoll's young daughter arrived Tuesday for a several weeks' visit. Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Harrington and their children, Ann and Michael, returned to Chicago this week, after spending some time at the resort.

Some one said the setting of Castle Hot Springs reminded him of James Hilton's Shangri-La. It is a real oasis in the desert. The drive from the station is thru cactus-covered mountains and suddenly the road drops into a little valley, luxuriant with date palms, orange trees, green lawns, natural swimming pools, and even a golf course. Like Shangri-La worries cease to exist and perhaps that is what makes it a place where the feeling of eternal youth exists.

Many Chicagoans are expected to arrive soon. At present the Charles Borlands and Mrs. Borland's sister, Miss Ann Hyker, are spending several weeks at the springs. Miss Barbara Ham of New York, who will be married in Phoenix on Feb. 9 to Duncan Arnold of Chicago, was a recent visitor. Romaine Lowdermilk, a colorful character of the old west and well known to Chicagoans, is in charge of the stables this year.

Another oasis near Phoenix is Ingleside inn. The cottages at the inn are almost completely hidden by the orange groves, which were the first to be planted in Paradise valley. Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wood arrived on Saturday to remain for the season. Their daughter, Mrs. Genero Florez, and her two children, Jean and Jerry, are with them. Mr. Florez will arrive later in the month. Other Chicagoans who are spending the winter at the inn are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ketcham.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Howard arrived Tuesday for a few days' visit with Bruce Barton before going to Camelback inn, where they will spend the winter.

It would take either a fairy's wand or a magician or just a couple of ingenious parents to produce such a lovely wedding on such short notice as that of Ruth Carolyn Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Henry Johnson, to William Horsting Jr. of Wilmette. The engagement was announced last month in Chicago, but it was only a week ago that the couple decided to be married immediately, for Ensign Horsting has received his notice to report for duty soon. The wedding will take place today at 4 o'clock in Trinity cathedral, Phoenix.

The Johnsons arrived in Phoenix a week ago and Ruth Carolyn arrived by plane on the 16th from Mexico City, where she was a bridesmaid at the wedding of a school friend. Also arriving on the 16th, but from Chicago, were the bridegroom, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Horsting Sr., Frederick Lind, and the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Henry Johnson.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Northwestern university. Since his graduation he has been associated with his father in the oil business and has been in the San Antonio office. The bride will wear a silver beige afternoon dress with brown accessories and a powder blue hat, and a corsage of cymbidium orchids. Her two sisters, Shirley Ann and Walta Jane, will be bridesmaids. They will wear afternoon dresses of powder blue, with small brown feather hats and corsages of blue iris and yellow and brown Peruvian lilies, Shirley Ann is in Phoenix for the winter and Walta Jane is a student at the University of Arizona. Mrs. Johnson's gown will be of light blue wool, and she will wear a pink and dubonnet feather hat. The best man is Frederick Lind of Wilmette and the ushers are Lauren Driesbach and John Nairn of Phoenix.

The bridal dinner was last night at the Jokake inn. Following the wedding a small reception will be held in the bride's home. Ensign and Mrs. Horsting will leave immediately after the reception for an automobile trip thru the south.

Guests from Chicago who are now at the Flying V ranch near Tucson enjoyed an all day horseback trip into the Catalina mountains to the ancient landmark at the crest known as "the window." The trail up from the ranch dates from the old Spanish days. Among the venturesome ones who made the strenuous 32 mile trip were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Freytag of Evanston, and the Tom Leemings of Highland Park.

When Chicago Was Young

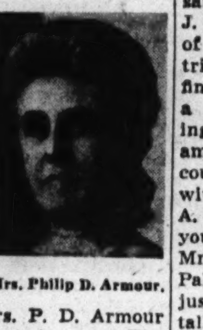
By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Jan. 18, 1894.

Dear Julia:

I have not felt quite well, the past 10 days, a stubborn cold having kept me housed almost a week, and I attended only one of the many receptions to which I have been invited in that time. I wasn't really fit to go to Mrs. P. D. Armour's tea, but I couldn't bear to miss the fine affair she gave, assisted by her two lovely daughters-in-law, Mrs. P. D. Armour Jr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour. The reception was one of the most brilliant of the winter, not only in point of numbers present, but also because of the elaborate decoration of the house, which looked beautiful. The great mansion at 2115 Prairie avenue was filled with flowers, palms, potted plants and ferns, so that it gave an impression of lavish tropic growth.



Mrs. Philip D. Armour.

Mrs. Armour received in the drawing room, which was decorated with Easter lilies. The dining room and music room were equally gorgeous in bridesmaid roses, while the somewhat somber library was brightened with American Beauty roses, in various places. The tea table was a lovely sight, the shining silver service reflecting the pink roses placed in the center. The fashionable south side set was well represented. Among the ladies I saw pouring tea were Mrs. C. D. Hamill, Mrs. Byron L. Smith, Mrs. Frank Billings, Mrs. William B. Walker and Mrs. Simeon B. Chapin.

• • •

I must apprise you of the fact that I had a new dress for the occasion, and tho I felt that Weeks, our fashionable man dressmaker, did very well by me, it couldn't compare with the exquisite gown worn by our hostess. Mrs. Armour's dress was of heliotrope satin, the bodice richly embroidered in lilacs, and trimmed with point lace. The skirt was perfectly plain. Mrs. P. D. Armour Jr., blonde and beautiful, wore pink satin, trimmed with chiffon, and with black satin ribbons on the sleeves. Mrs. J. Ogden Armour wore a Worth gown of corn color satin, elaborately trimmed in priceless lace. She has fine taste in dress. The reception was a great crush, over 600 guests having been invited. I saw many friends, among them Mrs. Henry Blair, who could make a graven image laugh with her witty stories; Mrs. Ernest A. Hamill, another most entertaining young matron; Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. John B. Drake, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. M. D. Wells; these are just a few of the lovely friends I talked with.

We are invited to a soirée this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. A. Healy, who live not far from us, on Ontario street, and I think that, in spite of my cold, I should have gone, if I could get Will out. But he says he's getting too old for evening parties and he was most solicitous about my cold, welcoming it, I think, as an excuse for staying in. The Healys are such delightful people and have such a fund of anecdotes, from their foreign residence, that it's a treat to be with them. I must call there soon.

• • •

But Will and I shall have a nice evening together, sitting by the fire, and taking turns in reading aloud from a book of poetry which he brought me the other day. It is just out, a second edition, I think, of a book I remember seeing years ago, compiled by Schaff and Gilman, and is called "A Library of Poetry for Sunday Reading." The one I saw years ago was called "A Library of Religious Poetry," which seems much like this new book. Thinking you'd enjoy possessing the volume, I have ordered it today from A. C. McClurg's book store for you. Longfellow, Browning, Miss Muloch, Alice and Phoebe Cary, Lucy Larcom, Mrs. Hemans, Tennyson, all are represented, and the selections are admirable. I hope you'll enjoy it.

Because of my cold, we're missing a fine entertainment in the Union Park Congregational church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Union Aid Society of the west side, proceeds to benefit the Foundlings' home on Wood street, founded by dear old Dr. Shipman. On the sponsoring committee are our friends, Mrs. Thomas Kane, Mrs. R. L. Greenlee and Mrs. Mathilda B. Carse, so we took tickets, tho we had to give them away. Genevra Johnstone Bishop, famous soprano, is to sing. Katharine Knowles will recite. Both are charming. And now, with much love, I close. Lovingly, MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

The beautiful home of P. D. Armour at 2115 Prairie avenue has been torn down and the space is occupied by a parking lot.

Can any reader tell us what became of the Ladies' Union Aid society of the west side, which sponsored a concert for the benefit of the Foundling's home? The home is still doing splendid work in its old building on Wood street.

Attic Treasures.

The exhibit in one window of Mabel Schamberg's exhibit on North Michigan avenue, during the Interior Decorators' convention in Chicago last week, contained some treasures of ye editor's . . . a bamboo easel; a crayon portrait of a child of the 80's; and a plush album, a present from a reader of this column. In Oak Park, where "Bustles and Bangs" was heard by the Sorosis club, we were promised a decorated shovel of the 80's. Giving these monologs of the 80's before the Tea Cup circle, in the home of Mrs. Abram Gale in Oak Park, we saw many of her treasures, among them a bed quilt, quilted in the most elaborate fashion of any we have ever examined. Advertising cards have been offered in great numbers and we thank all the readers who wrote us. Charles A. Mohr, 4510 West Harrison street, writes that he has five scrapbooks, filled with cards dating from 1881.

The Keepsake.

Again we remind you of the "Victorian Keepsake," which you all will want, when you see it. It is a grand Valentine's day gift, and you will be blessed by the person, man or woman, you favor with this small volume. Price, 50 cents, at the Tribune Public Service office, plus 5 cents, if ordered by mail. Save by buying in club rates; if 10 or more copies are bought, the price is 40 cents a copy, plus 3 cents for handling charge, if sent by mail.

City Women "All Out" in Rodent Drive

By Irene Steyskal.

The sturdy spirit of the farmer's wife, chasing the mice with the carving knife, looms up this week in the home defense picture. Lucky the rodent that escapes with no more damage than a bobbed tail when the modern city sisters of the nursery rhyme character launch the major rat elimination offensive for which they are preparing.

A campaign against rats has been in progress for three years in this area, promoted by the Woman's City Club of Chicago in coöperation with other civic groups. The fight has been waged more or less sporadically, and with varying degrees of success, in several Chicago communities, one notable skirmish being that carried on in the 19th ward, where rats, disheartened, are in full retreat before Mrs. Walter G. Hedrick and her clean streets and alleys committee from the Ridge Civic council.

• • •

Mrs. Hedrick, a member of the Beverly Hills Woman's club, is a music teacher whose interests, ordinarily, are directed toward the higher things of life. The presence of rats in her Beverly Hills community was highly offensive to her sensibilities. She rallied a committee of clubwomen and led them on inspection tours of the alleys. In her customary round of musical lectures she began interspersing suggestions for garbage disposal and information on rat elimination.

The situation had an element of humor that was missed neither by the speaker nor her audiences, and the fame of Mrs. Hedrick's war on rats spread to other communities. She has been inundated with requests to explain to other interested organizations her methods for eradication.

Mrs. John Sharpless Fox. [Du Bois Photo.]

Now that the country is at war, the conservation of food and property becomes a greatly important issue. Surveys show that rats destroy millions of dollars' worth of property every year, and they are, of course, a potential health hazard. With the purpose of furthering the civilian defense effort, the clean city committee of the Woman's City club, with Mrs. John Sharpless Fox as acting chairman, is making the first move tomorrow toward what it hopes will become an all-out offensive in the local war with the rodents.

Representatives of the city government and its department and officials of suburban towns have been invited to meet with the clean city committee members at 2 o'clock tomorrow at 410 South Michigan avenue to hear an address on "What Other Localities Are Doing on Rat Control" by G. C. Oderkirk, district agent for predator and rodent control of the department of the interior. The committee will talk over with the visitors the question of what might be done to set up an effective, coördinated plan of rodent control.

• • •

On another home defense front the Cook county League of Women Voters, taking new impetus from the declaration of war policy recently issued by the emergency council of the national league, is arranging for a large forum meeting at 2 o'clock Tuesday in league headquarters, 225 North Michigan avenue, to discuss "Price Control." J. K. Langum, director of research of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who formerly was a member of the University of Minnesota department of economics faculty, will speak and will answer questions after his address.

One of three meetings scheduled for Friday is to be a study class on "Labor and Defense" at 2:30 o'clock under the leadership of Mrs. Herbert Spiegel, a local attorney. Labor's responsibilities will be taken up at this session.

• • •

The Women's Advertising Club of Chicago has invited four members of the Chicago Defense Commission to speak at a dinner meeting Tuesday in the Cordon club, 410 South Michigan avenue. Arthur E. Canty, supervisor for the metropolitan area, will talk on "Plans for Civilian Defense"; Mary Mark, consumer relations division, will discuss "Consumer Defense"; Mrs. Frank Hixon, publicity chairman for the Service Men's Center, will tell the women of "Recreation for Service Men," and the Rev. J. Walter Malone will speak on "Our Spiritual Defense."

The interest of clubwomen thruout the country will be focused this week on Washington, D. C., where the General Federation of Women's Clubs opens its board of directors' midwinter meeting and national defense forums. Before her departure for the capital Mrs. William T. Bruckner, Illinois director on the board, will conduct a national defense meeting of her state department at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning in federation headquarters, 30 West Washington street. Mrs. Bruckner is chairman of national defense for the Illinois federation.

YW Education Workshop Will Stress Economy

As a contribution toward wartime economy, the Education Workshop of the Loop Center YWCA, 59 East Monroe street, will open a special daytime course in consumer education for the housewife on Monday, Jan. 26. Classes will be held from 2:30 to 4 o'clock each Monday. A course will be offered at the same time in interior decoration, stressing economy, budgeting and the use of odds and ends.

Tomorrow the arts and crafts studio of the "Y" will place on exhibit the hobby collections and handicraft of its members, and the public will be admitted without fee from 5 to 10 o'clock each night thru Friday.

Miss Lucille Mae Lyons and Lieut. Dan Lee Smith, whose engagement is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Lyons of Libertyville. Lieut. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emery Smith of Riverside, has been in Chicago on a brief leave of absence from his duties with the Army Air corps. He recently completed his training at Kelly field, San Antonio, Tex. No wedding date is set. Miss Lyons attended the University of Illinois and her fiance is a graduate of Knox college. He went to the law school at Northwestern university for two years.

Season On in Miami Beach in Spite of War

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

Two things have happened in the last seven days to prove definitely that "the season" is on in Miami Beach, war or no war. In fact, the war is partly responsible for both. Most amazing was the attendance on opening day at Hialeah Park, when a crowd of 16,533 broke all records for opening day, with some 300 more than the previous record year of 1940, and 1,500 more than last year. With Santa Anita closed, it looks like a big year for the other leading winter track, Hialeah Park.

Another occasion that proved even more brilliant than expected was the Red Cross ball. Reservations were closed at four hundred, but hosts arrived bringing extra guests until the final count was almost six hundred, and the nearly $10,000 made that one evening was almost half the $25,000 quota of Miami Beach in the war relief fund drive. Joseph E. Widener, chairman of the board of Hialeah Park, was host in his box opening day to his granddaughter, Mrs. George Eustis Paine Jr., Mrs. Edwina E. Wetherill, George H. Bull, and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Clark. As president, Mr. Clark presided at a luncheon given in the Hialeah club for directors and wives, the group including Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright. Mrs. Wright wore on her lapel her often admired miniature of Whirlaway, pride of the Calumet stable.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt [Sonny] Whitney were luncheon hosts, and so were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Clark who were hosts to Mr. and Mrs. William Atwill Jr., and Col. and Mrs. William V. Andrews, just returned from Honolulu. Dr. and Mrs. William T. Gilman entertained George Ade and Mrs. E. Mead Johnson of Evansville, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Clark entertained a group including Howard Hawks, movie director, and his bride, who have been house guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Simms Kelly, better known as Brenda Frazier and Shipwreck. Mrs. Otto Neumann, the former Barbara Shaffer of Chicago, and Mr. Neumann were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Reynolds Jr. of New York.

Other Chicago luncheon hosts included Mr. and Mrs. Peter T. Potts and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Young. Chicago also was well represented at the Red Cross ball, where Judy Garland delighted guests by singing "Over the Rainbow," accompanied by her husband, Dave Rose. Joan Crawford also was present. Both movie stars were vacationing in Miami Beach and were dinner guests at the ball. Mr. and Mrs. David J. Molloy attended with George Cooley Gordon, vice president of the Bath club, and Mrs. Gordon. Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright were with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Small Moore, their companions at neighboring thorobred breeding farms in Kentucky, on cruises near Miami Beach and at the races, and Dr. John Oliver La Gorce of Washington, for whom a street, golf course, and island in Miami Beach are named, and Mrs. La Gorce.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Clark entertained Surf club friends, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Hammons, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin P. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lowry Wall, and Mrs. Dewitt Page. Mrs. Page and her late husband, one of the founders of the Surf club, gave some of the most spectacular parties ever held at Miami Beach. The last one, at which Clyde Beatty was to perform his lions, was called off because of Mr. Page's death. Mrs. Page now lives quietly here in winter on board her yacht Maemere, which bears the same name as her famous racing stable. Mr. and Mrs. George E. Crandell also attended. They are occupying their new home on La Gorce Island.

Another Red Cross benefit will be staged today with an exhibition golf match at the new course on Normandy Isle, when Gene Sarazen and Tommy Armour play against Craig Wood and Frank Walsh. Society has joined hands with the sporting colony to assure success. The match is sponsored by Louis H. Brush, widely known Ohio newspaper publisher, who with Mrs. Brush is occupying a suite in the Surf club guest house. Mrs. Frank J. Bruen, widow of the late partner of Tex Rickard, is general chairman of the committee assisting Mr. Brush. Her committee includes Mrs. E. Battelle Offutt. Mr. and Mrs. Britton I. Budd arrived Thursday for a stay at the Versailles.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Sullivan of Norwich, Conn., received his degree from the University of Notre Dame.

The Daughters of Isabella Plan Members Drive

With 1,000 new members as its goal, the Chicago archdiocesan group of the Daughters of Isabella will open its annual membership drive at a general assembly at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night, Jan. 28, in the Palmer House. Mrs. Sarah Ann Peterson, national director and regent of the state circle, will direct the campaign in Illinois.

The Daughters of Isabella are organized chiefly for charity, and their philanthropies cover a wide field. One of their many pledges in the interest of education is the raising of a $100,000 burse for the National Catholic School of Social Service in Washington, D. C. Plans for completing that fund in 1942 will be discussed at the forthcoming meeting.

Clubwomen Will Preview Annual Fashion Seminar

Chicago clubwomen are to have a preview Friday of the annual fashion seminar conducted by Mrs. A. E. Webster at the Palmer House. The special showing has been arranged as a benefit for the South Shore center of the Infant Welfare and the Mary Crane league, whose members are taking blocks of tickets. Since women want to know what materials will be available under a wartime economy, and what modish, but practical, styles are being developed to meet the needs of the day, the seminar this year is being fitted to a "nation in war" pattern. Gray flannel suits made from a milk product, and shady sun hats of wood fiber will be among the articles on exhibit.

Life Is Rich in the Capital of Banana Land

By Anson Brown.

QUIRIGUA, GUATEMALA.

Once I wrote that in the tropics anything will grow—except ambition. At that time I was referring to the South seas, but now, after many more months of tropical tramping, I know that that statement will amply cover the situation in any humid, tropical clime.

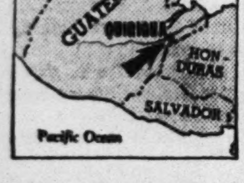
I've parched in Puerto Rico, roasted in Tunisia, baked in Colon. Steaming in Quirigua isn't much different.

It gets you, too—gets you if you're tired of elevated trains, pigeons at the office window sill, tragic headlines in the newspapers.

Here are bursting, brilliant flowers I've never seen before, fruits so sweet I could only dream of such flavor, strange birds that chant new melodies.

Then just try and sit at the typewriter and do a little work. But the ambition is gone. So take note of all that is going on around; a new blue in the sky, perhaps; the early morning wetness of the grass, the countless small umbrella ants that are carrying from the highest branches of a tree tiny yellow leaves on which they feed in their subterranean home. It's all new, and strange, and fascinating.

• • •



Quirigua is only two hours from Puerto Barrios, where most Americans first glimpse Guatemala. Board the wheezing train at 8 o'clock on any morning, hot and sizzling. Two hours later you're in the midst of some of the most glamorous green banana country in the world. It was only a brief span ago that the railroad's passengers often saw jungle cots of Central America snarling at them as they sped by. But the cats couldn't take it; they've fled toward Honduras.

Quirigua is the main seat of the fruit company's operations in Guatemala, and the overseer is a tall, handsome Errol Flynn looking Scotsman, Mr. Clark. Five minutes later you're calling him Ed. Ed's petite wife is Wanda from Missouri. Their two robust youngsters, speaking Spanish all mixed up with their English, complete the setting as tho lifted from a Hollywood studio.

• • •

The fruit company's guesthouse is on the side of a hill near the splendid American hospital with a nine hole golf course, for even the Americans, like the English, carry some of their traditions with them to foreign lands. [I hasten to add, tho, that the sticky English idea of wearing a tuxedo for dinner in the tropics never gained foothold with the Americans.]

The upper veranda, rambling around two sides of the guesthouse, looks high out over the hundreds of acres of bananas, straight to the west, where the far mountains of Honduras loom. It was here that Ed, Wanda, and I spent pleasant afternoons drinking tea cooled by huge hunks of ice from glasses that dripped in the humidity, while Ed told of the Mayan Indians and the mystery of the nearby ruins of Quirigua.

• • •

In the back yard is the children's zoo. Young Jon and Juahita have two pigs which because of childish love will never be turned into pork chops and gravy. There is a monkey, Mono the Nasty, always covered with ants. There are Peter, the white rabbit that plays with the dogs; Wilkie, the tejon [something like a possum]; Albert, the alligator, and Ooey, the snake. Also there are Gobbles and Goebels, the turkeys.

"We had Hitler for dinner on Thanksgiving," said Jon. "He got drunk before he died. Mother and Daddy couldn't catch him, so they fed him bread soaked in rum till he couldn't run any more. Then Daddy chopped off his head. Best tasting turkey we ever had, too!"

What can you tell me about the Columbus cathedral in Havana, Cuba? —L. R. A.

The so-called Columbus cathedral, consecrated to St. Christopher, admirably completes the square which bears its name. Altho it does not have great architectural value, its front of native limestone is a good example of the Spanish Baroque. The interior basilica, formed of three naves, has a certain majesty. The main altar, with a tabernacle of porphyry, supported by eight Corinthian columns, and the choir stalls of carved mahogany are noteworthy. A wreath near the main altar marks the spot where the remains of the discoverer rested before being taken to Spain in 1898. Among the treasures of the cathedral is a superb monstrance of gold and silver, set with emeralds. The basilica was constructed by the Jesuit fathers in 1741.

1941 Biggest in Florida History, Says Official

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—The year 1941 was the best from a financial point of view ever enjoyed by the hotels, apartment houses, and restaurants of Florida. This was reported today by State Hotel Commissioner Hunter G. Johnson, following a statewide tour.

"I am referring to the industry as a whole," Johnson said, "and my statement is based upon reports made by the owners and managers of hotels, apartments, rooming houses, and restaurants who were interviewed as I traveled. Figures for comparison with former years were not available, but the general tendency of those vitally interested was to say that 1941 was a banner year and that receipts were well ahead of any year in the past.

"While last winter's business was above par, the summer patronage developed in 1941 was so far ahead of any former summer that the total for the 12 month period was well above any like period.

"What 1942 has in store for Florida in the way of vacationists is, at the moment, problematical. The season opened with bright prospects and I found many among hotel and restaurant people who continue to believe that, in spite of the fact that the country is at war, Florida will enjoy a good tourist season. This belief is based upon the fact that winter visitors continue to pour into the state. There have been some cancellations of reservations, and a few visitors who came early are going home."

The Voice of the Traveler

Letters regarding travel conditions and experience are welcomed. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

KEEP 'EM ROLLING.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 12.—To the Travel Editor: Despite tire and motor car priorities, we people of St. Petersburg feel that thousands of American families will want to get away for rest and recreation some time this winter.

So, instead of cancelling all or any part of our long schedule of sports and entertainment events, we are going ahead with the program we arranged last fall. We believe that in so doing we shall not interfere with the defense program in any way, but that, on the contrary, we shall be contributing to the national morale so essential to the successful prosecution of the war.

Let's keep 'em rolling and flying!

JOHN LODWICK.

225 Mile Trip Thru Jungles Takes 2 Days

[This is the 29th article of a series on South America. The next will appear in an early issue.]

By Mason Warner.

PORTO VELHO, BRAZIL. Tho only 225 miles long, the journey over the Brazilian jungle railway from Guajara Mirim to Porto Velho requires two days. The train makes one round trip a week. The track is narrow gauge, 39 inches, and the small engine burns wood for fuel.

Our train consisted of the engine, a flat car to carry fuel, four boxcars, one combination mail and express car, and a passenger coach, with a middle partition to separate first and second class. The freight consisted of Brazil nuts, rubber, and hides.

The train was not scheduled to start until 11 a. m., but at 10 o'clock the coach was so crowded that we could not get seats. Young Mason and I stood while the cars were shunted back and forth at the station.

One dear old lady, attracted our attention. She had a countless array of bags and bundles alongside her, on the opposite seat, and in the rack overhead. Clustered about were a dozen sons and daughters, grandchildren, and inlaws. Her eyes were welling with tears; wet handkerchiefs, stifled sobs, and plaintive sighs were much in evidence in the group surrounding her to say good-by. It was a sad parting.

• • •

When the engine finally blew its warning blast, three-fourths of the people in the coach rushed for the doors. It appeared that they were just enjoying their weekly joyride while the switching to make up the train was done. Only six women and five men remained as passengers, and there were plenty of seats and room for all.

The train made slow time — not more than 15 miles an hour—and stopped at every section house along the line. These were about four miles apart, and each sheltered and fed a gang of 10 or 15 men who daily fought the encroachment of jungle growth on the right of way and kept the tracks in repair.

At the second stop, the old lady gathered up her many bags and bundles, and a trainman assisted her to alight. A man with an oxcart was awaiting her. Off they drove into the forest. We had figured, from the touching farewell and the amount of her baggage, that she was going on a long journey.

Then we recalled that this was the only railroad in an area of tens of thousands of square miles, and that travel by rail is a real adventure to the natives.

• • •

The train traveled 95 miles the first day and reached a little hamlet of four or five houses at 6 p. m. A simple meal of meat, rice, and macaroni was served at the railway hotel. It tasted good, because there was no dining car on the train and no lunch room on the way.

About 2 o'clock an Indian boarded the train with pineapples for sale. I never saw one like the one we bought for 5 cents. It was 12 inches high, and 5 inches in diameter at the base, with a flat top 4 inches across. Altho a bright green in color, it was ripened to perfection and was delicious in flavor, rich, juicy, and sweet.

We slept on cots in the hotel and were glad indeed we had our mosquiteros with us. We fell asleep under the canopies while myriads of mosquitoes hummed with indignation at being barred out.

• • •

Our train got under way at 8 a. m. the next day, starting early because we had 130 miles to go. While the ride thru the dense jungle lacked variety in scene, it was not monotonous.

We crossed many swamps on low trestles and wound roundabout between low hills, but always the narrow right of way was edged by crowded trees with either parasitic vines or fungus growth.

All the jungle seemed to be decaying or dying, except where here and there a tall mahogany tree reared its proud head. Fern trees 30 to 40 feet high spotted relieving touches to the dejected view. The air was damp and smelled feverish.

The few birds and butterflies in the air reminded us only of fever carrying mosquitoes and other enemies of man—deadly snakes, crocodiles, jaguars—lurking in swamp and jungle.

As we rode on slowly it was easy to picture the toil and suffering of the men who built that railroad. "Each crosstie resting upon a human skull" took on its true significance.

• • •

The second attempt to build the railroad succeeded in 1912. The road was operated by a North American group until 1914, and then sold to a British corporation. In 1932 it was bought by the Brazilian government, which now runs it. How the enterprise can ever be made to pay its cost of operation is a problem. Freight is limited in volume; so is passenger traffic, and rates and fares are amazingly low.

Our train was not due at Porto Velho until 6 p. m. Two hours before we arrived the women began to freshen up. The primitive coach had no running water nor wash basin. So they made the best of their situations by applying rouge and powder, lipstick and mascara, after polishing nails and plucking eyebrows in full view of an interested male audience. They really accomplished wonders under the circumstances.

The train was met at the station by at least half the population of Porto Velho. A porter grabbed our bags, put them on a wheelbarrow, and started for the only hotel in town.

• • •

The porters of South America have a legalized monopoly for the transportation of tourists' baggage, with rates fixed by law. When we arrived at the hotel, the porter demanded 40 milreis [about $2] for his 15 minutes' work. As I knew the rate of pay for common labor in that locality was 10 or 12 milreis a day, I protested his charge.

He refused to understand me, but wrote 40$000 on a bit of paper and handed it to me. Then I placed my hand on his shoulder and said: "Police. Come!" He understood that. We finally compromised on 15$000 [75 cents], for he apparently did not care to submit his demand to the police.

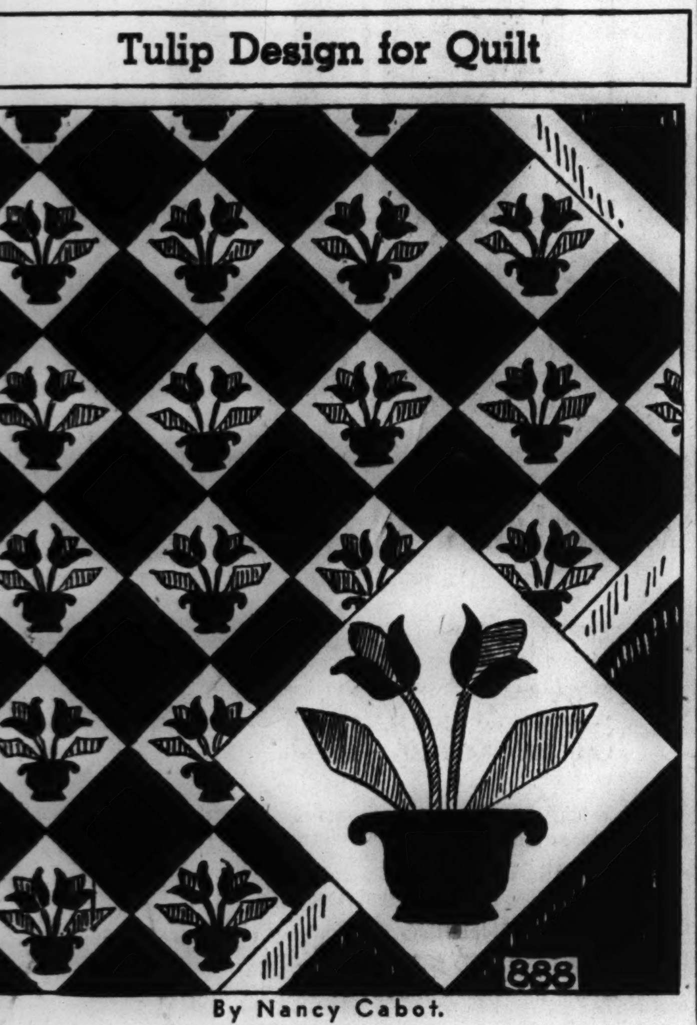
Tulip Design for Quilt



By Nancy Cabot.

Tulips are one of the favorite floral motifs for quilt designs, and this "Basket of Tulips" patchwork is no exception. The blocks are easy to set together. The original was created in two shades of yellow for the tulips, green for the leaves and stems, and blue for the baskets. In utilizing scraps from the quilt bag, plaid baskets may be made most effectively.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the quilt, "Basket of Tulips," No. 888, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Arizona Offers Its Climate for Defense Work

By Lolita Linn.

Arizona may be the baby state of the union, but she has no intention of taking a minor rôle in the defense effort. That was the impression of this traveler this winter.

Of course, Arizona takes for granted that four of her five "C's"—copper, cattle, cotton, and citrus—will be essentials in the war economy. She is sure that her sheep that summer in her high pastures and winter on the desert will provide big bags of wool for the nation. She takes pride in her vast reservoir of natural resources waiting, it would almost seem, in limitless patience for this very moment.

But she has a fifth and highly important "C"—climate. And this season we found her people asking about the importance of climate in an all-out war effort.

• • •

One of climate's functions in modern war was already evident. Out on the desert, where the air is clear and the sunshine sure, embryo pilots were spending long hours in the air.

But the feeling is real in Arizona that her climate may have an even greater contribution to make to war effort. When tasks are heavy and nerves are strained, there must be some place where people can find relaxation and renewed purpose to "get on with it."

That state has long been known to her admirers as a place where cares fall away and where tired minds and bodies find rest and resiliency in a surprisingly short space of time. Her dry, sunny climate does its full share in this healing work. But there is something besides climate that prohibits hysteria and steadies the mind. There is a vastness in her eye-stretching distances—an impersonality in her shadowed mountains, her twisted sahuaros, and her towering pines that forbid too great preoccupation with the small affairs of men.

• • •

It is doubtful if even those who think of Arizona as a vacation home are fully aware of her vastness or of her variety. The area is 113,956 square miles. Yuma is the lowest point, 137 feet above sea level; San Francisco peaks, near Flagstaff, the highest, 12,611 feet. The state is 42 per cent desert, 25 per cent grassland, 33 per cent forest. There are 17 areas of scenic, scientific, or historic interest designated as national monuments. Eight national forests cover a combined total of more than 11½ million acres. The largest virgin pine forest in the world is to be found there.

There are 17 Indian reservations, covering 20 million acres. The four highest reclamation dams in the world are Boulder, Roosevelt, Coolidge, and Bartlett—all in that state. About 660,000 acres are under irrigation.

• • •

And so it goes. Arizona's statistics are as breathtaking as her scenery. All the visitor knows as he looks from the window of his speeding train at the limitless desert stretches and the encircling mountains is that he has come again to a country where he can take a deep, full breath—where he can gather strength and courage for the effort remaining.

Portraits of Military Men on Exhibition

By Eleanor Jewett.

One of the interesting and timely exhibits in town this month is that of military portraits by Joseph P. Nash at the Chicago Galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. The series was started some 15 months ago, and the artist has this to say about it:

"The portraits, which represent a racial cross-section of the army and proceed in rank from the least of selectees [Mah Woy, timid little Chinese laundryman] to genial Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Cummins, have a definite purpose behind them. The group was planned to serve as a morale builder for the ROTC units in this army corps area. The idea is to present to our soldiers of the future typical officers under whom they may serve as young officers, and at the same time show them the type of men they may command in the difficult days which lie ahead.

"The officers chosen for graphic presentation are those who enjoy the respect and loyalty of the men under them to an impressive degree. The enlisted men and noncommissioned officers were chosen as unusually fine soldiers. They have fine military records. The portraits were made under the most difficult conditions. Most of the drawings were made after the subjects had finished a hard day's work in their respective capacities; all of the men being much too busy to give time during the day when both they and the artist might have been fresh. Barracks, mess halls, hangars, and busy executive offices served as impromptu studios; cold and noise and bad lighting figured as extra handicaps. The one redeeming feature was the unfailing courtesy of the officers under all circumstances. The experience," Mr. Nash concludes, "was a very interesting and pleasant one."

From the Chicago Galleries the portrait drawings [they are done in red crayon] will go the last of January to Purdue university and then to other universities, schools, and military academies having ROTC units.

An exhibition of paintings by Myrtle Wittchen, sponsored by the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts, is current in the Mezzanine gallery, Drake hotel, to Jan. 31. It is a pleasant show, diversified in subject. Mrs. Wittchen comes from Hammond, Ind., where she is the secretary of the Hammond Painters and Sculptors league. She has painted in Indiana and Illinois and in Michigan, having studied at Saugatuck and at the artists' colony in Nahma, Mich.

Among the attractive studies in still life, "Ye Olde Mustache Kuppe" probably takes the prize for title, but you will find much to like in the beautifully handled "Wedgewood Platter," "Wooden Bowl and Fruit," and "Plaster of Paris and Ivy." "Pussy Willows" and "Jonquils" are attractive, and among the interesting landscapes it would be hard to miss "Dune Acres," "Just a Wee Cottage," and the well done [loaned] "Our Alley."

From Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis., comes news about an exhibit of drawings and paintings of the American native scene, middle western life on the farm, and in the small town by William A. McCloy. Mr. McCloy is on the staff of the art department at the University of Wisconsin.

Antonin Sterba, Chicago portrait painter, and Mrs. Sterba, who is an accomplished harpist, have taken a studio apartment at 4 East Ohio street. Their son is a lieutenant with the 108th Engineers [combat]. Mr. and Mrs. Sterba spent the summer at Monterey and Carmel, Cal.

Paintings by Medard Klein are on view to Jan. 31 at the Paul Theobald gallery, suite 300, 5 North Wabash avenue.

The Society for Contemporary American Art of the Art Institute of Chicago opened its second annual exhibit last Tuesday in gallery 53 of the Art institute. One recognizes several of the paintings as having been previously seen in the American Paintings and Sculpture exhibition on view this fall at the museum. Among the notable pictures are "Storm Clouds," by Charles P. Killgore; "Saturday's Child," by Nicola Ziroli; "Sun Bather," by George Grosz; "Hibiscus Blossoms," by Clay Bartlett; "Inside the Church," by Laura Van Pappelendam; "This Ichnolite of Mine" [a dark romantic still life framed in such a way that it has an mazing likeness to a Russian ikon], by Ivan Le Lorraine Albright, and "Space Modulator CH 4," by L. Moholy-Nagy, a design on glass, decorative in color.

It is of interest to note that the society sponsoring this exhibit has 35 members who pay a nominal fee and have the right to choose any painting from any exhibition thruout the country for this annual display. The primary function of the organization is to provide a fund which the Art institute may use for the purchase of contemporary American painting and sculpture. The committee on painting and sculpture of the Art institute is the functioning force which has the right to select the work to be bought for the institute's permanent collection.

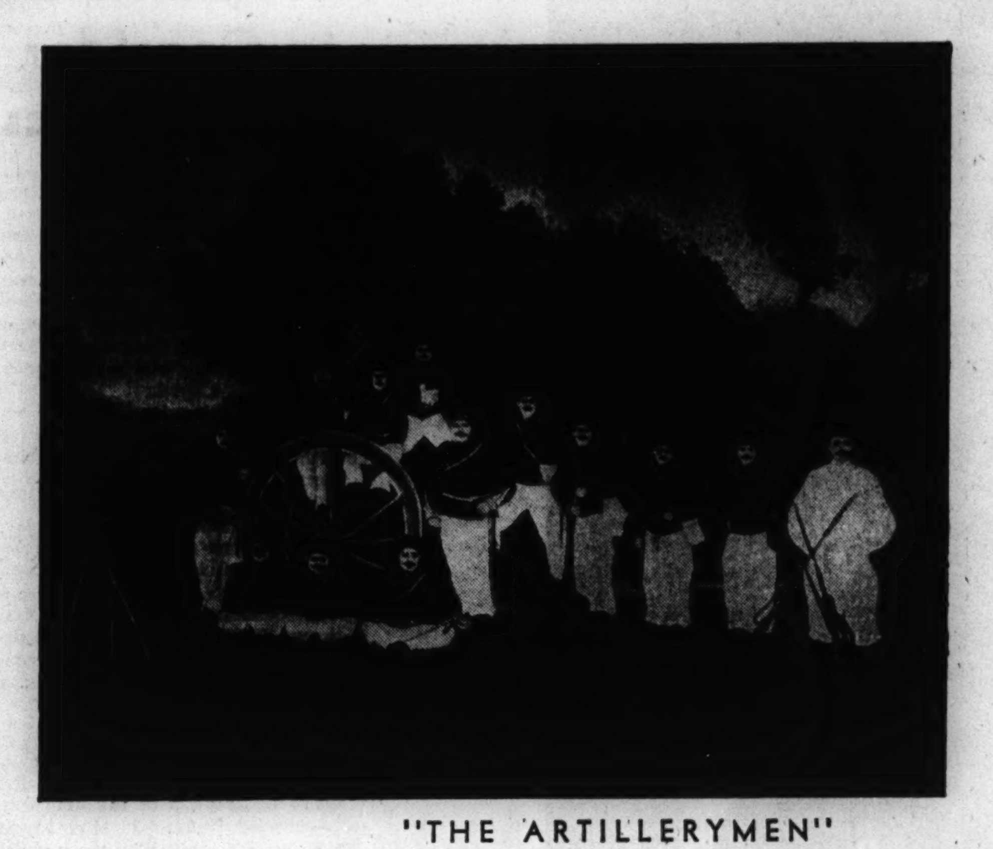
The Print and Drawing club of the Art institute, which has presented prints to the museum over a period of 20 years, is currently represented in the print galleries with an exhibit of those prints. Each year the members of the club receive a print as, perhaps one might call it, a token of membership. This year a splendid reproduction of a wood engraving by Gauguin, "Maruru—an Offering of Gratitude," has been distributed. A new gift of the society's to the institute is the "Page of Studies of a Young Woman," by Augustin de St. Aubin, from the famous H. P. Heseltine collection.

Charcoal drawings, big, alive, and vital, by Gene Frances, is another important show contributed this month to the institute by the print department. The drawings are of scenes in California and are well worth seeing.

Four exhibitions will open next Thursday in the East Wing galleries of the Art institute. The four constitute the winter shows. Chief among them is the comprehensive group of paintings by Henri Rousseau, which goes from us later in the season to the Museum of Modern Art in New York that helped to formulate it. A second exhibit is that of paintings by Karl Knaths, which will hang in gallery G57.

The exhibition of architecture by the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, demonstrating the achievements of local architects during the last 10 years [lean years and hard ones], will hang in galleries G58, G59, and G60.

Contemporary ceramics of the western hemisphere, chosen from the 10th national ceramic exhibit at the Syracuse museum, will be displayed in galleries G55 and G56.



"THE ARTILLERYMEN"

This amusing study of French soldiers is by Henri Rousseau, whose representative show opens next Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The exhibit is one of the important events of the winter.

[ADVERTISMENT]

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Wonderful

No Cooking. Very Easy. Saves Dollars

To get the most surprising relief from coughs due to colds, you can easily prepare a medicine, right in your own kitchen. It's very easy—a child could do it—needs no cooking, and tastes so good that children take it willingly. But you'll say it beats them all for quick results.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, and pour it into a pint bottle. Then add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of really splendid cough syrup—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and lasts a long time.

And for real, quick relief, it can't be beaten. It acts in three ways—loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 17. This week I've had many another intimate glimpse of styles-to-come in manufacturers' showrooms,—for the Midwest contributes its own share of fashion-ingenuity to the nation. And as in the East,—the story is the same. Fashions 1942 will lead us a double life . . . we'll become dissimilar twins of ourselves! We'll choose basically practical clothes for various service duties, but revert to all that is feminine and gallantly lighthearted in us with party and formal fashions that help set the heartbeat of morale. Yes,—from the tip of our toes to the crown of our heads, we'll become dual personalities . . . dressed in the two-way fashions which this war, like every other, demands. Watch for these signs-of-the-times in all types of BUY-LINES, and see to it that your budget permits you to indulge in the practical and necessary fashions for your workaday and "servaday" life . . . but permits you spirit-lifting fashions and accessories that bring a welcome relief from the grimness of these troublous days.

Social Events at Palm Beach on Small Scale

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Palm Beach continues to welcome new arrivals. There are plenty of parties and smart luncheons, but, to date, with the exception of the huge New Year's eve at the Everglades club, there have been no affairs of the usual Palm Beach magnitude. Patriotism continues to pulsate thruout the resort and colors with red, white, and blue all its activities.

The blackout last Sunday night transformed the communities of Palm Beach, West Palm Beach, Hobe Sound, and Lake Worth into four ink spots. Blackout parties were popular. For the most part coöperation was perfect, tho authorities had to turn out the lights of one resorter who had a personal feud with an air raid warden, and break a bulb in the hallway of one building where the light had been left on inadvertently.

As far as business is concerned, the season here isn't a blackout, but it is certainly no ball of fire. At the present writing Palm Beach seems to put into reverse the old axiom of champagne tastes and beer incomes. So far as champagne is concerned it remains tightly corked, in a horizontal position in a dark place, retaining its bouquet and sparkle—awaiting a more auspicious season.

Palm Beach never loses interest in clothes. Gloria Baker Topping looked unusually smart the other day at an Aid America luncheon. She wore a pajama ensemble of white rough crêpe. The tunic was gathered to a yoke, and yoke sleeves were outlined with a narrow piping of Kelly green. At each pocket was appliquéd a purple flower. Youthful Mrs. Topping wears her dark curly hair in a shoulder length bob.

Another lovely young woman is Mrs. Ritchey Farrell who looks particularly attractive in smart slack suits.

Mrs. Lincoln Ellsworth, wife of the famous explorer, comes down often from the fashionable Hobe Sound colony. Recently she wore an evening frock of gray chiffon, soft as a whisper, which featured intricate draping of the bodice. The skirt was snug fitting at the hips and very full at the hem.

Mme. Wellington Koo attended a luncheon just prior to her departure from Palm Beach, wearing a white brocaded mandarin coat with a dark skirt. Mme. Koo was hatless.

Recent arrivals include Mrs. William A. Yager of Chicago, who is occupying a suite at the Everglades club for the season. Jules Bache, New York art connoisseur, is at his villa, La Colmena. Joseph Kirk Love of Chicago is at the Breakers. The Princess Laura Rospigliosi and her two daughters, Francesca and Camilla, are guests of Mrs. Leonard Ettelson of Chicago at her villa on El Vedado lane. Philip Barry, the playwright, and Mrs. Barry are at Hobe Sound. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Dresselhuys of New York, accompanied by the daughter of Mrs. Dresselhuys, Lorraine Manville Gould, are occupying the penthouse at the Whitehall. Mrs. Dresselhuys is a sister of Tommy Manville. Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Lewis and two sons, Philip and Edward, have opened Villa Phil-Ed on Royal Palm way. Mr. and Mrs. William J. Moore also have arrived from Chicago. John Robert Powers, model impressario, and Mrs. Powers have taken an apartment on Worth avenue. Will Hays, movie czar, is expected in February to be the guest of John H. Perry, the publisher.

Since Wednesday, when the racing season opened, Palm Beach has had one foot in Hialeah. The drive down to Miami is a fascinating one whether you go on the mainland or on the ocean road. Many like to go by the ocean so as to pass thru those two long tunnels of Australian pines near Gulf Stream. The trees meet overhead, casting cool and restful shadows and afford pine filigreed glimpses of the sapphire sea. On the mainland the motorist goes thru Fort Lauderdale and passes Clyde Beatty's lion farm. Some six miles before reaching Fort Lauderdale the road passes between two buildings which are monuments to the late and lamented boom. Recently one of these has been reconditioned, but the other one remains in its pristine state of ruin, and looks, especially when you return from Hialeah at night, as a fit habitation for hoot owls, hob-goblins, and ha'nts in general.

Naomi Donnelley, daughter of the Thorne Donnelleys, tops the list of entries in the Sailfish club winter contest with an 8 foot 1½ inch sailfish, taking the lead in the junior contest. Naomi won a gold button for her catch. The Donnelley houseboat, Silver Wedding—the one with the paddle wheel and the pilot house—is anchored up at Hobe Sound.

A preview and tea on Thursday opened a new art exhibition at the Society of Four Arts, which is enjoying an unusually active season.

Joan Crawford of the movies came up from Miami Beach and had luncheon at the Breakers last Tuesday. Miss Crawford wore a very smart jacket dress of black crêpe printed with huge white flowers, and a silver fox cape. Her brown hair was in a lofty pompadour and a large black velvet bow took the place of a hat. Her little adopted daughter, Christine, a pretty blonde child of 4, who accompanied her, wore a white frock trimmed with lace and a coat of sheer navy blue wool.

The early part of the week cold descended upon Palm Beach like a wolf on the fold. It brought out sumptuous furs worn over slacks, and faces looked pinched. When it is cold in Florida it is a cruel penetrating sort of cold that has a psychological effect. The golfers enjoy the nippy days, and the sailfish bite when the weather is chill and the sea is rough.

PTA Conclave to Consider Health Topics

Foods for better health, meal planning, and the question of whether or not America is a well fed nation are some of the timely subjects to be covered by experts in nutrition and the medical field at a special conference on health and summer roundup which the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers will hold Tuesday in the Stevens hotel.

The morning session will be given to panel and group discussions of health problems, with A. H. Pritzlaff, director of physical education and health in the Chicago public schools, as discussion leader. Among the laymen taking an active part will be Mrs. Elmer Geissler of Joliet, who heads the state Parent-Teacher congress' committee on health; Mrs. Leonard H. Graf of Elmhurst, chairman of the summer roundup committee, and Mrs. G. O. Lindmark, a Chicago mother.

• • •

In the professional contingent, sitting in for the discussion, will be Dr. George L. Drennan of the American Academy of Pediatrics; Miss Leone Pazourek, state nutrition consultant; Dr. Lon W. Morrey, American Dental association; Miss Maude Langdon, Dr. Rollin E. Cutts, and Dr. Elizabeth Ball of the state department of public health.

In the afternoon Mrs. Geissler and Mrs. Graf will preside at separate round tables on health and summer roundup. The national defense program of the state congress calls for special emphasis on nutrition. Mrs. Geissler's round table will consider the question, "Is America Well Fed?", related subjects such as meal planning, food buying, food preparation, the right foods for better health, and the school lunch.

• • •

Since it was begun in 1925, the summer roundup has been the major health activity of the national and state congresses of parents and teachers. Its purpose is to arouse the interest of parents in checking up on the health of children entering school for the first time, and the bringing about of continuous medical and dental supervision of children of all ages. Mrs. Graf's round table will discuss means toward this end.

The record of the roundup committee shows that 11,800 children in Illinois were given physical examinations during the 1941 campaign. Illinois leads the states in the percentage of corrections made in the children examined. Results of the campaign included the vaccination of 4,450 children against smallpox, 4,251 inoculations against diphtheria, 355 against typhoid, and 521 tuberculin tests. Hundreds received attention for defective vision and hearing.

• • •

Coöperating agencies in the health roundup are the American Medical association, the Illinois state department of health, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the Illinois Education association, the Illinois Tuberculosis association, and the United States department of labor.

TOBEWED

Challengers' Club Will Begin Meetings Tomorrow

The Chicago Challenger's club will hold its first general meeting at 7:45 o'clock tomorrow night in the Skyline Athletic club, 188 West Randolph street. Organized by a group of modern grandfathers and grandmothers whose determination it is to remain young in mind and spirit, the club is dedicated to the pursuit of the contest hobby. Persons of all ages will be admitted to membership, says the president, Mrs. F. Jeanette Ball, the only requirement being that they be eager to participate in hobby contests.

Grandmothers Club.

The Grandmothers Club of Chicago will meet at 2 o'clock today in the Roosevelt room of the Morrison hotel to discuss ideas for its 1942 production of "Grandmothers' Follies." Committee chairmenships will be announced.

Immaculata Alumnae Will Hear Vanderbilt

Full Quota of Activities for Tucson Guests

TUCSON, ARIZ.

Up to now no one has accused the United States weather bureau of being subsidized by the Tucson Sunshine Climate club, but the publication of weather map No. 13 by the Department of Agriculture will probably raise some questions. According to that map, Tucson receives over 3,800 hours of sunshine per year, as against Chicago's 2,600. Tucson's quota of actinic hours is surpassed by no other city and is equalled by only one, Yuma. All this is a prelude to saying that the weather the last few days has been typical.

Today's program in the old Pueblo is a full one. This afternoon the Natural History society is sponsoring an excursion to Colossal cave, and underground wonderland so vast that even university geologists do not attempt to estimate the extent of its unexplored portions. While amateur and professional explorers try not to get lost in its labyrinthine fastnesses, open air baritones will attend the band concert and community sing at Armory park. And devotees of the cult of Little Joe the Wrangler will sit on corral rails at Kingsley's ranch for the rodeo, following which they eat, drink, and dance in the western manner at the frontier dance hall adjacent to the bucking chutes.

• • •

Last night a packed house of Tucsonians and visitors witnessed the final performances in the Little Theter's successful run of "The Women." Those who couldn't get in, plus several hundred others, saw the University of Arizona basketball team meet the Arizona State quintet in the university gymnasium.

The foregoing activities are of greater local interest, altho they are probably poorer copy than the fact that nimrods Gary Cooper and Robert Taylor were here two weeks ago en route to a rendezvous with big horn sheep across the border. Wednesday night Gary was back at the Santa Rita—Bob had hastened back to Hollywood by plane—swapping stories with Manager Nick Hall and Powder River Jack. But the Montanan is too much of a cowboy publicly to commit himself on the sheep situation, even in Sonora. Among Chicagoans at the Santa Rita who had an opportunity to see "Mr. Deeds" in the flesh was Mrs. Mabel L. Rein, who arrived last week to spend the season.

Tomorrow's arrivals at the hotel will include Miss Alma L. Galster of Chicago and Henri Milan and Dwight Hillis of Evanston. The latter two will spend the week visiting Robert White of Chicago, who has been at the Santa Rita for two months.

Mrs. Westbrook Pegler, her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jack Pegler, and her son, Westbrook Pegler II., have arrived in Tucson and are guests at Los Ranchos Perkins in the Catalina foothills pending completion of their ranch home in the Palo Verde district. Other guest ranch arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. Eugene L. Shaver of Chicago, who arrived by plane to spend the winter at the Bar B R, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Leeming of Highland Park who are at Rancho Grande in Nogales.

At El Conquistador, where Manager Charles Doherty will resume his famous Tuesday picnics this week, recent arrivals include Louis Nier of Chicago; the Albert G. Bryants of Oak Park, and Mrs. John S. Barnes of Rockford. Arriving at the Arizona Inn this week Mrs. Ralph W. Shaw of Chicago is planning a three week stay here.

Finishing their holiday vacation here, Mr. and Mrs. Pick Buckley of Winnetka are preparing to return home. Thorne Donnelley, one of the most popular Chicagoans in the old Pueblo, also has cut short his vacation to fulfill his duties as a reserve officer in the United States navy.
